195 The Indian expenditure exceeded the Budget by 7 9. The largest excesses were in Remittance Charges (6,0) and Special Commissions of Enquiry (3,5), but there were small variations explained below under all the heads. The excesses in each Province, which are shown in tabular form above, are generally inconsiderable. The largest occurs in the India column under the two heads just mentioned.

196. The extra expenditure on Remittance Charges was due partly to the lower balances with which the Treasuries had to work; the balances on the last day of November fell to 745 lakhs or 105 lakhs below our previously estimated minimum. The excess was however much more than covered by the increased receipts under the corresponding head of Revenue (Premium on Bills). The Budget grant was exceeded in most Provinces, but most largely in the Punjab (2,2), and Bombay (1,2), the two provinces which rendered the largest amount of help to the other parts of the Empire Part of the increase, however, was due to "Loss by Exchange on local transactions." The greater part of the increase in India and part (4) of the increase in the Punjab were due to such losses arising out of transactions in Bhopal (1,0), Indore (7), and Kabuli Rupees (4). Such transactions are admitted only where we are bound by treaty or contract to receive or pay these local Rupees or where business transactions are necessary, which can be carried on only in the local currency. Under Charitable Donations, in the Central Provinces a large amount was paid to Missions, etc., for the maintenance of destitute orphans made over to them by Government from Famine Relief Camps. In Bengal larger grants were made in 1895-96 to the Lady Canning's Home for teaching Nurses and for the purchase of land for a Leper Asylum. Under Petty Establishments the total expenditure only slightly exceeded the Budget, but there were variations requiring notice in Assam, Bengal, and the Punjab. In Assam the saving on the Budget and the actuals of the previous year was due to the transfer to the Public Works Department of the expenditure on rest-houses, with effect from 1st April 1896. In Bengal the increase occurred chiefly in the Khedda charges. In the Punjab the increase was chiefly in the Local Section. The charges under Special Commissions of Enquiry in India were on account of the Planters' Enquiry Committee and the Royal Commission on Indian Expenditure. In Bombay the expenditure was in connection with Mr. Kelkar's Commission. Under Irrecoverable Loans written off, the increase in the North-Western Provinces was due to the writing-off under the authority of the Government of India, Financial Department No. 3404P., dated 13th July 1897, of the balance (1,1) of the loan (1,7) granted to Raja Runbir Singh. Under Other Items the only points requiring notice are the large savings in the Punjab, due chiefly to the charges against the Provincial reserve of 5,0 under "Miscellaneous and unforeseen charges" having been taken in the accounts under the appropriate heads; the increase in Assam was on account of the refund of lapsed deposits, as noticed under XXV.—Miscellaneous (para. 1"2). In Upper Burma refunds of criminal fines imposed by Political Officers caused an excess of 7. The increase in Lower Burma was mainly due to the purchase of 300 copies of Stevenson's Anglo-Burmese Dictionary. In Bombay there was a special repayment of loans by two Local Boards.

197. The decrease in the English expenditure was partly on account of smaller payments in respect of stores lost in transit to India, and partly on account of the examination expenses of candidates for the Indian Civil Service having been much less than anticipated.

198. When the Budget for 1896-97 was framed there was no apprehension of scarcity, except in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, where 70,0 was provided, and in Bengal where a small provision of 5,0 was made. These two items represent the provision for direct Famine Relief; and 473,5 and 50,0 that for the construction of Protective Railways and Irrigation Works respectively. The net charge on the revenues (401,5) for Protective Railways constructed through the agency of the Companies, which is shown under the Railway Revenue Account, brought the Famine Insurance grant in the Budget to its full amount of 1,000,0. The failure of crops during the latter part of the year necessitated heavy expenditure in almost all the provinces, and provision was made in the Revised Estimate for 1,965,7 to meet this calamity which, however, proved slightly deficient.

199. The following statement shows the total amount chargeable to this grant, and its distribution:—

information available in March 1897. The several Local Governments were however authorized to spend on famine relief, if necessary, up to the following amounts :—

North-Western Provinces and Oudh	1,100,0
Bengal	359,8
Central Provinces	335,0
Bombay	348,0
Punjab	115,9
Madras	80,7
Upper Burma	58,1
TOTAL	2,396,9

201. The actuals show an excess of 114,4 over the Revised Estimate, which occurred chiefly in the Central Provinces and Bombay. Of the excesses, 116,0 occurred in the Public Works portion, but the amount was diminished by savings of 1,6 in the Civil Department. The variations are chiefly due to the fact that full information was not available at the time the Revised Estimates were framed. In no case was the amount sanctioned as the limit of expenditure, as mentioned above, exceeded. The following table shows the grants made to cover the expenditure and the amount still requiring formal sanction :—

	India.	Central Provinces.	Burma.	Assam.	Bengal.	N.-W. P and Oudh.	Punjab.	Madras.	Bombay.

The above excesses require sanction, no formal grant having been made to cover them, though the expenditure was as indicated above, incurred under the general sanction of the Government of India.

203. The actual expenditure in 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 8,6, the additional expenditure having been incurred on the completion of the Kalpani Rajbaha of the Swat river canal. The decrease of 3,1, as compared with the Budget Estimate, was due to works on the Chonkapur tank in Bombay not having been commenced during the year owing to the investigations not having been completed until very late in the year.

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	Revised.	Accounts.
7,7	EXPENDITURE	14,5	14,0	12,8

204. The following are the details of the amount spent under Provincial, nothing having been charged to this head under Imperial, and the explanation of the differences between the Actuals of 1895-96 and 1896-97, as well as between the Actuals and the Budget Estimate of the last-named year:—

1,3	Hyderabad-Shadipalli Railway	4,5	5,4	5,1
7,7	GRAND TOTAL, PROVINCIAL .	14,5	14,0	12,8

205. The increase, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, is 5,0. The increased expenditure on the Jorhat Railway is due to additions to the rolling stock of the line. The increase on the Hyderabad-Shadipalli Railway, which has been sanctioned by the Local Government, is due to larger expenditure on ballasting the line. The smaller expenditure on the Mayavaram-Mutupet Railway is due to the completion of works. The lapse of 1,8, as compared with the Budget Estimate, occurred on the Mayavaram-Mutupet Railway, and is attributable to the relinquishment of land and the return of stores to the South Indian Railway.

206. The following is a general statement of the Revenue Account, taking the gross figures for Guaranteed Railways instead of the net figure shown in the Finance and Revenue Accounts :—

207. These figures show that State Railways did worse than in 1895-96 by 602,8. Under Receipts there was a decrease of 919,1 due to a general falling off in traffic on most railways in consequence of the prevailing famine and the plague in the west of India, but as the Expenditure was less by 316,3, the net result is only 602,8 worse than the preceding year's figures. There was a decrease in Working Expenses of 162,3 due to smaller traffic, and a decrease of 95,1 for interest and annuities owing to improvement in exchange; there was also a decrease of 58 9 in the surplus profits paid to companies.

The working of Guaranteed Railways resulted in a loss of 1,438,4, which is an increase of 376,6 on the loss of the preceding year. There was a decrease of 641,0 in the net traffic receipts, while the charges for interest decreased by 209,5 due to the rise in exchange.

208. The net loss to Government on the Revenue Account of Railways, as shown above, is considerably affected by fluctuations in the rate of exchange which are eliminated in the following figures showing in each year the net loss or gain for State Railways and Guaranteed Railways if the rate of exchange had not varied from that of 1886-87 :—

	State Railways.	Guaranteed Railways	TOTAL.

1886-87	— 375,1	—675,6	—1,050,7

These figures illustrate the serious effects of famine and plague on the Railway Revenue Account of the past year. The net results, apart from variations in exchange, have improved steadily year by year from 1887-88 to 1895-96, with the single exception of 1892-93, when there was a serious set-back owing to the falling-off in the wheat export traffic. This year, however, owing to famine and plague, there has been a falling off, apart from exchange, of 1,535.9. This amount is made up of Net receipts—1,397,8, Interest, Annuities and Surplus Profits—138,1. The former may be attributed entirely to famine and plague; the loss would indeed have been greater but for the special receipts on certain railways. The total loss ascribed to famine and plague under this head is 1,504,1.

210. State Railways.—The gross receipts were 910,1 less than those of the previous year. The principal decreases occurred on the North-Western, (597,8), Rajputana-Malwa (339,6) and Oudh and Rohilkhand, (155,9) Railways.

On the North-Western Railway the movement of troops for the Chitral expedition during 1895-96 contributed specially to the earnings of that year, but by far the greater part of the decline (495,7) occurred in the Goods Traffic and was due to a fall in wheat traffic owing to the prevailing scarcity and famine, and to a fall in Military traffic. On the Rajputana-Malwa Railway the decrease was due partly to the movements of the population having been restricted because the second-half of the year 1896 was considered unpropitious for marriages, and owing to the prevalence of famine and the plague which caused a still more serious falling-off in the goods traffic, especially in cotton, grain and pulse, oil-seeds and sugar. On the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway the decrease was due almost entirely to unfavourable harvests and failure of crops, which resulted not only in a serious fall in traffic in several of the principal staples of agricultural produce, but, owing to the great distress prevailing, materially affected the passenger traffic and led also to reduced demands for various commodities in general use.

On other State Railways, there were smaller variations, the net result being increased receipts amounting to 174,4, of which nearly half (84,0) was contributed by the Burma Railways in consequence of good crops and general prosperity and 69,0 by the Eastern Bengal Railway owing to a good jute crop and increased passenger traffic.

211. Guaranteed Railways.—The net receipts were 641,0 below those of the previous year, of which 602,8 occurred on the two Railways having their terminus in Bombay, owing to the prevalence of famine and plague.

5,493,8	TOTAL	5,440,4	5,420,3	5,450,9

212 The receipts, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, showed a decrease of 42,9. There was a decrease under Coaching of 88,4, due chiefly to a decline in third class passenger traffic, owing mainly to scarcity of food-supplies which, on the other hand, occasioned part of the increase of 84,0 under Goods, large consignments of rice having been despatched in consequence of the scarcity to the North-Western Provinces, Oudh, Eastern Bengal, and some parts of Tirhoot, there was also an increased traffic in pulses upwards and coal downwards. The decrease under Miscellaneous and Suspense was due chiefly to an increase in through traffic outstandings.

214. Contrasted with the actuals of the previous year the receipts showed a decrease of 339,8, of which 87,7 occurred under Coaching, due partly to the movements of the population having been restricted during the second half of the year 1896 which was considered unpropitious for marriages, and partly to the prevalence of famine, and 271,4 under Goods due to a falling-off in cotton, grain and pulse, oil-seeds and sugar traffic on account of famine and plague. The increase under Miscellaneous and Suspense was due to fluctuations in traffic suspense balances.

215. The receipts, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, showed a decrease of 597,8. The movement of troops for the Chitral expedition during 1895-96 contributed largely to the earnings of that year, and the decrease under Coaching on that account was fully provided for in the Budget. The main decrease occurred under Goods, (495,7) due to a fall in wheat traffic consequent on the prevailing scarcity and famine, and to a fall in military traffic.

216. Compared with the actuals of the previous year there was a decrease of 155,9. The decrease occurred under both Coaching and Goods, and was almost entirely due to unfavourable harvests and failure of crops, which resulted not only in a serious fall in traffic in several of the principal staples of agricultural produce, but, owing to the great distress prevailing, materially affected the passenger traffic, and led to reduced demands for various commodities in general use.

219. Compared with the actuals of the previous year there was an increase of 31,2 Under Goods earnings there was a net increase of 32,1, due to the heavy import of food-grains into the famine-stricken districts, to carriage of permanent way and bridge material for the construction of the Saugor-Katni Extension, to increased traffic in oil seeds (especially rape and poppy seed) to Bombay for export, and to the general development of goods traffic. On the other hand there were decreases in the traffic in sugar, jagree, salt and piece-goods, due to the impoverished state of the agricultural population The increase under Miscellaneous and Suspense was due to the earnings from mileage and demurrage having exceeded the payments on that account. The decrease in the earnings from passenger traffic was the result of the impoverished state of the population.

220. The receipts, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, showed a net decrease of 4,9. There was a decrease of 24,7 under Coaching, partly attributable to the falling-off in public traffic during the earlier portion of 1897, owing to the prevalence of plague in the Bombay Presidency, while under Goods there was an increase of 19,3 due to large exports of food-grains owing to the influence of famine prices prevailing in various parts of the country.

222. Compared with the actuals of the previous year there was an increase of 86,3, the principal being those of 34,9 on the East Coast Railway, of 6,1 on the Bezwada-Madras Railway, and of 23,8 on the Assam-Bengal Railway, due to the opening to traffic of new sections of those lines, and of 24,2 on the Mu Valley Railway, due to development of traffic, the continued high price of paddy, and the unusual yield of the last crop, the increased mileages and the general prosperity of Lower Burma for the last two seasons.

The actuals were less than the Budget Estimate by 21,1. There were many small variations, but the main cause of the falling-off was the failure of the new section of the Assam-Bengal Railway to realize anticipations.

Gross Receipts.

225. The actual receipts during the year under review fell short of those of the previous year by 569,9. As shown below the decrease occurred principally on the Great Indian Peninsula and Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railways, and was due to famine and plague. Of the falling off of 18,0 on the Madras Railway 16,3 was due to reduced receipts under Suspense, and the earnings were less by 1,7 only:

Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway	264,3
Madras Railway	18,0

226. The decrease on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway occurred under Goods, and was due chiefly to famine affecting the traffic in wheat and other grain. On the Great Indian Peninsula Railway famine combined with plague was the cause of the decrease.

Working Expenses.

227. The total Working Expenses were more than those of the previous year by 71,1. On the Bombay, Baroda and Central India and Madras Railways expenses increased, while on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, owing to smaller issues of coal and to reduced charges under loss by exchange and carriage of revenue stores in the last quarter of the year, the expenditure was smaller than in the previous year. The increase on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway was due to heavy outlay on the renewals of Warren girders and to extensive renewals of permanent-way in the second half of 1896, and that on the Madras Railway to heavier renewals of line with 30 feet bull-headed steel rails and to the credits for returned stores being less than in the previous year.

228. This credit represents the amount recoverable from the Mysore Durbar in settlement of the net charge for interest paid to the Southern Mahratta Railway Company in connection with the Mysore Railway. The receipts, working expenses, and interest charges of the Mysore Railway are recorded in the accounts under their respective railway heads, and the recovery of the net charge for interest (i.e., interest on capital expended, minus net receipts) from the Mysore Durbar is credited under this head. The settlement with the Mysore Durbar is effected outside the Railway accounts. The details of the amounts recoverable are given below:—

The charges on account of exchange were however lower by 540,5 and 476,8, respectively, and the following figures detail the expenditure under the several heads, exchange being shown separately so as to bring out the variations apart from that item :—

230. Under State Railways the chief variations, apart from exchange, were the decrease in Working Expenses (221,2) owing to the smaller traffic worked and the increase in Interest on Debt (161,4) resulting from the progress of State Railway construction. There were smaller decreases under all the other detailed heads.

Under Guaranteed Companies there was a decrease of 54,9 in Surplus Profits, etc., due to a fall on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway (102,8), counterbalanced by an increase on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway (54,5).

The saving, compared with the Budget Estimate, occurred chiefly in Working Expenses of State Railways (191,2), owing to smaller traffic; and in Surplus Profits of Guaranteed Companies (150,1), the charge for the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, though in excess of that for the previous year, being far below the Budget figure.

234. Compared with the actuals of the previous year there was a reduction of 72,2 under Working Expenses, of which 67,7 occurred under Locomotive Expenses, due generally to the reduced train-mileage run, consequent on the prevalence of famine and the plague, and partly also to reductions in staff during the year under review, to reduced expenditure on repairs to Locomotives, etc., to a credit from sales of engines to the Uganda Railway, and to the carriage of less coal. The large decrease in Surplus Profits, etc., was due to the large falling-off in earnings.

236. Contrasted with the actuals of the previous year the working expenses showed a decrease of 50,7, due to less extensive renewals of permanent-way and to reduced outlay on renewals of girders under Maintenance (34,1) and to savings resulting from the smaller traffic worked during the year under Locomotive (14,3). Under Carriage and Wagon the increase (14,8) was due entirely to special renewals of vehicles. Compared with the Budget Estimate the chief difference (41,1) occurred under Locomotive, and was due to reduced mileage worked owing to lighter traffic.

241. The working expenses, compared with the actuals of the previous year, showed a net decrease of 28,1. The only important variation is the decrease under Locomotive expenses, due to the cheaper rate at which coal was obtained, to the delivery of coal at the various locomotive centres instead of at Dharmavaram and Madras, and to lighter repairs to engines owing to the temporary closing of the Negapatam workshops on account of the riots in October 1896, which also accounted for the decrease under Carriage and Wagon expenses.

242. The actuals exceeded those of the previous year by 84,5. The increased mileage worked consequent on the opening of sections of the Assam-Bengal, East Coast, and Ennore section of the Bezwada-Madras Railway accounted for 34,8, 19,3, and 5,1, respectively. On the Mu Valley Railway there was an increase of 19,3 due to increased expenditure consequent on increased earnings. There were small decreases on some of the Railways.

243. Compared with the expenses of the previous year and the Budget Estimate, the increase was due to 22 miles of relaying having been done against 11 miles in 1895-96, to the entertainment of extra staff consequent on increased mileage, to the Home Board Establishment charges and Government supervision having now been debited to Revenue for the first time, and to increased train-mileage rendered necessary by increased traffic. The excess of 33,1 in Burma has been sanctioned by the Local Government. There is also a small excess of 1,5 in Bombay, which requires sanction.

Interest.

249. The increase in the sterling payments over the actuals of the previous year occurred on the Assam-Bengal, Indian Midland, and Bengal-Nagpur Railways, consequent on the additional capital paid up by the Companies; and under the East Indian Railway on account of capital raised by the issue of debentures, authority for which was granted by a recent Act of Parliament. The Burma Railway Company was formed in 1896-97, and deposited a portion of its capital with the Secretary of State in that year.

Surplus Profits.

250. The decrease, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, was due to a fall in traffic on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway owing to plague and famine. The difference would have been greater but for the increase in the share of surplus profits paid to the Great Indian Peninsula Railway consequent on increased traffic during the first half of 1896. Compared with the Budget however, there was a large falling-off in the case of this Railway also.

251. The increase in the charges in India, compared with those of the previous year, was due to the Railway Companies having overdrawn their capital to a greater extent than in 1895-96.

253. The total outlay under Imperial is less than that of the previous year by 7,9. No useful comparison can be made between the outlay of the two years by individual projects, as surveys are being completed and new surveys are being started every year. During the year new surveys were taken in hand, and others for which provision was made in the Budget Estimate were not commenced, the result being that the expenditure was less by 23,3 than the Estimate. The Provincial expenditure in Bombay was met by a special grant made by the Local Government.

Section J.—IRRIGATION.

254. The following is a general summary of the results under the head Irrigation :—

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	1896-97. Revised.	1896-97. Accounts.
	Major Works—
1,279,4	Direct Receipts	1,743,7	2,096,2	2,068,0

767,7	Net Expenditure (Minor Works)	919,1	909,5	915,4
676,3	Net Expenditure (Irrigation) .	320,3	50,9	100,3

The final net result was, on the whole, better than the actuals of the previous year by 576,0, and than the Budget Estimate by 220,0. This was due to the largely improved receipts from major works in the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab owing mainly to the prevailing drought.

255. The actual receipts in 1896-97 exceeded those of the previous year by 850,7 and the Budget Estimate by 267,4. The increase was due to the greatly enhanced demand for canal water in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and the Punjab owing to drought; this increase having been only partially provided for in the Budget.

Direct Receipts—Imperial Works.

256. The gross revenue in 1896-97 was better than that of the previous year by 369,2. The increase occurred in the Punjab (372,9) and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (5,8), where the demand for canal water was very large owing to great drought during the rabi season of 1895-96 and the Kharif of 1896; and there was also an increase of revenue from the further development of irrigation from the Chenab and the Western Jumna canals. The decrease in Bombay was due chiefly to less sugarcane plantation on the Mutha canals, and partly to a falling-off of revenue from some other canals owing to various causes, chiefly plague and famine.

Direct Receipts—Provincial Works.

257. The gross revenue in 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 419,4 and the Budget Estimate by 168,9, owing chiefly to the great demand for canal water due to deficient rainfall, especially in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, where 379,9 and 127,9 of the abovementioned excesses occurred.

258. The share of land revenue credited to irrigation works during 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 50,1, but fell short of the Budget by 58,1. The variations occurred chiefly in Madras, and were mainly due to the enhancement of water-rates on the Godavari delta system, and to the increase of revenue anticipated from the Kistna delta and Godavari delta system in the Budget not having been fully realized

Provincial and Local Works.

259. The increase in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, as compared with the actuals of the previous year and the Budget Estimate, was due to the enhanced assessment on account of heavy demands for canal water owing to drought. The variations in the other Provinces are unimportant.

260. The expenditure during 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 274,7. This was due chiefly to larger grants having been provided by the Local Governments for expenditure, in 1896-97, on Minor works (159,7) partly to increased cost of maintenance of, and of collection of revenue from, some major works, (83,9) and partly to the capital outlay of the year having enhanced the interest charges (31,1). The increase of 47,4 over the Budget Estimate was mainly due to the increased cost of maintenance of canals in the Punjab and to repairs to flood damages in Madras, to meet which extra grants were made by the Government of India.

Imperial Works.

261. The expenditure in 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 48,6, and the Budget Estimate by 54,5. The increase occurred in the Punjab and Madras. In the Punjab the increase was due to extensive repairs on the Western Jumna, Bari Doab, Sirhind and Sidhnai canals, and to additional collection charges, necessitated by increased irrigation. The increase in Madras was due to repairs to damages caused by floods. The Budget grant was increased to 501,3 by additional grants* sanctioned during the course of the year. Against this the actuals amounted to 504,5, showing an excess of 3,2. The increase occurred in Bombay and was due to no portion of the establishment charges having been debited to Famine Relief Works as provided for in the estimates under a misapprehension of the orders in force. The estimates received from Bombay did not give sufficient information to enable the Government of India to detect the error. Of this excess, 51,3 has been sanctioned by the Government of India and 3,2 still requires sanction. The extra charges due to famine are estimated at 4,0. The savings under Exchange Compensation Allowance were 3,4.

Provincial Works.

262. The expenditure in 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 35,3. The increase occurred in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and was due partly to the expenditure in the previous year having been restricted by the Local Financial Department owing to the very large falling off in the irrigation revenue of that year, and partly to additional charges in 1896-97 for collection and measurement owing to increased irrigation in consequence of drought. The decrease in Bengal, as compared with the Budget Estimate, was due to the more economical working of the canals. The excess (14,3) over the Budget Estimate in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh was due partly to extensive repairs, and additional collection charges, necessitated by increased irrigation, and partly (6,2) to the share of establishment charged to the Revenue account being larger than was anticipated owing to smaller expenditure under capital (Major head—49—Irrigation). Of this excess, 14,1 was sanctioned by the Local Government.

A. Imperial. B. Provincial and Local.

Imperial Works.

264. The expenditure in 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 32,1. The increase occurred in Upper Burma and the Punjab. The increase in Upper Burma was due to a larger grant having been provided for the purpose of pushing on Irrigation projects, which were considered essential on account of the scanty rainfall in several districts in the Province. The increase in the Punjab was due to the construction of the Ghaggar canal. The increase in the expenditure, as compared with the Budget Estimate, was due partly (14,1) to the construction of the Ghaggar canal and partly to the construction of certain urgent works in Sind, for which an additional grant of 25,0 was sanctioned by the Finance Department. The extra charges due to famine are estimated at 16,0.

Provincial and Local Works.

265. The expenditure in 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 127,6. The increase was mainly due to larger grants having been provided by the several Local Governments than in the previous year; and a decrease of 19 5 occurred, as compared with the Budget Estimate which was not generally worked up to. No explanation of the savings is afforded save that the decrease in Madras was due to the Cooum improvement scheme having been abandoned. The increase in the Punjab, as compared with the Budget Estimate, occurred in the local charges and was due to the payment of 4,6 by the District Board of Ferozepore to the canal fund as a special grant in-aid of the local canal works. It is stated that the sanction of the Punjab Government to the payment of this sum was not received in time to admit of its inclusion in the estimates. The net excess of 4,8 thus caused still requires sanction.

266. The receipts in 1896-97 were less than those of the previous year by 17,6. There was an improvement of about 10,0 under Military Works due to increased receipts from sales of buildings. The decrease under the Civil heads was due to numerous small variations in the different Provinces, the most important of which are decreases in the tolls on roads in Bombay and in the ferry tolls in the North-Western Provinces, in consequence of famine and plague, against which there was an increase of ferry receipts in Bengal and Madras. The receipts of the Roorkee College were also transferred from this head to Education. The increase, as compared with the Budget Estimate, was chiefly due to the increases under Military Works and Ferry Receipts mentioned above.

267. The receipts for the year 1896-97 exceeded those of the previous year by 11,6 and the Budget Estimate by 11,3. The increase was due to the sale of buildings and land in the rest-camp at Tundla to the East Indian Railway (4,0) and of buildings at Sipri to the Gwalior Darbar (5,0), and to an improvement in the rents of buildings (about 2,7).

-Public Works in charge of Departmental Officers. B.—Public Works in charge of Civil Officers.

Imperial Works.

268. The receipts during 1896-97 fell short of those of the previous year by 6,9. The decrease was mainly due to exceptional receipts in 1895-96 on account of the sale of the Saw Mills at Pegu for 3,0, and the recovery of 2,0 from the Calcutta Municipality as compensation for the removal of the out-offices of the Foreign Office.

Provincial Works.

269. The receipts by departmental officers during 1896-97 were less than those of the previous year by 12,9. The decrease occurred mainly in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and Bombay. The decrease in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh was chiefly due to the transfer to Education of the receipts of the Roorkee Civil Engineering College (2,7). In Bombay the decrease was due chiefly to a falling-off in the tolls on roads owing to stoppage of traffic movements in consequence of famine and plague (6,0). The increase, as compared with the Budget Estimate, was contributed chiefly by Bengal and Madras. The increase in Bengal was due to an increase in the profits of the Calcutta workshops and in the Government share of the surplus profits of the Darjeeling-Himalayan railway. In Madras the increase was the outcome of numerous petty variations.

270. The decrease in revenue realized by Civil officers during 1896-97, as compared with that of the previous year and the Budget Estimate, was due to a falling off in the receipts from ferry tolls in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (9,7).

Local Works.

271. The revenue realized by Civil officers in 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 4,2 and the Budget Estimate by 14,8, respectively. The increase occurred chiefly in Bengal and Madras, and was due to an improvement in ferry tolls.

272. The Indian expenditure in 1896-97 was less than that of the previous year by 27,2. The decrease occurs entirely under Military Works, there being a small increase (21,9) under Civil Works, and is due to certain special expenditure in 1895-96 on works in connection with the occupation of Chitral and on the acquisition of land for the Ordnance Department. There was also a special recovery of a municipal contribution (10,0) in 1896-97 for the Murree Water-works which was brought to account by deduction from expenditure. As compared with the Budget Estimate, the actuals showed a decrease of 357,3, of which 283,3 occurs under Civil Works and is due chiefly to the expenditure of the year having been over-estimated, and partly to the restriction of expenditure owing to famine.

273. Of the decrease of 48,9 in the expenditure during 1896-97, as compared with that of the previous year, 30,7 occurred under India and 13,1 in the Punjab. The decrease under India was due partly to a refund of 20,0, which was charged in the accounts of 1895-96 in connection with the proposed acquisition of the seven tanks' estate at Cossipore, and partly (19,4) to the special expenditure in the same year on works in connection with the occupation of Chitral. The municipal contribution in 1896-97 of 10,0 towards the cost of the Murree Water-works has also been treated as a reduction of expenditure. On the other hand, the posting of senior officers of Royal Engineers to India and the pay of supernumerary officers, charged to the Military Works grant under the orders of the Government of India necessitated an increase of 17,2 in the establishment charges. The expenditure in the Punjab in 1895-96 was somewhat high on account of works at Wano, Army Head-quarters buildings at Simla and River Protective Works at Dera Ismail Khan. On the whole, there was a saving of 76,4, as compared with the Budget Estimate, due partly to the surrender of 34,7 to the Finance Department from the grant for works in the Tochi Valley, and partly to the requirements for works having been over-estimated in several Provinces.

Imperial Works.

274. Departmental Officers.—The expenditure in 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 50,9. The increase occurred in Bengal (21,1) and the Punjab(33,5). The increase in Bengal was due to the large outlay incurred on the new opium buildings at Bhabhna and Gulzarbagh and a new post office at Balasore. The increase in the Punjab was due to the reconstruction of the Public Works Department Secretariat building at Simla. The increase of 10,2 under India was due to the commencement of the Bangalore Water-works and the construction of a Protestant Church at Jhansi. The increase would have been larger had the full grant for the Bangalore Water-works been utilized. The decrease of 10,6 in Assam was due to the Nichuguard-Manipur road being nearly completed. As compared with the Budget Estimate, the decrease of 61,0 under India was due partly to a surrender of 30,0 from the grant for the Bangalore Water-works owing to the estimate not being sanctioned in time to admit of the grant being fully utilized, and partly to the requirements of several other works having been over-estimated. The increase in the Punjab was due to additional expenditure to the extent of 32,4 having been authorized principally on reconstructing the Public Works Secretariat building, (for which an extra grant of 20,0 was made) and on improvements to Viceregal Lodge. Against the excess of 1,2 in Bengal, an extra grant of 1,0 was made for furniture for Viceregal residences. The total Imperial expenditure under this head does not exceed the reduced grant of 692,1 as shown below :—

Original Grant	700,9
Deduct—Surrendered from the grant for the Bangalore water-works	—30,0
	670,9
Add—Additional grants sanctioned for Sandeman Memorial Hall, Quetta	2
For Public Works Department Secretariat Building, Simla	20,0
For supplies of furniture for Viceregal residence	1,0
	692,1

275. Civil Officers.—The expenditure in 1896-97 was less than that of the previous year by 4,8. The decrease was accounted for by the large expenditure incurred in 1895-96 on the Residency at Bagdad. The extra charges due to famine were 9,2. The savings under Exchange Compensation Allowance were 8,0.

Provincial Works.

276. Departmental Officers.—The expenditure in 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 59,1. There were large increases in Lower Burma (57,2), Bengal (43,4) and Assam (23,9), larger grants having been made available by Local Governments which were, however, worked up to only in the last case. The principal decreases were in the Punjab (22,1) and Bombay (22,4,) the programme of works in the former having been smaller than in the previous year, and the decrease in Bombay being chiefly due to smaller expenditure on Civil buildings. Compared with the Budget Estimate, the actuals show a decrease of 186,3. The saving in some Provinces was due to the restriction of expenditure in consequence of famine. The Grant for expenditure was exceeded in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (6,4), but was met by transfers from the Local Division under this grant.

277. Civil Officers.—The expenditure in 1896-97 exceeded that of the previous year by 9,5 and the Budget Estimate by 12,1. The excess over the Budget was mainly due to increased expenditure in Bengal (7,5) on account of miscellaneous public improvements for which special grants were allotted during the year, and in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (3,4) due chiefly to the payment of a contribution of 3,0 to the Municipal Board of Meerut on account of the cantonment connection with the water-works sanctioned by the Local Government in March 1897, for which an extra grant was made by the Local Government by reappropriation.

Local Works.

278. Departmental Officers.—The expenditure in 1896-97 was less than that of the previous year by 50,1. The decrease of 13,4 in Lower Burma and of 19,1 in the Punjab was chiefly due to the large outlay incurred in 1895-96 on new roads in the former and on repair of roads in the latter where also there was some curtailment of expenditure in 1896-97 owing to famine. Compared with the Budget Estimate, the actuals showed a decrease of 44,5. The decrease occurred chiefly in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (24,5) and the Punjab (28,0) and was due partly to over-estimates, and in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh partly to transfers of grants to Provincial civil works for the new Government house at Naini Tal. The increase of 19,6 in Bombay was due to expenditure incurred on works for which supplementary estimates were sanctioned by District Boards.

279. Civil Officers.—The decrease of 42,7 in expenditure, as compared with that of the previous year, was made up chiefly of a decrease of 50,5 in Bengal and of an increase of 13,1 in Madras. The decrease in Bengal was due to smaller expenditure on the construction and repair of district roads. In Madras larger expenditure on the repair of district roads was found necessary in 1896-97. The expenditure fell short of the Budget Estimate by 21,3, due mainly to an over-estimate of expenditure in all Provinces except Madras, where the expenditure was increased in consequence of orders of the Local Government requiring larger outlay by District Boards on communications. This resulted in an excess of 28,3 over the Budget, which still requires the sanction of the Government of India. As it is not a trifling excess and was foreseen (a still larger excess having been provided for in the Revised Estimate) it should have been met by specific reappropriation or the sanction of the Government of India to the increased grant should have been obtained before the close of the year.

281. The receipts in India exceeded the Budget Estimate by 20,5, but fell short of the actuals of the previous year by 21,4. There were variations under all heads, but none of any importance.

The receipts in England exceeded the Budget Estimate chiefly on account of sale of certain land at Port Said, and larger receipts on account of the Indian Troop Service.

282. The following statement shows separately the ordinary and special charges included under expenditure in India :—

and partly to less expenditure for provisioning owing to the withdrawal from the Chin Hills of native troops, their place being taken by Military Police.

284. The expenditure for the expeditions and other special services was provided for under the several ordinary grant heads. The total Budget provision and actual expenditure are shown in detail below:—

	1896-97. Budget.	1896-97. Accounts.
Charges for—
Occupation of Chitral and its communications	231,8	193,8
Chitral Relief Force	20,0	17,1
Wano Garrison	25,0	33,7
Tochi Garrison	34,7	39,4
Gilgit Agency	52,1	44,9
Kajuri Kach Force	8,8	7,1
Kengtung Garrison	10,0	10,0
Afghan-Baluch Boundary Escort	2	3,0
Las Bela Escort	...	2,1
Waziri-Afghan Boundary Demarcation and Waziristan Field Force	...	1,1
Perso-Baluch Boundary Escort	6	3
	383,2	352,7

The principal saving occurred in connection with the grant for Occupation of Chitral, etc., in consequence of rations having been purchased locally (28,6) and of savings in pay and allowances (5,6), the cost having been somewhat over-estimated and the actuals having been also reduced by the withdrawal of the 34th Pioneers. On the other hand, the Commissariat charges of the Wano Garrison were under-estimated (6,9), and no provision for batta for the troops was made in the estimates for the Tochi Garrison (3,2). The saving in the Gilgit Agency arose from recoveries due for issues in former years and a reduction of the garrison.

285. The special grant for mobilization charges of 494,9 was distributed over several heads; this distribution and the actual expenditure are shown below:—

	Budget.	Actuals.
Commissariat	343,7	204,6
Remount	84,9	77,4
Medical	34,2	20,5
Ordnance	32,1	33,0
Other heads	...	2,1
TOTAL	494,9	337,6

The saving is due partly to a portion of the expenditure being incurred and charged in England and partly to its having been found impossible to carry out the intended work.

286. The cause of the excess of 72,0 in the ordinary expenditure as compared with the Budget is shown by the following figures:—

	Budget.	Accounts.	Excess + Reduction—
Army and Garrison Staff	555,3	524,8	—30,5
Regimental Pay	8,560,5	8,527,6	—32,9
Commissariat	3,025,6	3,290,1	+264,5
Remounts	302,5	285,4	—17,1

Section L.—ARMY SERVICES—concluded.

287. The increase occurring in Commissariat charges is very large, but is partially counterbalanced by savings under all the other heads, none of which are, however, individually important.

The increase in the Commissariat charges is due entirely to the general rise in prices, the charges for compensation for dearness of provisions and of forage and for feed of animals show an increase of 39 lakhs over the Budget Estimate, which was partially counterbalanced by savings under most of the other sub-heads. The rise in prices occasioned extra expenditure under other heads also, which has, however, been covered by other savings under them. The total extra Army expenditure due to the prevailing scarcity is estimated at 506,4. Exchange Compensation accounts for 82,8 out of the total saving of 192,0 under other Grant heads. The only other matter that need be mentioned here is that nearly the whole of the savings under Ordnance occurred in connection with the Factories and their supplies; for these factories enhanced grants were sanctioned in 1896-97, but they were not worked up to, owing partly to smaller demands and partly to the diversion of some of the factories to the manufacture of supplies which have been charged to mobilization.

288. The only grant heads the expenditure under which has exceeded the Budget grant are—

Commissariat	12,9
Administration of Martial Law	3

These excesses, which have been reported to Government by the Accountant General in the Military Department, require sanction. The former has been explained above. The latter is due to extra charges for prisons which appear to have been under-estimated especially in the Bombay Command.

289. The increase, as compared with the actuals of the previous year in the ordinary charges, was mainly due to high prices of food-supplies, in consequence of the scarcity, to the introduction of the new clothing scheme, and to larger outturn by Ordnance factories, counterbalanced by smaller charges for Exchange Compensation Allowance and for British soldiers' pay consequent on the improved rate of exchange.

290. The expenditure in England showed a saving as compared with the Budget, chiefly under Indian Troop Service and Stores; under the former it was due to less payments for coal, canal dues, fittings, etc., and under the latter, partly to a smaller demand for stores and partly to certain stores for Special Defence Works having been included under this head in the Budget Estimate. Less charges for deferred pay caused a saving under Home charges of British forces serving in India; and the absence of fewer officers on furlough in England than was anticipated resulted in a decrease under furlough allowances of officers of the Indian service.

291. In the Indian Receipts the total increase over the Budget is only 20,5, the variations are for the most part unimportant; the largest excess occurs under Ordnance Establishment, etc., and was due to large sales of unserviceable stores in Madras (8,1), to recoveries on account of issues to the British East African Protectorate (3,7), to the issue of small arms to the police in Burma and Madras and Sind (8,6), partly counterbalanced by a write-back on account of value of machine gun ammunition issued to the Royal Navy Reserve, Bombay (2,5), and by the return of unserviceable stores by the Hyderabad Contingent (1,5).

292. The details of the receipts under Commissariat are as follows:—

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	Revised.	Accounts.
318,9	Sale of malt-liquor	325,0	330,1	317,7

...	Special Services	3,1	10,1	12,0
438,0	TOTAL	448,2	467,7	452,3

The increased receipts on account of Special services are due to the transfer to this head of receipts formerly shown under Miscellaneous Services. Under Clothing Establishment, etc., the Budget estimated for an increase over the actuals of the previous years on account of issue of regimental necessaries; this was not, however, realized, partly in consequence of lower rates being charged owing to the more favourable rate of exchange. Under Miscellaneous Services the improvement was due to recoveries on account of Chitral Relief Force (3,1) and Tochi Garrison (5). The large decrease as compared with the actuals of the previous year was due to smaller recoveries on account of the Chitral Relief Force, which is the principal cause of the reduction in the total Army Receipts as compared with the previous year, and to the recoveries on account of other special services having been shown under Commissariat Establishment, etc.

293. The receipts in England exceeded the Budget Estimate by 32,1 under Effective Services due chiefly to the sale proceeds of certain land at Port Said (8,8), and to increased receipts on account of the Indian Troop Service (26,0); and by 2,4 under Non-Effective Services due chiefly to sufficient provision not having been made for the growth of receipts under the Indian Military Service Family Pensions.

294. Of the total saving of 30,5 under this head, as compared with the Budget, 8,7 was due to less payment of Exchange Compensation Allowance. The balance of the saving occurred chiefly under the sub-heads Adjutant General, Quarter Master General and District Commands, under each of which the charges for salaries and establishments were over-estimated, insufficient deductions having been made on account of absentees. There was also a saving of 2,0 owing to less tour expenses of the Commander-in-Chief in India, and of Lieutenant-Generals Commanding the Forces.

Under Special Services the expenditure on this account in the previous year was shown under Miscellaneous services.

296. The saving under this head of 36,0 as compared with the Budget Estimate is less than the saving on account of Exchange Compensation Allowance alone (52,7). The small net increase after excluding this saving is the result of numerous fluctuations, the most important of which are detailed below.

The decrease of 98,8 as compared with the actuals of the previous year was due chiefly to a more favourable rate of exchange for payment of British troops (53,2) and to less payment of Exchange Compensation Allowance (110,4); the principal counterbalancing increases being those arising from the higher rate of pay sanctioned for native non-commissioned officers and men having been drawn for the whole year against 8 months in 1895-96, and from the debit to this head of expenditure on special services and expeditions which was shown under Miscellaneous services in 1895-96.

297. The details of the principal sub-heads of the European Army are given below:—

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	1896-97. Revised.	1896-97. Accounts.
1,102,1	Artillery	1,068,1	1,064,8	1,074,5
461,9	Cavalry	436,0	441,4	441,1
11,0	Engineers	9,7	7,3	5,5
2,760,2	Infantry	2,688,6	2,657,4	2,640,7
6,3	Invalid and Veteran Establishment	5,6	4,3	4,2
45,8	Staff Corps, General List Officers, Unattached and Unemployed Officers	31,2	46,1	49,8
5,2	Colonel's Allowances	5,7	6,0	7,2
37,9	Other Charges	37,0	38,1	37,6
4,430,4	TOTAL	4,281,9	4,265,4	4,260,6

Under Artillery the excess as compared with the Budget Estimate was due chiefly to the deduction in the Budget for probable savings having proved excessive (17,0), to excess strength of troops (5,1), and to under-estimate of good conduct pay (3,6), partly counterbalanced by less Exchange Compensation Allowances (6,0), savings due to the discharge of grass cutters' establishments in the Bengal and Punjab Commands (11,5), and to less charges for horse allowance (2,6). Under Cavalry the strength of troops was under-estimated (9,3), but this was partly counterbalanced by less Exchange Compensation Allowance (2,6) and horse allowance (2,0). Under Engineers the saving as compared both with Budget Estimate and the actuals of the previous year was mainly due to the debit to the Military Works Department of the pay and allowances of Royal Engineer officers graded as supernumerary to the establishment of that Department (3,3). Under Infantry the saving was chiefly due to an over-estimate for salaries, an insufficient deduction having been made on account of officers absent in Europe (26,7), to less Exchange Compensation Allowance (16,8) and to short strength of privates (11,2), partly counterbalanced by an under-estimate of good conduct pay (6,6). Under Invalid and Veteran Establishment the saving was due to casualties and absence of officers on furlough. Under Staff Corps, General List Officers, Unattached and Unemployed Officers, the excess occurred chiefly under Staff Corps (10,2) and General List officers (7,6), the number of unemployed officers and of candidates for the staff corps on the Unattached List of the British Army having been under-estimated. The saving as compared with the actuals of the previous year was generally due to the more favourable rate of exchange at which the pay of British troops was converted as well as to the causes mentioned above.

298. The details of the principal sub-heads under the Native Army are as follows:—

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	1896-97. Revised.	1896-97. Accounts.
55,1	Artillery	56,5	55,6	56,6

2,534,8	Infantry	2,592,8	2,590,0	2,587,6

...	Special Services	30,9	30,7	29,2
4,267,1		4,352,8	4,350,1	4,338,1

The variations were not large under any of the sub-heads. It is necessary only to specify a few of them. Under Infantry the small saving of 5,2, as compared with the Budget Estimate, was the outcome of several increases and savings; the principal being the transfer to Her Majesty's Imperial Government, London, of the ordinary as well as the extraordinary charges on account of the 24th Bombay Infantry,

Memorandum on Military Expenditure.

The estimates with which the Military and Marine Department of the Government of India is concerned are —

I—Indian Military Estimates.

II—Home (India) Military Estimates.

III—Military Works Estimates.

IV—Marine Estimates.

I.—Indian Military Estimates.

Comparison—
Revised for 1897-98
and
Budget for 1897-98.

The revised Indian Military Estimates for 1897-98, compared with the Budget Estimates for the same year, show a net increase of Rx. 3,325,300, which is chiefly due to the large expenditure incurred on account of the field operations on the North-West Frontier.

2. These field operations are estimated to cost Rx. 3,869,800 during the current year, i.e., Rx. 400,000 for the Tochi Field Force operations; Rx. 3,455,000 for the Malakand Field Force, the forces employed in the Mohmand and Buner country, and the army known as the Tirah Expeditionary Force,—and the balance Rx. 14,800 on account of Mekran, and arrear charges of previous operations.

3. The only other noteworthy items of increased expenditure are, Rx. 65,800 on account of food supplies, due to the prevalence of high rates during a great part of the year, and Rx. 10,900 for concessions granted to British and Native troops on the occasion of the Jubilee of Her Majesty the Queen Empress.

4. The more important items of decreased expenditure are as under :—

Owing to favourable rates of exchange, there was a saving of Rx. 66,500 for exchange compensation allowance.

Under Grant 1, "Army and Garrison Staff," there was a saving of Rx. 17,400, while under Grant 3, "Regimental Pay and Allowances," there was a less expenditure of Rx. 60,000.

Next, the Indian revenues were relieved to the extent of Rx. 10,000 in consequence of the 27th Bombay Infantry having been sent to Mombassa, the charge being borne by Her Majesty's Government. The despatch of the 2nd Battalion, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, to Natal in May 1897 some months before its relief in ordinary course resulted in a further saving of Rx. 42,200.

The military estimates were further relieved of expenditure to the extent of Rx. 14,700 on account of the pay and allowances of officers whose services were placed at the disposal of the Civil Department for plague duty.

5. Under Grant 4, "Commissariat," a saving of Rx. 200,000 is anticipated, which is chiefly due to smaller consumption of malt-liquor owing to troops being on field service, to a reduction in the price of malt-liquor from 1st January 1898 under a new contract, to fewer ordinary movements of troops and stores in consequence of troops being on field service, and to the lapse of a special grant of Rx. 10,130 for the purchase of camels for mobilisation purposes.

6. Under Grant 5, "Remounts," there is a saving of Rx. 22,700 on account of Australian horses in consequence of a more favourable rate of exchange, and owing to fewer purchases than were anticipated.

7. Other minor causes bring up the total savings to Rx. 505,700; the net result is, taking into account the war expenditure, that the Revised Estimate is Rx. 3,325,300 more than the Budget Estimate for 1897-98.

Budget Estimates, 1898-99.

8. The Budget Estimates for 1898-99 in the net amount to Rx. 17,250,800 or Rx. 1,096,500 more than the Budget Estimates for 1897-98.

Comparison—
Budget for 1897-98.

9. The most important causes of increase are—(i) increased expenditure to the extent of Rx. 1,519,100 on account of field operations and special services, of which Rx. 1,458,000 is on account of field operations and Rx. 61,100 on account of the latter; and (ii) the abolition of the grocery ration stoppage, and the grant of an additional allowance to the British soldier in India. This measure has been rendered necessary by the improvement in the position of the soldier which is to come into effect in all parts of Her Majesty's dominions. Hitherto, the soldier at home has had a deduction of 3*d*. per diem made for groceries and extra messing. An allowance of 3*d*. per diem will be made to meet this charge, but deferred pay will cease, and gratuities only will be given when the soldier leaves the colours. In India we have hitherto made a stoppage of 9 pies (¾*d*. at 1*s*. 4*d*. the rupee) daily for a grocery and vegetable ration, which costs about 1½ annas (1½*d*.). The details of the change as applicable to India are not yet settled, but for next year we have provided Rx. 200,000. With regard to the charge for field operations, it may be explained that this sum includes Rx. 1,355,000 to meet arrear charges of the current year likely to be adjusted in 1898-99, and expenditure on account of the Tirah Expeditionary Force for next year, calculated on the supposition that the existing force will be in the field till the end of June. But if the operations are speedily brought to a close, there will be a saving of expenditure amounting to about 16¼ lakhs. This comparatively small reduction is owing to the necessity for keeping a certain force on a field footing, and for extra transport. The sum named above, Rx. 1,519,100, includes Rx. 160,900 on account of the temporary increase of the Malakand and Tochi Garrisons for three months, and the retention of a force, somewhat larger than the original garrisons, on the Kohat-Samana-Kurram border.

10. The other minor increases are as follows:—Under Grant 4, Commissariat, Rx. 20,000 to provide for an increased establishment of Commissariat-Transport officers. This is only a small portion of the expenditure required, but it has been recognised that we require more officers in this department, and that it is desirable to make a beginning in the needed improvements, especially in the transport service, as soon as possible. The details of the plan for increasing the Commissariat-Transport staff are not yet all approved, but no time will be lost. The larger question of improving the transport service has also been taken in hand; Rx. 14,200 for increased number of mules to be purchased, and Rx. 6,800 for dairies; Rx. 10,800 under Grant 5, Remounts, caused by larger provision for purchase of remounts and ordnance mules; Rx. 21,800 under Grant 6, Clothing, for increased clothing supplies, and claims for compensation; Rx. 10,000 under

Grant 10 for continuing the conversion of the equipment of the batteries of the field army to that suitable for the 15-pounder projectiles. The present gun has to be supplied with a new vent to admit of cordite being fired instead of black powder, and the limbers and wagons have to be altered to carry the new ammunition. Under the non-effective grants we have an increase of Rx. 27,400 for extra pensionary allowances in consequence of wounds received in action and casualties during the North-West Frontier operations, and Rx. 11,500 for war medals. Under Grant 15 an increased capitation allowance of R10 annually for each efficient member of mounted volunteer corps has been sanctioned, as service in the mounted corps involves a greater personal outlay than that in other volunteer corps, and provision has been made accordingly in the estimates of 1898-99.

11. The more important causes of decrease are as under:—

In consequence of better rates of exchange, we anticipate a saving of Rx. 98,800 for exchange compensation allowance, and Rx. 129,500 for pay of British troops. The fall in prices of food supplies for men and animals account for a decrease of Rx. 272,600, while the provision in the Indian Estimates has been reduced to the extent of Rx. 64,900 in consequence of provision existing in the home estimates for expenditure on Commissariat and Ordnance stores.

12. Among the minor causes of decrease may be mentioned a saving of Rx. 20,000 in consequence of Indian Native troops having been sent to Mombassa, the charges for which will be borne by Her Majesty's Government; Rx. 14,800 in consequence of the withdrawal of two Native infantry regiments from Burma and some reduction of mounted infantry in that province; Rx. 12,700 owing to there being fewer unemployed officers, and fewer Colonel's allowances to meet. Under Grant 4, "Commissariat," the expenditure on malt-liquor will be about Rx. 29,500 less in consequence of reduced price under a new contract, and smaller demands, as troops will be on field service for a portion of the year; the expenditure on movements of troops and stores, purchase of equipment and other Commissariat miscellaneous expenditure is expected to be less by Rx. 34,500, chiefly in consequence of troops being still on field service. The use of the river routes between Benares, Silchar, and Dibrugarh will result in a saving of Rx. 3,000 per annum. Under Grant 10, "Ordnance," we expect a reduction of expenditure to the extent of Rx. 41,200 for ordnance stores and camp equipage. The closing during the winter months of convalescent depots in the hills is productive of a saving of Rx. 3,000, while the annual provision of Rx. 10,000 for camps of exercise has been reduced by Rx. 2,000.

The re-construction of Native Infantry Lines has been steadily progressing, and we allot a sum of Rx. 8,064 for this work in 1898-99.

13. The receipts during 1898-99 are expected to be Rx. 18,400 more than the amount in the Budget Estimates for 1897-98, chiefly in consequence of recoveries for issues of rations and forage, on payment, to officers and others on field service.

14. The net result is that the Budget Estimates for 1898-99 are Rx. 1,096,500 in excess of the Estimates of 1897-98. It is necessary, however, to observe that this is almost entirely due to the field operations. The increased expenditure under this head and for special services of a like nature amounts to Rx. 1,519,100, while the provision for increased advantages to the British soldier is, as already stated, Rx. 200,000. But for the expenditure under these heads there would have been a saving of Rx. 622,600.

15. A statement is appended showing the net amounts under each of the 20 Grants for effective and non-effective services.

* The bulk of subscriptions of officers to Indian Military Service Family Pensions is received in India, while most of the expenditure is incurred at home. The receipts in India, therefore, exceed the expenditure in India, and hence, as the figures in the above statement are net, there must be a minus entry.

II.—Home (India) Military Estimates.

The second of the Estimates with which the Military Department is concerned is the Home Estimate for army effective and non-effective charges. The Home Budget Estimates for 1897-98 amounted to £4,353,400, and the Revised Estimates to £4,312,000.

The saving of £41,400 in the Revised, as compared with the Budget Estimates for 1897-98, is due to reduced payments on account of the furlough allowances of the British and Indian Services, less payments for the Indian Troop Service, and reductions in the non-effective charges for pensions of retired officers of the Indian Service.

2. The charges for 1898-99 are estimated at £4,469,300, viz.:—

Effective charges	1,993,500
Non-effective charges	2,475,800

The effective charges include payments to the War Office in respect of the British forces serving in India, amounting, as estimated in the coming year, to £721,000, as against £729,000 in the Estimates for 1897-98. These charges are based on the capitation rate of £7-10 per man serving in India, with the addition of the charge for deferred pay issued to British soldiers on discharge, or transfer to the reserve. The other items included in the effective charges are furlough allowances and pay during the voyage of British forces serving in India (£108,000); furlough allowances of officers of the Indian Service (£230,000); Indian Troop Service (£267,600); miscellaneous (£20,000); passage of officers and troops, otherwise than in transports (£19,000) and stores for India (£627,900).

3. The non-effective charges are made up of the retired pay, etc., of the British forces in respect of their service in India (£517,000); the pay of non-effective Colonels of Royal Artillery (£24,800); while the pay and pensions of non-effective and retired officers of the Indian Service amount to £1,820,000; the miscellaneous pensions to £84,000; and the Indian Military Service Family Pensions to £30,000.

4. There is an increase of £115,900 in the Budget Estimates of 1898-99 as compared with the Budget Estimate of 1897-98, but since the Estimate of 1898-99 has closed, we have decided to defer the supply of certain stores to the value of £41,223, for which provision is included in the Estimate of 1898-99. The estimated home expenditure will be reduced accordingly by £41,223 next year, so that the difference between the two Estimates will be practically reduced to £74,677. There will also be a reduction on account of the cessation of deferred pay, but that cannot now be estimated.

The increased expenditure in 1898-99 includes a sum of £38,200 on account of probable expenditure on stores required to replace issues made for field operations in India; heavier payments are anticipated on account of passages of officers and troops, otherwise than in transports, owing mainly to the engagement of smaller transports than in 1897-98.

The figures of actual expenditure in 1896-97, of the Budget and Revised Estimates for 1897-98, and of the Budget Estimate for 1898-99, are given below in detail for convenience of comparison :—

III.—Military Works Estimates.

Excluding English expenditure and exchange, the Budget Estimate for 1897-98 amounted to Rx. 1,207,300; the revised estimate of expenditure amounts to Rx. 1,065,800. There has, therefore, been less expenditure in India of Rx. 141,500; of this Rx. 11,700 has been reappropriated to "Special Defences—Armaments;" Rx. 51,600 has been provided additionally for Home charges for stores.

The lapse is, therefore, Rx. 78,200, due partially to works in the Tochi and at Chitral being in abeyance.

The Revised Estimate includes Rx. 15,100 expended on repairing the damages caused by the earthquake of 12th June 1897.

The Budget Estimate for 1898-99, excluding English expenditure and exchange, amounts to Rx. 1,135,800, or Rx. 71,500 less than that for 1897-98. The difference is mainly due to the fact that in 1897-98 extra funds were provided for frontier works of defence, and that these will now be provided from the ordinary grant.

The heads of the Military Works Estimate are in round figures :—

	Rx.
For original works, including works in progress, and those to be commenced	411,000
,, repairs	353,000
,, barrack department establishment, supplies, and tools	88,000

The new works, 112 in number, including 80 in progress, and 32 not commenced, comprise 20 water-supply works on which Rx. 105,477 is to be spent, provision for works on the frontier of Rx. 30,650, Rx. 19,500 for coast and inland fortifications, the balance being made up of drainage works, hospitals, barracks, and Ordnance, Commissariat, and Marine requirements.

IV.—Marine Estimates.

The net figures of the Budget Estimate of the Royal Indian Marine for 1897-98 were Rx. 139,100, the Revised Estimate stands at Rx. 120,400, showing a decrease of Rx. 18,700. This decrease in the net expenditure is caused by excess receipts amounting to Rx. 38,300, partly counterbalanced by increased expenditure to the extent of Rx. 19,600.

2. The excess under receipts is chiefly due to large recoveries from the Home Government in connection with the employment of vessels on Imperial Service.

3. The increases in expenditure (aggregating Rx. 33,700) are chiefly due to smaller recoveries for work on account of other departments, and to recent local purchases of coal for the Bushire and Muscat Depots.

4. The decreases in expenditure (aggregating Rx. 14,100) are principally due to savings in exchange compensation allowance, temporary vacancies, and other items.

5. Taking the decrease against the increase, there is a net increase of Rx. 19,600, and deducting these figures from the increased receipts, Rx. 38,300, the result is a decrease of Rx. 18,700 in the Revised as compared with the Budget Estimate.

6. The net figures of the Marine Budget Estimate for 1898-99 are Rx. 142,500 against Rx. 139,100, the figures of the Budget Estimate for 1897-98, showing an increase of Rx. 3,400 only.

Before allusion is made to the work of the Army Departments under the administrative control of the Military Department, it may be well to show, in a concise form, the strength of the forces put into the field in the North-Western Frontier. If these are totalled up, the number of troops would amount to nearly 70,000. But this would be misleading as, for example, the Tirah Force absorbed a considerable portion of the Mohmand Force, and the Buner Field Force was practically the largest portion of the Malakand Field Force. The highest strength (about 55,000) of troops actually in the field was reached in October. Those who understand what the organisation, equipment, transport, and supply of such forces mean for operations in countries where, in the main, only pack transport can be used, will appreciate the work which had to be done :—

	British officers.	European ranks.	Native ranks.
Tochi Force in the field, from 19th June 1897 to 18th February 1898	190	1,648	5,468
Malakand Field Force in the field, from 30th July 1897 to 4th February 1898	248	2,738	7,435
Mohmand Field Force in the field, from 2nd September 1897 to 6th October 1897 . . .	272	2,658	7,694
Tirah Expeditionary Force in the field, from 3rd September 1897 to date	983	10,880	24,074
Buner Field Force in the field, from 1st January 1898 to 4th February 1898	161	2,156	5,159

The past year has been one of great activity for the departments of the Army in consequence of the demands on their resources resulting from the extensive operations on the North-West Frontier. The Commissariat-Transport Department has been subjected to a specially severe strain, which has been all the more trying in consequence of the paucity of officers. I have already alluded to the provision in the Budget of 1898-99 for an increase in this department, a step of which the necessity has been shown by the events of the last nine months, and the details of which are now being considered.

Commissariat-Transport Department.

The work done by the department has been mainly in connection with the field operations, and the extent to which its resources have been taxed, will perhaps be more easily understood, if it be borne in mind that over 80,000 transport animals were required as compared with about 14,000 animals available from the permanent Government transport maintained, and that during the period of their employment men and animals consumed about 200,000 tons of food supplies (exclusive of firewood), the greater part of which had to be collected and despatched from India.

The ordinary work of the department has also progressed satisfactorily during the year. The bakery classes, which were alluded to last year, have been extended, and this, together with other measures under consideration, will tend to further improve the comfort of British soldiers in India.

Various measures are in train in Burma for the reduction of Commissariat expenditure. The purchase of mules locally instead of importing them from India has resulted in considerable economy, and we now propose to purchase locally bred bullocks for work in Burma.

Army Clothing Department

In the Clothing Department considerable improvements have been effected in the standard of locally manufactured cloths and serges,—a result which is principally due to the expert advice tendered by the department to manufacturers.

In addition to meeting the usual annual demands for clothing, the Army Clothing Factories at Alipore and Madras have during the past year manufactured over 300,000 garments for the army in the field.

Ordnance Department

I expressed a hope last year in my speech on the financial statement that the experimental manufacture of cordite would shortly commence. The results of the experiment were most satisfactory. In October a reel of Kirkee-made cordite was sent to England to be tested, and the report of the trial, which was received last month from the War Office, encourages us to hope that this important manufacture may be largely developed, and will result both in economy and increased efficiency.

In order to provide a central authority for the expeditious and economical supply of stores to the arsenals and depots in India, the whole of the Ordnance factories have recently been placed under the direct control of the Director-General of Ordnance.

As has been the case with all the Army Departments, the Ordnance Department has been severely taxed during the last nine months to meet the demands of the troops in the field. The troops have been supplied with ammunition and stores without a hitch, the equipment of the batteries of artillery on field service has been simplified and improved, and the British Infantry have been supplied with a cartridge firing a bullet manufactured in India.

Army Remount Department

In the Remount Department changes have been made with a view to the more convenient location of the reserve of horses, while at the same time all country-bred young stock in Northern India has been collected at one depot. As I noticed last year the purchases of country-bred horses have been somewhat curtailed, in order to ensure a more satisfactory percentage being found fit for mounting British cavalry.

The department has been very successful in meeting all demands resulting from the field operations, with the important exception of Ordnance mules. In this respect the requirement of batteries have indeed been met, but only by issuing animals hardly mature enough for work, and by using a few country-bred horses as a temporary measure. I mentioned last year that the difficulty of obtaining mature mules of the required standards in India would necessitate some purchases of Italian animals. An officer was sent to Italy for this purpose and succeeded in buying 250 mules within the price estimated; but this course is expensive, besides being opposed to our consistent policy of developing Indian resources wherever possible in preference to going abroad. It is therefore proposed to increase our purchases of young mules in India, and by keeping the stock a year or two at the depots, to provide a constant supply of suitable animals fit for immediate work. We hope to be able to obtain some Ordnance mules in Burma for work in that country. The subject of developing mule-breeding in India is receiving earnest consideration.

Medical Department (Medical Store Depots).

In the medical store depots satisfactory progress has been made towards improved mobilisation arrangements; while at the same time the increased requirements of the depots have been met to a greater extent than ever by local manufactures.

The department met the severe strain occasioned by the frontier expeditions with satisfactory promptitude. The Bengal depot alone provided all the stores to complete the equipment of nineteen field hospitals, and on receipt of orders for mobilisation the first hospital, fully equipped, was put on board the train within 24 hours, and eight more hospitals in eight days, besides the despatch of large supplies of drugs, etc., etc. Altogether 36½ field hospitals and two medical store depots were equipped for service from the several depots, together with general hospitals, aggregating 1,400 beds for British and 1,900 beds for Native troops.

Sanitary.

The continued prevalence of enteric fever amongst the British troops has continued to occupy our very serious attention, and in this connection sanction has been given to the appointment of three specially qualified medical officers, whose sole duty shall be to investigate the causes of disease and give advice on sanitary matters.

The Military Works Department has provided 20 Royal Engineer officers for famine duties and 38 for field service, and for the armies in the field has supplied stores, tools, and furniture amounting to 1¾ lakhs in value, and has expended 1½ lakhs on construction of roads.

The Marine Department shows satisfactory work during the year, although the outturn of the Bombay Dockyard has been below the average in consequence of the paralysing effects of plague. The trooping service has been effectually performed and troops have on two occasions been despatched with great expedition to Mombassa. It has been decided to make to each of the officers of the Warren Hastings a special allowance of Rs. 480—a sum corresponding to that which was granted in England to the military officers on board the vessel when she was wrecked. The financial year closes with the departure of Rear-Admiral Sir John Hext, who for fifteen years has administered the Royal Indian Marine with conspicuous success.

[Supplement to the Financial Statement.]

The Railway Conference of 1897 met at Viceregal Lodge, Simla, on the 20th and 25th of August and the 8th of September 1897, and was constituted as noted in the margin. An additional member—a representative of the Revenue and Agricultural Department—was this year included, in order that the proposals for famine protective railways might be fully and specially considered with reference to the valuable experience afforded by the failure of the monsoon of 1896.

PRESIDENT:
His Excellency the Viceroy.
MEMBERS:
The Honourable Sir James Westland, K.C.S.I.
The Honourable Mr. A. C. Trevor, C.S.I.
Colonel Sir W. S. S. Bisset, R.E., K.C.I.E., Secy. to the Govt. of India, P. W. Dept.
Colonel T. Gracey, R.E., C.S.I., Director General of Railways.
Lieut.-Col. F. J. Aylmer, R.E., V.C., Offg. Assistant Q.M.G. in India.
Mr. T. W. Holderness, I.C.S., Depy. Secy. to the Govt. of India, R. & A. Dept.

SECRETARY:
Mr. G. A. Anderson, Under Secy. to the Govt. of India, P. W. Dept. (Railway Branch).

2. About 33 new projects were considered, of which 16 were set aside, 3 were recommended for construction by Branch Line Companies, and 5 for construction by Native States or private promoters without financial assistance. The remaining nine were held over as not yet ripe for a decision.

Those recommended for construction were the following:—

No.	Name.	Length.	Approximate cost omitting 000.	Locality.
		Miles.	Rs.
	I.—By Branch Line Companies.
1	Nadiad-Kapadvanj	28	8,74	Branch of Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, Bombay.
2	Conoor-Ootacamund	12	15,00	Extension of Nilgiri Railway, Madras.
3	Mutupet-Avadyarkoil	45	15,00	Extension of Mayavaram-Mutupet Railway, Madras.
	Total	85	38,74
	II.—By Native States.
1	Ludhiana-Dhuri-Jakhal	80	4,00,00	Chord between North Western Railway and Southern Punjab Railway passing through States of Jhind and Maler Kotla.
2	Pardi-Nandod	20	8,40	Extension of Ankleshwar-Pardi (Rajpipla) branch of Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway in Guzerat.
3	Wadhwan-Dhranghadra	21	6,62	Branch of Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway in Kathiawar.
	Total	121	4,15,02
	III.—By Private Promoters.

6	Madura-Pamban	100	42,00	Madras. Extension of South Indian Railway.

4. Of the nine lines recommended for construction by, or on the responsibility of, Government, No. 3, the Cooch Behar-Buxa line, has been accepted as urgent, for the reason that it opens up stone supplies, access to which will greatly lessen the cost of the Teesta and Dhurlla bridges and other works in the neighbourhood. Provision has been made for its commencement within the programme, and the work will be pushed on simultaneously with the completion of the line within the limits of Cooch Behar, which is being carried out at the cost of the Durbar, with the assistance of a loan from Government. No. 4 has been estimated for and sanctioned, and should its construction be finally determined on, a place will be found for it, if possible, within the current programme. The remainder are under consideration or negotiation.

5. As was explained last year, the extent to which effect can be given to the recommendations of the Conference in regard to Capital expenditure on railways other than such as are made by Branch Line Companies under the terms of Government of India Resolution No. 514 R.C., dated 17th April 1896, or by Native States or private promoters without financial assistance, is governed by the limitations of a programme covering the three years 1896-97 to 1898-99, and providing, as originally settled, for a total expenditure of Rs. 29,66,00,000 during that period. Of this sum Rs. 8,65,87,000 were expended up to the end of the first year 1896-97, leaving Rs. 21,00,13,000 for expenditure in 1897-98 and 1898-99, out of which Rs. 10,13,00,000 were provided in the Budget for the year 1897-98. It was recognized, however, that with every wish to work up to the original programme the possibility of doing so must, under the special circumstances of the time, be a question of ways and means, and in consequence of the depletion of the cash balances and the heavy war expenditure, superadded to other demands, it was found necessary to cut down the grants for the current year by a crore leaving the grant at Rs. 9,13,00,000, and to recommend to the Secretary of State a reduction of 1¾ crores in the total contemplated expenditure up to the end of 1898-99. The operations of the Department and of the Railway Companies have been further affected by the disturbance caused by the restrictions on expenditure which it was found necessary as above explained to impose in the course of the year, by the non-delivery of material owing to the Engineering Strikes in England and by other causes, with the result that this year's expenditure is now estimated at Rs. 8,41,44,000 only, leaving a balance of Rs. 10,83,69,000 out of the reduced programme of Rs. 27,91,00,000 for which provision has been made in the Budget for 1898-99.

The reduction in the total amount of the programme, it will be observed, has already been approximately covered by the short expenditure as compared with the original forecast in the year now ending, which has occurred chiefly on the Bengal-Nagpur, the Assam Bengal, the Burma Railways, and in open line expenditure on State Railways.

6. Statement A appended to this memorandum gives the programme as modified up to date and shows also the progress made with such of the lines accepted by Government on the recommendation of the Conference for early construction as have been brought within the programme. The distribution of the amount it shows as available for expenditure in 1898-99, will, of course, be liable to modification according to circumstances.

7. Statements B and C show how matters stand in regard to lines recommended for early construction at the cost of Branch Line Companies, Native States, etc., outside the programme, and either actually taken in hand or under consideration and negotiation with a view to construction: and Statement D summarises the actual and anticipated progress of Railway construction generally for the two years 1897-98 and 1898-99.

Government of India, Public Works Department, notification No. 4, dated the 6th January 1898—published in Part I of the Gazette of India of the 8th January 1898—appointing the Director of Railway Traffic and Deputy Secretary to the Government of India, Public Works Department, Railway Branch, as the officer who, in the case of a railway administered by Government, is to make General Rules under section 47 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890.

Letter No. 107 T., dated the 1st March 1898, from the Director of Railway Traffic.

OBSERVATIONS.—The Director of Railway Traffic has applied that the following modifications of rules 231 and 232, Part I, of the General Rules for working open lines of railway in British India, which have been published under the Government of India, Public Works Department, notification No. 118, dated the 21st March 1895 (vide the Gazette of India of the 23rd March 1895), as modified by the Government of India circular No. 3 Ry., dated the 22nd May 1896, which was published under the Government of India, Public Works Department, notification No. 257, dated the 28th May 1896, (vide the Gazette of India of the 30th May 1896), may be made applicable to all lines of railway in British India administered by the Government :—

"Rule 231.—The above rules 226—230 apply only to vehicles which can, when unloaded, be lifted off the line by a proper complement of men, and do not apply to any vehicle which cannot be so lifted and which has consequently to be run to a station to allow trains to pass. When such a vehicle is propelled between stations otherwise than as part of a train, rules 62, 63, 64, 65, 66 and 67 governing the running of ballast trains shall be applicable, the person in charge being responsible for the duties therein prescribed for guards."

"Rule 232.—Except in cases of accident or of absolute necessity all repairs or other work must be completed and the line made clear and safe for the passage of trains not less than ten minutes before the next train is due to enter the section at either end, or, on lines worked on the " absolute block" system, not less than five minutes before the train is due to enter the section from either end."

RESOLUTION.—The Governor General in Council is pleased, under section 47 (4) of the Indian Railways Act (IX) of 1890, to sanction the application to all lines of railway in British India administered by the Government of the modifications of rules 231 and 232 of the open line General Rules of 1895 cited in the foregoing observations.

The Governor General in Council also desires that the said amended rules may be brought to the notice of the administrations of the several railways not administered by the Government, and that the Agents and Managers of those railways may be invited to submit formal applications for their adoption.

RESOLUTION.—The Governor General in Council is pleased, under section 47 (4) of the Indian Railways Act, IX of 1890, to sanction the application to such portions of the Southern Mahratta railway, and to the railways worked by it, as are situate in British territory, of the modification of rule 110 of the open line General Rules of 1895 cited in the foregoing observations.

ORDER.—Ordered that this resolution be published under a notification in Part I of the Gazette of India, as required by section 47, sub-section (3), of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 also that the General Rules referred to in the foregoing observations—which have already been published in the Gazette of India—with rule 110 as herein modified, be kept at railway stations as directed by sub-section (6) of the same section.

Ordered, also, that this resolution be communicated to the Government of Bombay, for information and guidance.

The 24th March, 1898.

NOTICES.

All communications relating to Act V (the Inventions and Designs Act) of 1888 should be addressed to the "Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue and Agriculture (PATENTS BRANCH), CALCUTTA".

The office of the Secretary under the Act is open for the transaction of business from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. on all days except Sundays and gazetted holidays.

The Government of India are advised that, as trade marks are not "designs" within the meaning of the Act, they cannot be registered under Part II.

The fees payable under the fourth and sixth schedules are now collected in cash, and applicants are warned that they must be responsible for any delay in cashing cheques.

Copies of the weekly notifications, and of the quarterly lists, of applications and specifications filed in the Secretary's office are now on sale to the public at one anna and eight annas a copy, respectively.

Attention is requested to the rules made by the Government on the 10th October, 1895, in regard to the preparation of applications, specifications and drawings.

All applications made under the Inventions and Designs Act, V of 1888, will from this date (December 19th, 1896) lie in the visitors' room of the Patents Office for ten days from the date of the Gazette of India in which their filing may have been notified; or, if the tenth day is a holiday, till the evening of the office day next following.

At the time of delivering or sending an application for leave to file a specification, the applicant shall cause a duplicate copy of the application to be delivered or sent therewith to the Secretary.

A. T. PRINGLE,
Offg. Secy. under the Inventions and Designs Act, 1888.

The 22nd March 1898.

STEPHEN JACOB,
Comptroller-General.

THE RESIDENT IN MYSORE.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Bangalore, the 14th March, 1898.

No. 1275.—In exercise of the powers conferred by sections 8 (2), 8 (3), 9 (2), 175 (1), clause (b) to (h) and 175 (2) of the Bangalore Municipal Law, 1897, and in supersession of the existing rules, the Resident in Mysore is pleased to make the following rules :—

1. Under sections 8 (1) and 19 (2) the Municipal Commission is to consist of a President, a Medical Officer, and twenty-four other Commissioners. Of these twenty-four Commissioners, six will be appointed by the Resident, either by name or by office, and eighteen shall be elected as hereinafter provided.

Every elected Commissioner shall hold office for a term of two years, and every Commissioner appointed by the Resident by name shall hold office for a term of three years.

Provided that any member elected or appointed to fill a casual vacancy shall hold his seat for the time for, and subject to the conditions upon, which it was tenable by the person in whose place he has been so elected or appointed, and no longer.

2. For the purposes of these rules, the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore shall be divided into the following wards or divisions, namely :—

No	Ward or division.
1.	Alsur.
2.	Southern Division.
3.	East General Bazaar.
4.	West General Bazaar.
5	Cleveland Town.
6.	High Ground.

3. All the inhabitants of the Station shall, for the purposes of these Rules, be divided into the following three classes —

1. Europeans and Eurasians ;
2. Mahomedans ;
3. Hindus and others ; and each such class shall elect separately its own representatives.

4. The number of Commissioners to be elected by each class and for each division shall be as follows :—

Division	Classes			Total No of Commissioners
	Europeans and Eurasians	Mahomedans	Hindus and others
1. Alsur	1	...	1	2
2 Southern Division	1	1	1	3
3 East General Bazaar	1	1	2	4
4. West General Bazaar	1	1	2	4
5. Cleveland Town	1	...	1	2
6. High Ground	1	1	1	3
Total	6	4	8	18

5. In order to be qualified for election as a Commissioner, a person must—

(a) be of the male sex ;

(b) have completed his twenty-fifth year ;

(c) have a sufficient knowledge of the English language to be able to speak to a motion or to follow debates in that language ;

(d) be, at the time of the preparation of the lists required by Rule 14, a resident within municipal limits, and

(e) be, at the said time, the occupier, as owner, mortgagee or tenant, of a house within such limits, which is valued for assessment purposes at not less than Rupees thirty per mensem ; or have paid, on his own behalf, for the year immediately preceding the said time, municipal taxes of one or more kinds noted in the margin, or Government land revenue, to the aggregate amount not less than twenty rupees.

(a) Tax on carriages, horses or other animals.
(b) Tax upon arts professions, trades or callings.
(c) Tax on houses, buildings or lands, according to the annual value thereof, whether for general purposes or for water-supply.

Provided that when an undivided Hindu family has paid double the taxes or land revenue herein mentioned, any one member thereof, having the other qualifications required, shall be eligible to be elected a Commissioner.

Provided also that no person shall be elected a Commissioner unless his name has been previously entered as a person qualified for election in the lists referred to in Rule 19.

6. A person shall be disqualified for election as a Commissioner if he—

(a) is an officer or servant of the Municipal Commission; or

(b) is an uncertificated bankrupt or an undischarged insolvent; or

(c) has been convicted of any such offence, or has been subjected by a Criminal Court to any such order as implies, in the opinion of the District Magistrate, a defect of character which unfits him to be a Commissioner; or

(d) has been declared by notification in any Government Gazette to be disqualified for employment in, or has been dismissed from the public service; or

(e) is disqualified under section 11, Sub-section 2, of the Municipal Law; or

(f) is interested, otherwise than as a share-holder in a Joint-Stock Company, in any contract made with, or work done for, the Commission.

A share or interest in a newspaper in which any advertisement relating to the affairs of the Municipal Commission may be inserted, is not a disqualification within the meaning of this clause.

7. In order to be qualified to vote in the election of Commissioners a person must—

(a) be of the male sex;

(b) have completed his twenty-first year;

(c) be able to read and write his vernacular language; and

(d) at the time of the preparation of the lists required by Rule 14, fulfil one of the following conditions, namely:—he must—

(i) be the bonâ fide owner, in his own right, of a house, building or land, situate within the division for the Commissioner of which he desires to vote, and have paid for the preceding year the municipal tax noted in the margin or Government land revenue, to the aggregate amount of five rupees; or

> Tax on houses, buildings or lands according to the annual value thereof whether for general purposes or for water-supply.

(ii) be residing within the division for the Commissioner of which he desires to vote, and have paid for the preceding year municipal taxes of one or more of the kinds noted in the margin to the aggregate amount of not less than five rupees; or

> (a) Tax on carriages, horses or other animals.
> (b) Tax upon arts, professions, trades or callings.

(iii) have been for the period of twelve months immediately preceding the said time, the occupier, as owner, mortgagee or tenant, of a house situate within the division for the Commissioner of which he desires to vote, and valued for assessment purposes at not less than eight rupees per mensem; or

(iv) be a graduate of some University in the United Kingdom, or the British Colonies or India, and be resident within the limits of the division for the Commissioner of which he desires to vote; or

(v) be the Secretary of, or some other person duly authorised in that behalf by, any company which is registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1882, or under any Act of Parliament, which has its registered office or other place of business in the division for the Commissioner of which he desires to vote, and which has for the preceding year paid taxes under the Municipal Law to the aggregate amount of not less than twenty-five rupees; or

(vi) be a person duly authorised in that behalf by a firm which has its place of business in the division for the Commissioner of which he desires to vote and which has, for the preceding year, paid taxes under the Municipal Law to the aggregate amount of not less than twenty-five rupees.

Provided that if any dispute arises as to the class in which a Company or a firm shall be placed for the purposes of voting, under rule 3, the decision of the President thereon shall be final.

Provided also that no person shall vote unless his name has been previously entered as a person qualified to vote in the lists referred to in Rule 19.

8. A general election of Commissioners shall take place every second year on any day or days in the month of November that may be fixed by the Resident.

Every candidate for election shall cause to be delivered to the President, on or before the 24th October, a notice in writing showing his name and the division for which he proposes to stand, together with the names of two voters in such division, and in his own class, who respectively propose and second his candidature, and of eight other such voters who approve his nomination.

The President shall publish a list of such candidates in one or more of the local newspapers, and shall also post to each voter the name or names of the candidate or candidates for his division and class.

If the number of candidates for any division in any class exceeds the number of Commissioners thereunto allotted, the election shall be determined by vote in such place and manner as shall from time to time be directed by the Resident.

9. Where an equality of votes is found to exist between any two or more candidates at any election under these rules, and the addition of a vote would entitle one of such candidates to be elected a Commissioner, the President may give such additional vote, and the candidate to whom such additional vote has been given shall thereupon be held to be elected a Commissioner.

10. No person shall be considered as elected unless he has secured the votes of at least one-sixth of the total number of persons entitled to vote for his election.

11. If no candidate presents himself for election in any class of any division, or if no candidate secures the minimum number of votes required, the Resident will appoint a Commissioner to fill the vacant place. The Commissioner so appointed shall, notwithstanding anything contained in Rule 1, hold office for a period of two years only.

12. Whoever by any gift or reward, or by any promise or agreement or security for any gift or reward, induces any person to give or forbear to give his vote in any election, shall be deemed to be guilty of corruption; and whoever by threatening another with any injury to his person, reputation or property, or to the person, reputation or property of any one in whom that person is interested, makes that person give or forbear to give his vote in any election, shall be deemed to be guilty of intimidation.

13. Whenever any allegation of corrupt practices or intimidation at an election is made by a person qualified to vote or to be elected a Commissioner at such election, the same shall be enquired into by the President, who shall submit a report thereof, together with his proceedings in the case, to the Resident. If upon a perusal of such report and proceedings, the Resident finds that the person against whom the allegation is made, has been guilty of corruption or intimidation, or has connived at or abetted the exercise of corruption or intimidation on his behalf by any other person, he may declare such election to be void.

Any person whose election has been rendered void under this rule, shall be deemed disqualified for election for a period of five years.

14. Lists of persons qualified to be elected and to vote under Rules 5, 6 and 7, shall, not later than the 30th day of April preceding each general election, be prepared by the President, printed and published. There shall be one such list for each of the classes referred to in Rule 3, and such list shall show separately the names of persons qualified to vote and to stand for election in each division.

15. The President shall publish such lists by affixing copies thereof in some conspicuous place in or near the Municipal Office and in each division. The President shall give notice of such publication in one or more of the local newspapers, and the said lists shall be open to public inspection, at all reasonable times of the day, for fifteen days after the date of publication of such notice. Copies of such lists shall be supplied to the public at the Municipal Office at cost price

16. (a) Any person whose name is not in the lists so published, and who claims to have it inserted therein may, within 15 days after such publication, give notice in writing of his claim to the President.

(b) Any person whose name is in the lists may object to any other person as not being entitled to have his name retained therein. Every person objecting shall, within fifteen days from the date of publication of the lists, give to the President notice in writing of the objection and of the nature thereof.

17. The President assisted by three or more Commissioners shall hear and determine the claims and objections which have been duly made as aforesaid, in open office, giving three clear days' notice of the holding of the enquiry by written notice served upon each claimant, person objecting and person objected to. In the event of a difference of opinion the matter shall be determined by the opinion of the majority, the President having a casting vote.

The President and the said Commissioners shall insert in the lists the name of every person who has duly claimed to have his name inserted therein, and whose claim is proved to their satisfaction, and they shall expunge from the lists the name of every person proved to be not qualified to be retained therein. They may also correct any clerical error or omission in the lists.

The President and the said Commissioners may adjourn the hearing of any matter under this rule from time to time, but they shall dispose of all claims and objections by the fifteenth day of August.

18. In the event of the President and the said Commissioners rejecting any claim or objection under the last preceding rule, the claimant or objector, and in the event of their accepting any objection, the person aggrieved, may at any time within fifteen days after such rejection or acceptance, appeal to the officer holding the appointment of District Judge, and such officer shall, within 30 days after receipt of such appeal, and after such enquiry as he deems necessary, make such order for correcting the lists or otherwise as shall seem to him fit, and his order shall be final and binding

19. The lists thus prepared and amended shall remain in force for a period of two years, and printed copies of such lists shall be obtainable on payment of such reasonable fee as may from time to time be prescribed by the President in this behalf.

20 Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing rules, it shall be open to any person qualified under Rules 5, 6 and 7, on the occurrence of a vacancy which is to be filled by a special election, to apply to the President within a reasonable time before the date fixed for such election, to have his name inserted in the lists referred to in Rule 19. The President may pass such order thereon as he thinks fit, and his order shall be final.

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

PUBLISHED UNDER AUTHORITY.

The Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and comprise four series,—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta Series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt, and the Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, respectively.

In supersession of the previous advertisements, on and from the 1st January, 1889, the terms of subscription and sale will be as follows for current issues, as well as for back numbers of the Reports from 1876 :—

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.
(Part I.—Preliminary. Chapter I.—Sections 1-4.)

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

CHAPTER I.

Short title. Commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898; and it shall come into force on the first day of July, 1898.

Extent.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India; but, in the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, nothing herein contained shall affect any special or local law now in force, or any special jurisdiction or power conferred, or any special form of procedure prescribed, by any other law for the time being in force, or shall apply to—

(a) the Commissioners of Police in the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, or the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay;

(b) heads of villages in the Presidency of Fort St. George; or

(c) village police-officers in the Presidency of Bombay:

Provided that the Local Government may, if it thinks fit, with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification in the official Gazette, extend any of the provisions of this Code, with any necessary modifications, to such excepted persons.

Repeal of enactments.

2. (1) On and from the first day of July, 1898, the enactments mentioned in the first schedule shall be repealed to the extent specified in the fourth column thereof, but not so as to restore any jurisdiction or form of procedure not then existing or followed, or to render unlawful the continuance of any confinement which is then lawful.

Notifications, etc., under repealed Acts.

(2) All notifications published, proclamations issued, powers conferred, forms prescribed, local limits defined, sentences passed and orders, rules and appointments made, under any enactment hereby repealed, or under any enactment repealed by any such enactment, and which are in force immediately before the first day of July, 1898, shall be deemed to have been respectively published, issued, conferred, prescribed, defined, passed and made under the corresponding section of this Code.

Pending cases.

(3) The provisions of this Code shall apply to all proceedings instituted after the commencement of this Code, and, so far as may be, to all cases pending in any Criminal Court when this Code comes into force.

References to Code of Criminal Procedure and other repealed enactments.

3. (1) In every enactment passed before this Code comes into force, in which reference is made to, or to any Chapter or section of, the Code of Criminal Procedure, Act XXV of 1861 or Act X of 1872, or Act X of 1882, or to any other enactment hereby repealed, such reference shall, so far as may be practicable, be taken to be made to this Code or to its corresponding Chapter or section.

Expressions in former Acts.

(2) In every enactment passed before this Code comes into force the expressions "Officer exercising (or 'having') the powers (or 'the full powers') of a Magistrate," "Subordinate Magistrate, first class," and "Subordinate Magistrate, second class," shall respectively be deemed to mean "Magistrate of the first class," "Magistrate of the second class" and "Magistrate of the third class," the expression "Magistrate of a division of a district" shall be deemed to mean "Subdivisional Magistrate," the expression "Magistrate of the district" shall be deemed to mean "District Magistrate," the expression "Magistrate of Police" shall be deemed to mean "Presidency Magistrate," and the expression "Joint Sessions Judge" shall mean "Additional Sessions Judge."

(2) The Local Government may alter the limits, or, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, the number, of such divisions and districts.

Power to alter divisions and districts.

(3) The sessions divisions and districts existing when this Code comes into force shall be sessions divisions and districts respectively, unless and until they are so altered.

Existing divisions and districts maintained till altered.

(4) Every presidency-town shall, for the purposes of this Code, be deemed to be a district.

Presidency-towns to be deemed districts.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part II.—Constitution and Powers of Criminal Courts and Offices. Chapter II.—Of the Constitution of Criminal Courts and Offices.—Sections 8-15.)

Power to divide districts into subdivisions.

8. (1) The Local Government may divide any district outside the presidency-towns into subdivisions, or make any portion of any such district a subdivision, and may alter the limits of any subdivision.

Existing subdivisions maintained.

(2) All existing subdivisions which are now usually put under the charge of a Magistrate shall be deemed to have been made under this Code.

C.—Courts and Offices outside the Presidency-towns.

Court of Session.

9. (1) The Local Government shall establish a Court of Session for every sessions division, and appoint a Judge of such Court.

(2) The Local Government may, by general or special order in the official Gazette, direct at what place or places the Court of Session shall hold its sitting; but, until such order be made, the Courts of Session shall hold their sittings as heretofore.

(3) The Local Government may also appoint Additional Sessions Judges, and Assistant Sessions Judges to exercise jurisdiction in one or more such Courts.

(4) A Sessions Judge of one sessions division may be appointed by the Local Government to be also an Additional Sessions Judge of another division, and in such case he may sit for the disposal of cases at such place or places in either division as the Local Government may direct.

(5) All Courts of Session existing when this Code comes into force shall be deemed to have been established under this Act.

District Magistrate.

10. (1) In every district outside the presidency-towns the Local Government shall appoint a Magistrate of the first class, who shall be called the District Magistrate.

(2) The Local Government may appoint any Magistrate of the first class to be an Additional District Magistrate for a period not exceeding six months, and such Additional District Magistrate shall have all or any of the powers of a District Magistrate under this Code as the Local Government may direct.

Officers temporarily succeeding to vacancies in office of District Magistrate.

11. Whenever, in consequence of the office of a District Magistrate becoming vacant, any officer succeeds temporarily to the chief executive administration of the district, such officer shall, pending the orders of the Local Government, exercise all the powers and perform all the duties respectively conferred and imposed by this Code on the District Magistrate.

Subordinate Magistrates.

12. (1) The Local Government may appoint as many persons as it thinks fit, besides the District Magistrate, to be Magistrates of the first, second or third class in any district outside the presidency-towns; and the Local Government, or the District Magistrate subject to the control of the Local Government, may, from time to time, define local areas within which such persons may exercise all or any of the powers with which they may respectively be invested under this Code.

Local limits of their jurisdiction.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by such definition, the jurisdiction and powers of such persons shall extend throughout such district.

Power to put Magistrate in charge of subdivision.

13. (1) The Local Government may place any Magistrate of the first or second class in charge of a subdivision, and relieve him of the charge as occasion requires.

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Subdivisional Magistrates.

Delegation of powers to District Magistrate.

(3) The Local Government may delegate its powers under this section to the District Magistrate.

Special Magistrates.

14. (1) The Local Government may confer upon any person all or any of the powers conferred or conferrable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first, second or third class in respect to particular cases or to a particular class or particular classes of cases, or in regard to cases generally, in any local area outside the presidency-towns.

(2) Such Magistrates shall be called Special Magistrates, and shall be appointed for such term as the Local Government may by general or special order direct.

(3) With the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, the Local Government may delegate, with such limitations as it thinks fit, to any officer under its control the power conferred by sub-section (1).

(4) No powers shall be conferred under this section on any police-officer below the grade of Assistant District Superintendent, and no powers shall be conferred on a police-officer except so far as may be necessary for preserving the peace, preventing crime and detecting, apprehending and detaining offenders in order to their being brought before a Magistrate, and for the performance by the officer of any other duties imposed upon him by any law for the time being in force.

Benches of Magistrates.

15. (1) The Local Government may direct any two or more Magistrates in any place outside the presidency-towns to sit together as a Bench, and may by order invest such Bench with any of the

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part II.—Constitution and Powers of Criminal Courts and Offices. Chapter II.—Of the Constitution of Criminal Courts and Offices.—Sections 16-21.)

powers conferred or conferrable by or under this Code on a Magistrate of the first, second or third class, and direct it to exercise such powers in such cases, or such classes of cases only, and within such local limits, as the Local Government thinks fit.

Powers exerciseable by Bench in absence of special direction.

(2) Except as otherwise provided by any order under this section, every such Bench shall have the powers conferred by this Code on a Magistrate of the highest class to which any one of its members, who is present taking part in the proceedings as a member of the Bench, belongs, and as far as practicable shall, for the purposes of this Code, be deemed to be a Magistrate of such class.

Power to frame rules for guidance of Benches.

16. The Local Government may, or, subject to the control of the Local Government, the District Magistrate may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Code for the guidance of Magistrates' Benches in any district respecting the following subjects:—

(a) the classes of cases to be tried;

(b) the times and places of sitting;

(c) the constitution of the Bench for conducting trials;

(d) the mode of settling differences of opinion which may arise between the Magistrates in session.

Subordination of Magistrates and Benches to District Magistrate;

17. (1) All Magistrates appointed under sections 12, 13 and 14, and all Benches constituted under section 15, shall be subordinate to the District Magistrate, and he may, from time to time, make rules or give special orders consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among such Magistrates and Benches; and to Subdivisional Magistrate.

(2) Every Magistrate (other than a Subdivisional Magistrate) and every Bench exercising powers in a subdivision shall also be subordinate to the Subdivisional Magistrate, subject, however, to the general control of the District Magistrate.

Subordination of Assistant Sessions Judges to Sessions Judge.

(3) All Assistant Sessions Judges shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge in whose Court they exercise jurisdiction, and he may, from time to time, make rules consistent with this Code as to the distribution of business among such Assistant Sessions Judges.

(4) The Sessions Judge may also, when he himself is unavoidably absent or incapable of acting, make provision for the disposal of any urgent application by an Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge or, if there be no Additional or Assistant Judge, by the District Magistrate, and such Judge or Magistrate shall have jurisdiction to deal with any such application.

(5) Neither the District Magistrate nor the Magistrates or Benches appointed or constituted under sections 12, 13, 14 and 15 shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge, except to the extent and in the manner hereinafter expressly provided.

D.—Courts of Presidency Magistrates.

Appointment of Presidency Magistrates.

18. (1) The Local Government shall, from time to time, appoint a sufficient number of persons (hereinafter called Presidency Magistrates) to be Magistrates for each of the presidency-towns, and shall appoint one of such persons to be Chief Presidency Magistrate for each such town.

(2) The powers of a Presidency Magistrate under this Code shall be exercised by the Chief Presidency Magistrate, or by a salaried Presidency Magistrate, or by any other Presidency Magistrate empowered by the Local Government to sit singly, or by any Bench of Presidency Magistrates.

Benches.

19. Any two or more of such persons may (subject to the rules made by the Chief Presidency Magistrate under the power hereinafter conferred) sit together as a Bench.

Local limits of jurisdiction.

20. Every Presidency Magistrate shall exercise jurisdiction in all places within the presidency-town for which he is appointed, and within the limits of the port of such town and of any navigable river or channel leading thereto, as such limits are defined under the law for the time being in force for the regulation of ports and port-dues.

Chief Presidency Magistrate.

21. (1) Every Chief Presidency Magistrate shall exercise within the local limits of his jurisdiction all the powers conferred on him by this Code or which by any law or rule in force immediately before this Code comes into force are required to be exercised by any Senior or Chief Presidency Magistrate, and may, from time to time, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, make rules consistent with this Code to regulate—

(a) the conduct and distribution of business and the practice in the Courts of the Magistrates of the town;

(b) the times and places at which Benches of Magistrates shall sit;

(c) the constitution of such Benches;

(d) the mode of settling differences of opinion which may arise between Magistrates in session; and

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part II.—Constitution and Powers of Criminal Courts and Offices. Chapter II.—Of the Constitution of Criminal Courts and Offices.—Sections 22-27. Chapter III.—Powers of Courts.—Sections 28-29.)

(e) any other matter which could be dealt with by a District Magistrate under his general powers of control over the Magistrates subordinate to him.

(2) The Local Government may, for the purposes of this Code, declare what Presidency Magistrates are subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, and may define the extent of their subordination.

E.—Justices of the Peace.

Justices of the Peace for the Mufassal.

22. The Governor General in Council, so far as regards the whole or any part of British India outside the presidency-towns.

and every Local Government, so far as regards the territories subject to its administration (other than the towns aforesaid), may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint such European British subjects as he or it thinks fit to be Justices of the Peace within and for the territories mentioned in such notification.

Justices of the Peace for the presidency-towns.

23. The Local Government, so far as regards the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint to be Justices of the Peace within the limits of the town mentioned in such notification any persons resident within British India and not being the subjects of any foreign State whom the Local Government thinks fit.

Present Justices of the Peace.

24. (1) Every person now acting as a Justice of the Peace within and for any part of British India other than the said towns, under any commission issued by a High Court, shall be deemed to have been appointed under section 22 by the Governor General in Council to act as a Justice of the Peace for the whole of British India other than the said towns.

(2) Every person now acting as a Justice of the Peace within the limits of any of the said towns under any such commission shall be deemed to have been appointed under section 23 by the Local Government.

Ex officio Justices of the Peace.

25. In virtue of their respective offices, the Governor General, Governors, Lieutenant-Governors and Chief Commissioners, the Ordinary Members of the Council of the Governor General, the Judges of the High Courts and the Recorder of Rangoon are Justices of the Peace within and for the whole of British India, Sessions Judges and District Magistrates are Justices of the Peace within and for the whole of the territories administered by the Local Government under which they are serving, and the Presidency Magistrates are Justices of the Peace within and for the towns of which they are respectively Magistrates

F.—Suspension and Removal.

Suspension and removal of Judges and Magistrates.

26. All Judges of Criminal Courts other than the High Courts established by Royal Charter, and all Magistrates, may be suspended or removed from office by the Local Government:

Provided that such Judges and Magistrates as now are liable to be suspended or removed from office by the Governor General in Council only shall not be suspended or removed from office by any other authority.

Suspension and removal of Justices of the Peace.

27. The Governor General in Council may suspend or remove from office any Justice of the Peace appointed by him, and the Local Government may suspend or remove from office any Justice of the Peace appointed by it.

CHAPTER III.

POWERS OF COURTS.

A.—Description of Offences cognizable by each Court.

Offences under Penal Code.

28. Subject to the other provisions of this Code, any offence under the Indian Penal Code may be tried— XLV of 1860.

(a) by the High Court, or

(b) by the Court of Session, or

(c) by any other Court by which such offence is shown in the eighth column of the Second Schedule to be triable.

Illustration.

A is committed to the Sessions Court on a charge of culpable homicide. He may be convicted of voluntarily causing hurt, an offence triable by a Magistrate.

Offences under other laws.

29. (1) Subject to the provisions of section 447, any offence under any other law shall, when any Court is mentioned in this behalf in such law, be tried by such Court.

(2) When no Court is so mentioned, it may be tried by the High Court or by any Court constituted under this Code by which such offence is shewn in the eighth column of the second schedule to be triable.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part II.—Constitution and Powers of Criminal Courts and Offices. Chapter III.— Powers of Courts.—Sections 30-35.)

Offences not punishable with death.

30. In the territories respectively administered by the Lieutenant-Governors of the Punjab and Burma and the Chief Commissioners of Oudh, the Central Provinces, Coorg and Assam, in Sind, and in those parts of the other Provinces in which there are Deputy Commissioners or Assistant Commissioners, the Local Government may, notwithstanding anything contained in section 29, invest the District Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first class with power to try as a Magistrate all offences not punishable with death.

B.—Sentences which may be passed by Courts of various Classes.

Sentences which High Courts and Sessions Judges may pass.

31. (1) A High Court may pass any sentence authorised by law.

(2) A Sessions Judge or Additional Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorised by law; but any sentence of death passed by any such Judge shall be subject to confirmation by the High Court.

(3) An Assistant Sessions Judge may pass any sentence authorised by law, except a sentence of death or of transportation for a term exceeding seven years, or of imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years.

Sentences which Magistrates may pass.

32. (1) The Courts of Magistrates may pass the following sentences, namely:—

(a) Courts of Presidency Magistrates and of Magistrates of the first class:	Imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, including such solitary confinement as is authorised by law; Fine not exceeding one thousand rupees; Whipping.
(b) Courts of Magistrates of the second class:	Imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, including such solitary confinement as is authorised by law; Fine not exceeding two hundred rupees; Whipping (if specially empowered).
(c) Courts of Magistrates of the third class:	Imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month; Fine not exceeding fifty rupees.

(2) The Court of any Magistrate may pass any lawful sentence, combining any of the sentences which it is authorised by law to pass.

(3) No Court of any Magistrate of the second class shall pass a sentence of whipping unless it is specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government.

Power of Magistrates to sentence to imprisonment in default of fine.

33. (1) The Court of any Magistrate may award such term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine as is authorised by law in case of such default:

Provided that—

(a) the term is not in excess of the Magistrate's powers under this Code:

Proviso as to certain cases.

(b) in any case decided by a Magistrate where imprisonment has been awarded as part of the substantive sentence, the period of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of the fine shall not exceed one-fourth of the period of imprisonment which such Magistrate is competent to inflict as punishment for the offence otherwise than as imprisonment in default of payment of the fine.

(2) The imprisonment awarded under this section may be in addition to a substantive sentence of imprisonment for the maximum term awardable by the Magistrate under section 32.

Higher powers of certain District Magistrates.

34. The Court of a Magistrate, specially empowered under section 30, may pass any sentence authorised by law, except a sentence of death or of transportation for a term exceeding seven years or imprisonment for a term exceeding seven years.

Sentence in cases of conviction of several offences at one trial.

35. (1) When a person is convicted at one trial of two or more distinct offences, the Court may sentence him, for such offences, to the several punishments prescribed therefor which such Court is competent to inflict; such punishments, when consisting of imprisonment or transportation, to commence the one after the expiration of the other in such order as the Court may direct, unless the Court directs that such punishments shall run concurrently.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part II.—Constitution and Powers of Criminal Courts and Offices. Chapter III.—Powers of Courts.—Sections 36-41.) Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter IV.— Of Aid and Information to the Magistrates, the Police and Persons making Arrests.—Section 42.)

(2) In the case of consecutive sentences, it shall not be necessary for the Court, by reason only of the aggregate punishment for the several offences being in excess of the punishment which it is competent to inflict on conviction of a single offence, to send the offender for trial before a higher Court:

Provided as follows:—

Maximum term of punishment.

(a) in no case shall such person be sentenced to imprisonment for a longer period than fourteen years:

(b) if the case is tried by a Magistrate (other than a Magistrate acting under section 34), the aggregate punishment shall not exceed twice the amount of punishment which he is, in the exercise of his ordinary jurisdiction, competent to inflict.

(3) For the purpose of appeal, aggregate sentences passed under this section in case of convictions for several offences at one trial shall be deemed to be a single sentence.

Explanation.—Separable offences which come within the provisions of section 71 of the Indian Penal Code are not distinct offences within the meaning of this section.

Illustration.

A breaks into a house with intent to commit theft and steals property therein. A has not committed distinct offences.

C.—Ordinary and Additional Powers.

Ordinary powers of Magistrates.

36. All District Magistrates, Subdivisional Magistrates and Magistrates of the first, second and third classes, have the powers hereinafter respectively conferred upon them and specified in the third schedule. Such powers are called their "ordinary powers."

Additional powers conferrable on Magistrates.

37. In addition to his ordinary powers, any Subdivisional Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first, second or third class may be invested by the Local Government or the District Magistrate, as the case may be, with any powers specified in the fourth schedule as powers with which he may be invested by the Local Government or the District Magistrate.

Control of District Magistrate's investing power.

38. The power conferred on the District Magistrate by section 37 shall be exercised subject to the control of the Local Government.

D.—Conferment, Continuance and Cancellation of Powers.

Mode of conferring powers.

39. (1) In conferring powers under this Code the Local Government may, by order, empower persons specially by name or in virtue of their office, or classes of officials generally by their official titles.

(2) Every such order shall take effect from the date on which it is communicated to the person so empowered.

Continuance of powers of officers transferred.

40. Whenever any person holding an office in the service of Government who has been invested with any powers under this Code throughout any local area is transferred to an equal or higher office of the same nature within a like local area under the same Local Government, he shall, unless the Local Government otherwise directs, or has otherwise directed, continue to exercise the same powers in the local area to which he is so transferred.

Powers may be cancelled.

41. (1) The Local Government may withdraw all or any of the powers conferred under this Code on any person by it or by any officer subordinate to it.

(2) Any powers conferred by the District Magistrate may be withdrawn by the District Magistrate.

PART III.
GENERAL PROVISIONS.

CHAPTER IV.

OF AID AND INFORMATION TO THE MAGISTRATES, THE POLICE AND PERSONS MAKING ARRESTS.

Public when to assist Magistrates and police.

42. Every person is bound to assist a Magistrate or police-officer reasonably demanding his aid, whether within or without the presidency-towns,—

(a) in the taking or preventing the escape of any other person whom such Magistrate or police-officer is authorised to arrest;

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter IV.—Of Aid and Information to the Magistrates, the Police and Persons making Arrests.—Sections 43-45.)

(b) in the prevention or suppression of a breach of the peace, or in the prevention of any injury attempted to be committed to any railway, canal, telegraph or public property.

Aid to person, other than police-officer, executing warrant.

43. When a warrant is directed to a person other than a police-officer, any other person may aid in the execution of such warrant, if the person to whom the warrant is directed be near at hand and acting in the execution of the warrant.

Public to give information of certain offences.

44. (1) Every person, whether within or without the presidency-towns, aware of the commission of, or of the intention of any other person to commit, any offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code (namely), 121, 121A, 122, 123, 124, 124A, 125, 126, 130, 143, 144, 145, 147, 148, 302, 303, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 456, 457, 458, 459 and 460, shall, in the absence of reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie upon the person so aware, forthwith give information to the nearest Magistrate or police-officer of such commission or intention. XLV of 1860.

(2) For the purposes of this section the term "offence" includes any act committed at any place out of British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India

Village-headmen, accountants, land-holders and others bound to report certain matters.

45. (1) Every village-headman, village-accountant, village-watchman, village-police-officer, owner or occupier of land, and the agent of any such owner or occupier, and every officer employed in the collection of revenue or rent of land on the part of Government or the Court of Wards, shall forthwith communicate to the nearest Magistrate or to the officer in charge of the nearest police-station, whichever is the nearer, any information which he may obtain respecting—

(a) the permanent or temporary residence of any notorious receiver or vendor of stolen property in any village of which he is headman, accountant, watchman or police-officer, or in which he owns or occupies land, or is agent, or collects revenue or rent:

(b) the resort to any place within, or the passage through, such village of any person whom he knows, or reasonably suspects, to be a thug, robber, escaped convict or proclaimed offender;

(c) the commission of, or intention to commit, in or near such village any non-bailable offence or any offence punishable under section 143, 144, 145, 147 or 148 of the Indian Penal Code; XLV of 1860.

(d) the occurrence in or near such village of any sudden or unnatural death or of any death under suspicious circumstances;

(e) the commission of, or intention to commit, at any place out of British India near such village any act which, if committed in British India, would be an offence punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460; XLV of 1860.

(f) any matter likely to affect the maintenance of order or the prevention of crime or the safety of person or property respecting which the District Magistrate, by general or special order made with the previous sanction of the Local Government, has directed him to communicate information.

(i) "village" includes village-lands; and

(ii) the expression "proclaimed offender" includes any person proclaimed as an offender by any Court or authority established or continued by the Governor General in Council in any part of India in respect of any act which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under any of the following sections of the Indian Penal Code, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460. XLV of 1860

Appointment of village-headmen by District Magistrate in certain cases for purposes of this section.

(3) Subject to rules in this behalf to be made by the Local Government, the District Magistrate may from time to time appoint one or more persons to be village-headmen for the purposes of this section in any village for which there is no such headman appointed under any other law.

IV F

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter V.—Of Arrest, Escape and Retaking. Sections 46-54.)

CHAPTER V.

OF ARREST, ESCAPE AND RETAKING.

A.—Arrest generally.

Arrest how made.

46. (1) In making an arrest the police-officer or other person making the same shall actually touch or confine the body of the person to be arrested, unless there be a submission to the custody by word or action.

Resisting endeavour to arrest.

(2) If such person forcibly resists the endeavour to arrest him, or attempts to evade the arrest, such police-officer or other person may use all means necessary to effect the arrest.

(3) Nothing in this section gives a right to cause the death of a person who is not accused of an offence punishable with death, or with transportation for life.

Search of place entered by person sought to be arrested.

47. If any person acting under a warrant of arrest, or any police-officer having authority to arrest, has reason to believe that the person to be arrested has entered into, or is within, any place, the person residing in, or being in charge of, such place shall, on demand of such person acting as aforesaid or such police-officer, allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein.

Procedure where ingress not obtainable.

48. If ingress to such place cannot be obtained under section 47, it shall be lawful in any case for a person acting under a warrant and in any case in which a warrant may issue, but cannot be obtained without affording the person to be arrested an opportunity of escape, for a police-officer to enter such place and search therein, and, in order to effect an entrance into such place, to break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place, whether that of the person to be arrested or of any other person, if after notification of his authority and purpose, and demand of admittance duly made he cannot otherwise obtain admittance:

Provided that, if any such place is an apartment in the actual occupancy of a woman (not being the person to be arrested) who, according to custom, does not appear in public, such person or police-officer shall, before entering such apartment, give notice to such woman that she is at liberty to withdraw, and shall afford her every reasonable facility for withdrawing, and may then break open the apartment and enter it.

Power to break open doors and windows for purposes of liberation.

49. Any police-officer or other person authorised to make an arrest may break open any outer or inner door or window of any house or place in order to liberate himself or any other person who, having lawfully entered for the purpose of making an arrest, is detained therein.

No unnecessary restraint.

50. The person arrested shall not be subjected to more restraint than is necessary to prevent his escape.

Search of arrested persons.

51. Whenever a person is arrested by a police-officer under a warrant which does not provide for the taking of bail, or under a warrant which provides for the taking of bail but the person arrested cannot furnish bail, and whenever a person is arrested without warrant, or by a private person under a warrant, and cannot legally be admitted to bail, or is unable to furnish bail, the officer making the arrest or, when the arrest is made by a private person, the police-officer to whom he makes over the person arrested, may search such person, and place in safe custody all articles, other than necessary wearing-apparel, found upon him.

Mode of searching women.

52. Whenever it is necessary to cause a woman to be searched, the search shall be made by another woman, with strict regard to decency.

Power to seize offensive weapons.

53. The officer or other person making any arrest under this Code may take from the person arrested any offensive weapons which he has about his person, and shall deliver all weapons so taken to the Court or officer before which or whom the officer or person making the arrest is required by this Code to produce the person arrested.

B.—Arrest without Warrant.

When police may arrest without warrant.

54. (1) Any police-officer may, without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest—first—any person who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made, or credible information has been received, or a reasonable suspicion exists, of his having been so concerned;

secondly—any person having in his possession without lawful excuse, the burden of proving which excuse shall lie on such person, any implement of house-breaking;

thirdly—any person who has been proclaimed as an offender either under this Code or by order of the Local Government;

fourthly—any person in whose possession anything is found which may reasonably be

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter V.—Of Arrest, Escape and Retaking. Sections 55-59.)

suspected to be stolen property or who may reasonably be suspected of having committed an offence with reference to such thing;

fifthly—any person who obstructs a police-officer while in the execution of his duty, or who has escaped, or attempts to escape, from lawful custody;

sixthly—any person reasonably suspected of being a deserter from Her Majesty's Army or Navy or of belonging to Her Majesty's Indian Marine Service and being illegally absent from that service;

seventhly—any person who has been concerned in, or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been concerned in, any act committed at any place out of British India, which, if committed in British India, would have been punishable as an offence, and for which he is, under any law relating to extradition or under the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, or otherwise, liable to be apprehended or detained in custody in British India; and eighthly—any released convict committing a breach of any rule made under section 565, sub-section (3).

(2) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Arrest of vagabonds, habitual robbers, etc.

55. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, in like manner, arrest or cause to be arrested—

(a) any person found taking precautions to conceal his presence within the limits of such station, under circumstances which afford reason to believe that he is taking such precautions with a view to committing a cognizable offence; or

(b) any person within the limits of such station who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself; or

(c) any person who is by repute an habitual robber, house-breaker or thief, or an habitual receiver of stolen property knowing it to be stolen, or who by repute habitually commits extortion or in order to the committing of extortion habitually puts or attempts to put persons in fear of injury.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Procedure when police-officer deputes subordinate to arrest without warrant.

56. (1) When any officer in charge of a police-station requires any officer subordinate to him to arrest without a warrant (otherwise than in his presence) any person who may lawfully be arrested without a warrant, he shall deliver to the officer required to make the arrest an order in writing, specifying the person to be arrested and the offence or other cause for which the arrest is to be made.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Refusal to give name and residence.

57. (1) When any person who in the presence of a police-officer has committed or has been accused of committing a non-cognizable offence refuses, on demand of such officer, to give his name and residence, or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he may be arrested by such officer in order that his name or residence may be ascertained.

(2) When the true name and residence of such person have been ascertained, he shall be released on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, to appear before a Magistrate if so required:

Provided that, if such person is not resident in British India, the bond shall be secured by a surety or sureties resident in British India.

(3) Should the true name and residence of such person not be ascertained within twenty-four hours from the time of arrest or should he fail to execute the bond or, if so required to furnish sufficient sureties, he shall forthwith be forwarded to the nearest Magistrate having jurisdiction.

Pursuit of offenders into other jurisdictions.

58. A police-officer may, for the purpose of arresting without warrant any person whom he is authorised to arrest under this Chapter, pursue such person into any place in British India.

Arrest by private persons.

59. (1) Any private person may arrest any person who, in his view, commits a non-bailable and cognizable offence, or who has been proclaimed as an offender;

Procedure on such arrest.

and shall, without unnecessary delay, make over any person so arrested to a police-officer, or, in the absence of a police-officer, take such person to the nearest police-station.

(2) If there is reason to believe that such person comes under the provisions of section 54, a police-officer shall re-arrest him.

(3) If there is reason to believe that he has committed a non-cognizable offence, and he refuses on the demand of a police-officer to give his name and residence, or gives a name or residence which such officer has reason to believe to be false, he shall be dealt with under the provisions of section 57. If there is no sufficient reason to believe that he has committed any offence, he shall be at once released.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter V.—Of Arrest, Escape and Retaking.—Section 60-67. Chapter VI.—Of Processes to compel Appearance.—Sections 68-70.)

Person arrested to be taken before Magistrate or officer in charge of police-station.

60. A police-officer making an arrest without warrant shall, without unnecessary delay and subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, take or send the person arrested before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or before the officer in charge of a police-station.

Person arrested not to be detained more than twenty-four hours.

61. No police-officer shall detain in custody a person arrested without warrant for a longer period than under all the circumstances of the case is reasonable, and such period shall not, in the absence of a special order of a Magistrate under section 167, exceed twenty-four hours exclusive of the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Magistrate's Court.

Police to report apprehensions.

62. Officers in charge of police-stations shall report to the District Magistrate, or, if he so directs, to the Subdivisional Magistrate, the cases of all persons arrested without warrant, within the limits of their respective stations, whether such persons have been admitted to bail or otherwise.

Discharge of person apprehended.

63. No person who has been arrested by a police-officer shall be discharged except on his own bond, or on bail, or under the special order of a Magistrate.

Offence committed in Magistrate's presence.

64. When any offence is committed in the presence of a Magistrate within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he may himself arrest or order any person to arrest the offender, and may thereupon, subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail, commit the offender to custody.

Arrest by or in presence of Magistrate.

65. Any Magistrate may at any time arrest or direct the arrest, in his presence, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, of any person for whose arrest he is competent at the time and in the circumstances to issue a warrant.

Power, on escape, to pursue and retake.

66. If a person in lawful custody escapes or is rescued, the person from whose custody he escaped or was rescued, may immediately pursue and arrest him in any place in British India.

Provisions of sections 47, 48 and 49 to apply to arrests under section 66.

67. The provisions of sections 47, 48 and 49 shall apply to arrests under section 66, although the person making any such arrest is not acting under a warrant and is not a police-officer having authority to arrest.

CHAPTER VI.

OF PROCESSES TO COMPEL APPEARANCE.

A.—Summons.

Form of summons.

68. (1) Every summons issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing, in duplicate, signed and sealed by the presiding officer of such Court, or by such other officer as the High Court may, from time to time, by rule, direct.

Summons by whom served.

(2) Such summons shall be served by a police-officer, or, subject to such rules as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf, by an officer of the Court issuing it or other public servant.

(3) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Summons how served.

69. (1) The summons shall, if practicable, be served personally on the person summoned, by delivering or tendering to him one of the duplicates of the summons.

Signature of receipt for summons.

(2) Every person on whom a summons is so served shall, if so required by the serving officer, sign receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate.

(3) Service of a summons on an incorporated company or other body corporate may be effected by serving it on the secretary, local manager or other principal officer of the corporation or by registered post letter addressed to the chief officer of the corporation in British India. In such case the service shall be deemed to have been effected when the letter would arrive in ordinary course of post.

Service when person summoned cannot be found.

70. Where the person summoned cannot by the exercise of due diligence be found, the summons may be served by leaving one of the duplicates for him with some adult male member of his family, or, in a presidency-town, with his servant residing with him; and the person with whom the summons is so left, shall, if so required by the serving officer, sign a receipt therefor on the back of the other duplicate.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VI.—Of Processes to compel Appearance.—Sections 71-79.)

Procedure when service cannot be effected as before provided.

71. If service in the manner mentioned in sections 69 and 70 cannot by the exercise of due diligence be effected, the serving officer shall affix one of the duplicates of the summons to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which the person summoned ordinarily resides; and thereupon the summons shall be deemed to have been duly served.

Service on servant of Government or of Railway Company.

72. (1) Where the person summoned is in the active service of the Government or of a Railway Company, the Court issuing the summons shall ordinarily send it in duplicate to the head of the office in which such person is employed; and such head shall thereupon cause the summons to be served in manner provided by section 69, and shall return it to the Court under his signature with the endorsement required by that section.

(2) Such signature shall be evidence of due service.

Service of summons outside local limits.

73. When a Court desires that a summons issued by it shall be served at any place outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, it shall ordinarily send such summons in duplicate to a Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person summoned resides or is, to be there served.

Proof of service in such cases, and when serving officer not present.

74. (1) When a summons issued by a Court is served outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, and in any case where the officer who has served a summons is not present at the hearing of the case, an affidavit, purporting to be made before a Magistrate, that such summons has been served, and a duplicate of the summons purporting to be endorsed (in manner provided by section 69 or section 70) by the person to whom it was delivered or tendered or with whom it was left, shall be admissible in evidence, and the statements made therein shall be deemed to be correct unless and until the contrary is proved.

(2) The affidavit mentioned in this section may be attached to the duplicate of the summons and returned to the Court.

B.—Warrant of Arrest.

Form of warrant of arrest.

75. (1) Every warrant of arrest issued by a Court under this Code shall be in writing, signed by the presiding officer, or, in the case of a Bench of Magistrates, by any member of such Bench; and shall bear the seal of the Court.

Continuance of warrant of arrest.

(2) Every such warrant shall remain in force until it is cancelled by the Court which issued it, or until it is executed.

Court may direct security to be taken.

76. (1) Any Court issuing a warrant for the arrest of any person may in its discretion direct by endorsement on the warrant that, if such person executes a bond with sufficient sureties for his attendance before the Court at a specified time and thereafter until otherwise directed by the Court, the officer to whom the warrant is directed, shall take such security and shall release such person from custody.

(2) The endorsement shall state—

(a) the number of sureties;

(b) the amount in which they and the person for whose arrest the warrant is issued, are to be respectively bound; and

(c) the time at which he is to attend before the Court.

Recognizance to be forwarded.

(3) Whenever security is taken under this section, the officer to whom the warrant is directed, shall forward the bond to the Court.

Warrants to whom directed.

77. (1) A warrant of arrest shall ordinarily be directed to one or more police-officers, and, when issued by a Presidency Magistrate, shall always be so directed; but any other Court issuing such a warrant may, if its immediate execution is necessary and no police-officer is immediately available, direct it to any other person or persons; and such person or persons shall execute the same.

Warrant to several persons.

(2) When a warrant is directed to more officers or persons than one, it may be executed by all, or by any one or more, of them.

Warrant may be directed to landholders, etc.

78. (1) A District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate may direct a warrant to any landholder, farmer or manager of land within his district or subdivision for the arrest of any escaped convict, proclaimed offender or person who has been accused of a non-bailable offence, and who has eluded pursuit.

(2) Such landholder, farmer or manager shall acknowledge in writing the receipt of the warrant, and shall execute it if the person for whose arrest it was issued, is in, or enters on, his land or farm, or the land under his charge.

(3) When the person against whom such warrant is issued, is arrested, he shall be made over with the warrant to the nearest police-officer, who shall cause him to be taken before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, unless security is taken under section 76.

Warrant directed to police-officer.

79. A warrant directed to any police-officer may also be executed by any other police-officer whose name is endorsed upon the warrant by the officer to whom it is directed or endorsed.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VI.—Of Processes to compel Appearance.—Sections 80-87.)

80. The police-officer or other person executing a warrant of arrest shall notify the substance thereof to the person to be arrested, and, if so required, shall show him the warrant.

Notification of substance of warrant.

81. The police-officer or other person executing a warrant of arrest shall (subject to the provisions of section 76 as to security) without unnecessary delay bring the person arrested before the Court before which he is required by law to produce such person.

Person arrested to be brought before Court without delay.

Where warrant may be executed.

82. A warrant of arrest may be executed at any place in British India.

83. (1) When a warrant is to be executed outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, such Court may, instead of directing such warrant to a police-officer, forward the same by post or otherwise to any Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency-town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it is to be executed.

Warrant forwarded for execution outside jurisdiction.

(2) The Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner to whom such warrant is so forwarded shall endorse his name thereon and, if practicable, cause it to be executed in manner hereinbefore provided within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

84. (1) When a warrant directed to a police-officer is to be executed beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court issuing the same, he shall ordinarily take it for endorsement either to a Magistrate or to a police-officer not below the rank of an officer in charge of a station, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed.

Warrant directed to police-officer for execution outside jurisdiction.

(2) Such Magistrate or police-officer shall endorse his name thereon, and such endorsement shall be sufficient authority to the police-officer to whom the warrant is directed to execute the same within such limits, and the local police shall, if so required, assist such officer in executing such warrant.

(3) Whenever there is reason to believe that the delay occasioned by obtaining the endorsement of the Magistrate or police-officer within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the warrant is to be executed, will prevent such execution, the police-officer to whom it is directed, may execute the same without such endorsement in any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it.

(4) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

85. When a warrant of arrest is executed outside the district in which it was issued, the person arrested shall, unless the Court which issued the warrant, is within twenty miles of the place of arrest or is nearer than the Magistrate or District Superintendent of Police or the Commissioner of Police in a Presidency-town within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the arrest was made, or unless security is taken under section 76, be taken before such Magistrate or Commissioner or District Superintendent.

Procedure on arrest of person against whom warrant issued.

86. (1) Such Magistrate or District Superintendent or Commissioner shall, if the person arrested appears to be the person intended by the Court which issued the warrant, direct his removal in custody to such Court:

Procedure by Magistrate before whom person arrested is brought.

Provided that, if the offence is bailable, and such person is ready and willing to give bail to the satisfaction of such Magistrate, District Superintendent or Commissioner, or a direction has been endorsed under section 76 on the warrant and such person is ready and willing to give the security required by such direction, the Magistrate, District Superintendent or Commissioner shall take such bail or security, as the case may be, and forward the bond to the Court which issued the warrant.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a police-officer from taking security under section 76.

C.—Proclamation and Attachment.

87. (1) If any Court has reason to believe (whether after taking evidence or not) that any person against whom a warrant has been issued by it, has absconded or is concealing himself so that such warrant cannot be executed, such Court may publish a written proclamation requiring him to appear at a specified place and at a specified time not less than thirty days from the date of publishing such proclamation.

Proclamation for person absconding.

(2) The proclamation shall be published as follows:—

(a) it shall be publicly read in some conspicuous place of the town or village in which such person ordinarily resides;

(b) it shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the house or homestead in which such person ordinarily resides

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VI.—Of Processes to compel Appearance.—Sections 88-91.)

or to some conspicuous place of such town or village; and (c) a copy thereof shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the Court-house.

(3) A statement in writing by the Court issuing the proclamation to the effect that the proclamation was duly published on a specified day shall be conclusive evidence that the requirements of this section have been complied with, and that the proclamation was published on such day.

Attachment of property of person absconding.

88. (1) The Court issuing a proclamation under section 87 may at any time order the attachment of any property, moveable or immoveable, or both, belonging to the proclaimed person.

(2) Such order shall authorise the attachment of any property belonging to such person within the district in which it is made; and it shall authorise the attachment of any property belonging to such person without such district when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within whose district such property is situate.

(3) If the property ordered to be attached is a debt or other moveable property, the attachment under this section shall be made—

(a) by seizure; or

(b) by the appointment of a receiver; or

(c) by an order in writing prohibiting the delivery of such property to the proclaimed person or to any one on his behalf; or

(d) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit.

(4) If the property ordered to be attached is immoveable, the attachment under this section shall, in the case of land paying revenue to Government, be made through the Collector of the district in which the land is situate, and in all other cases—

(e) by taking possession; or

(f) by the appointment of a receiver; or

(g) by an order in writing prohibiting the payment of rent or delivery of property to the proclaimed person or to any one on his behalf; or

(h) by all or any two of such methods, as the Court thinks fit.

(5) If the property ordered to be attached consists of live stock or is of a perishable nature, the Court may, if it thinks it expedient, order immediate sale thereof, and in such case the proceeds of the sale shall abide the order of the Court.

(6) The powers, duties and liabilities of a receiver appointed under this section shall be the same as those of a receiver appointed under Chapter XXXVI of the Code of Civil Procedure. XIV of 1882.

(7) If the proclaimed person does not appear within the time specified in the proclamation, the property under attachment shall be at the disposal of Government; but it shall not be sold until the expiration of six months from the date of the attachment, unless it is subject to speedy and natural decay, or the Court considers that the sale would be for the benefit of the owner, in either of which cases the Court may cause it to be sold whenever it thinks fit.

Restoration of attached property.

89. If, within two years from the date of the attachment, any person whose property is or has been at the disposal of Government, under sub-section (7) of section 88, appears voluntarily or is apprehended and brought before the Court by whose order the property was attached, or the Court to which such Court is subordinate, and proves to the satisfaction of such Court that he did not abscond or conceal himself for the purpose of avoiding execution of the warrant, and that he had not such notice of the proclamation as to enable him to attend within the time specified therein, such property, or, if the same has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale, or, if part only thereof has been sold, the nett proceeds of the sale and the residue of the property, shall, after satisfying thereout all costs incurred in consequence of the attachment, be delivered to him.

D.—Other Rules regarding Processes.

Issue of warrant in lieu of, or in addition to, summons.

90. A Court may, in any case in which it is empowered by this Code to issue a summons for the appearance of any person other than a juror or assessor, issue, after recording its reasons in writing, a warrant for his arrest—

(a) if, either before the issue of such summons, or after the issue of the same but before the time fixed for his appearance, the Court sees reason to believe that he has absconded or will not obey the summons; or

(b) if at such time he fails to appear and the summons is proved to have been duly served in time to admit of his appearing in accordance therewith and no reasonable excuse is offered for such failure.

Power to take bond for appearance.

91. When any person for whose appearance or arrest the officer presiding in any Court is empowered to issue a summons or warrant is present

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VI.—Of Processes to compel Appearance —Sections 92-93. Chapter VII.—Of Processes to compel the production of Documents and other Moveable Property, and for the Discovery of Persons wrongfully confined.—Sections 94-98.)

in such Court, such officer may require such person to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his appearance in such Court.

Arrest on breach of bond for appearance.

92. When any person who is bound by any bond taken under this Code to appear before a Court, does not so appear, the officer presiding in such Court may issue a warrant directing that such person be arrested and produced before him.

Provisions of this chapter generally applicable to summonses and warrants of arrest.

93. The provisions contained in this Chapter relating to a summons and warrant, and their issue, service and execution, shall, so far as may be, apply to every summons and every warrant of arrest issued under this Code.

CHAPTER VII.

OF PROCESSES TO COMPEL THE PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS AND OTHER MOVEABLE PROPERTY, AND FOR THE DISCOVERY OF PERSONS WRONGFULLY CONFINED.

A.—Summons to produce.

Summons to produce document or other thing.

94. (1) Whenever any Court, or, in any place beyond the limits of the towns of Calcutta and Bombay, any officer in charge of a police-station, considers that the production of any document or other thing is necessary or desirable for the purposes of any investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code by or before such Court or officer, such Court may issue a summons, or such officer a written order, to the person in whose possession or power such document or thing is believed to be, requiring him to attend and produce it, or to produce it, at the time and place stated in the summons or order.

(2) Any person required under this section merely to produce a document or other thing shall be deemed to have complied with the requisition, if he causes such document or thing to be produced instead of attending personally to produce the same.

I of 1872. (3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, sections 123 and 124, or to apply to a letter, postcard telegram or other document or any parcel or thing in the custody of the Postal or Telegraph authorities.

Procedure as to letters and telegrams.

95. (1) If any document, parcel or thing in such custody is, in the opinion of any District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate, High Court or Court of Session, wanted for the purpose of any investigation, inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, such Magistrate or Court may require the Postal or Telegraph authorities, as the case may be, to deliver such document, parcel or thing to such person as such Magistrate or Court directs.

(2) If any such document, parcel or thing is, in the opinion of any other Magistrate, or of any Commissioner of Police or District Superintendent of Police, wanted for any such purpose, he may require the Postal or Telegraph Department, as the case may be, to cause search to be made for and to detain such document, parcel or thing pending the orders of any such District Magistrate, Chief Presidency Magistrate or Court.

B.—Search-warrants.

When search-warrant may be issued.

96. (1) Where any Court has reason to believe that a person to whom a summons or order under section 94 or a requisition under section 95, sub-section (1), has been or might be addressed, will not or would not produce the document or thing as required by such summons or requisition, or where such document or thing is not known to the Court to be in the possession of any person, or where the Court considers that the purposes of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code will be served by a general search or inspection, it may issue a search-warrant; and the person to whom such warrant is directed, may search or inspect in accordance therewith and the provisions hereinafter contained.

(2) Nothing herein contained shall authorise any Magistrate other than a District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate to grant a warrant to search for a document, parcel or other thing in the custody of the Postal or Telegraph authorities.

Power to restrict warrant.

97. The Court may, if it thinks fit, specify in the warrant the particular place or part thereof to which only the search or inspection shall extend; and the person charged with the execution of such warrant shall then search or inspect only the place or part so specified.

Search of house suspected to contain stolen property, forged documents, etc.

98. (1) If a District Magistrate, Subdivisional Magistrate, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, upon information and after such inquiry as he thinks necessary, has reason to believe that any place is used for the deposit or sale of stolen property, or for the deposit or sale or manufacture of forged documents, false seals or counterfeit stamps or coin, or instruments or materials for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging, or that any forged documents, false seals or counterfeit stamps or coin, or instruments or materials used for counterfeiting coin or stamps

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VII.—Of Processes to compel the production of Documents and other Moveable Property, and for the Discovery of Persons wrongfully confined.—Sections 98.-102) or for forging, are kept or deposited in any place, he may by his warrant authorise any police-officer above the rank of a constable—

(a) to enter, with such assistance as may be required, such place, and

(b) to search the same in manner specified in the warrant, and

(c) to take possession of any property, documents, seals, stamps or coins therein found which he reasonably suspects to be stolen, unlawfully obtained, forged, false or counterfeit, and also of any such instruments and materials as aforesaid, and

(d) to convey such property, documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials before a Magistrate, or to guard the same on the spot until the offender is taken before a Magistrate, or otherwise to dispose thereof in some place of safety, and

(e) to take into custody and carry before a Magistrate every person found in such place who appears to have been privy to the deposit, sale or manufacture or keeping of any such property, documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials, knowing or having reasonable cause to suspect the said property to have been stolen or otherwise unlawfully obtained, or the said documents, seals, stamps, coins, instruments or materials to have been forged, falsified or counterfeited, or the said instruments or materials to have been or to be intended to be used for counterfeiting coin or stamps or for forging.

(2) The provisions of this section with respect to—

(a) counterfeit coin,

(b) coin suspected to be counterfeit, and

(c) instruments or materials for counterfeiting coin, shall, so far as they can be made applicable, apply, respectively, to—

I of 1889. (a) pieces of metal made in contravention of the Metal Tokens Act, 1889, or brought into British India in contravention of any notification for the time

VIII of 1878. being in force under section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878,

(b) pieces of metal suspected to have been so made or to have been so brought into British India or to be intended to be issued in contravention of the former of those Acts, and

(c) instruments or materials for making pieces of metal in contravention of that Act.

Disposal of things found in search beyond jurisdiction.

99. When, in the execution of a search-warrant at any place beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued the same, any of the things for which search is made, are found, such things, together with the list of the same prepared under the provisions hereinafter contained, shall be immediately taken before the Court issuing the warrant, unless such place is nearer to the Magistrate having jurisdiction therein than to such Court, in which case the list and things shall be immediately taken before such Magistrate; and, unless there be good cause to the contrary, such Magistrate shall make an order authorising them to be taken to such Court.

C.—Discovery of Persons wrongfully confined.

Search for persons wrongfully confined.

100. If any Presidency Magistrate, Magistrate of the first class or Subdivisional Magistrate has reason to believe that any person is confined under such circumstances that the confinement amounts to an offence, he may issue a search-warrant, and the person to whom such warrant is directed may search for the person so confined; and such search shall be made in accordance therewith, and the person, if found, shall be immediately taken before a Magistrate, who shall make such order as in the circumstances of the case seems proper.

D.—General Provisions relating to Searches.

Direction, etc., of search-warrants.

101. The provisions of sections 43, 75, 77, 79, 82, 83 and 84 shall, so far as may be, apply to all search-warrants issued under section 96, section 98 or section 100.

Persons in charge of closed place to allow search.

102. (1) Whenever any place liable to search or inspection under this chapter is closed, any person residing in, or being in charge of, such place shall, on demand of the officer or other person executing the warrant, and on production of the warrant, allow him free ingress thereto, and afford all reasonable facilities for a search therein.

(2) If ingress into such place cannot be so obtained, the officer or other person executing the warrant may proceed in manner provided by section 48.

(3) Where any person in or about such place is reasonably suspected of concealing about his person any article for which search should be made, such person may be searched. If such person is a woman, the directions of section 52 shall be observed.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part III.—General Provisions. Chapter VII.—Of Processes to compel the production of Documents and other Moveable Property, and for the Discovery of Persons wrongfully confined.—Sections 103-105. Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter VIII.—Of Security for keeping the Peace and for Good Behaviour.—Section 106-107.)

Search to be made in presence of witnesses.

103. (1) Before making a search under this Chapter, the officer or other person about to make it shall call upon two or more respectable inhabitants of the locality in which the place to be searched is situate to attend and witness the search.

(2) The search shall be made in their presence, and a list of all things seized in the course of such search and of the places in which they are respectively found shall be prepared by such officer or other person and signed by such witnesses; but no person witnessing a search under this section shall be required to attend the Court as a witness of the search unless specially summoned by it.

Occupant of place searched may attend.

(3) The occupant of the place searched, or some person in his behalf, shall, in every instance, be permitted to attend during the search, and a copy of the list prepared under this section, signed by the said witnesses, shall be delivered to such occupant or person at his request.

(4) When any person is searched under section 102, sub-section (3), a list of all things taken possession of shall be prepared, and a copy thereof shall be delivered to such person at his request.

E.—Miscellaneous.

Power to impound document, etc., produced.

104. Any Court may, if it thinks fit, impound any document or thing produced before it under this Code.

Magistrate may direct search in his presence.

105. Any Magistrate may direct a search to be made in his presence of any place for the search of which he is competent to issue a search-warrant.

PART IV.

PREVENTION OF OFFENCES.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF SECURITY FOR KEEPING THE PEACE AND FOR GOOD BEHAVIOUR.

A.—Security for keeping the Peace on Conviction.

Security for keeping the peace on conviction.

106. (1) Whenever any person accused of rioting, assault or other offence involving a breach of the peace, or of abetting the same, or of assembling armed men or taking other unlawful measures with the evident intention of committing the same, or any person accused of committing criminal intimidation, is convicted of such offence before a High Court, a Court of Session or the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class, and such Court is of opinion that it is necessary to require such person to execute a bond for keeping the peace, such Court may, at the time of passing sentence on such person, order him to execute a bond for a sum proportionate to his means, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace during such period, not exceeding three years, as it thinks fit to fix.

(2) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, the bond so executed shall become void.

(3) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision.

B.—Security for keeping the Peace in other cases and Security for Good Behaviour.

Security for keeping the peace in other cases.

107. (1) Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is informed that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity, or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace, or disturb the public tranquillity, the Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for keeping the peace for such period not exceeding one year as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

(2) Proceedings shall not be taken under this section unless either the person informed against, or the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended, is within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and no proceedings shall be taken before any Magistrate, other than a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, unless both the person informed against and the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended, are within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction.

Procedure of Magistrate, not empowered to act under sub-section (1).

(3) When any Magistrate not empowered to proceed under sub-section (1) has reason to believe that any person is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or to do any wrongful act that may probably occasion a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity, and that such breach of the peace or disturbance cannot be prevented otherwise than by detaining such person in custody, such Magistrate or Court may, after recording his reasons, issue a warrant for his arrest (if he is not already in custody or before the Court), and may send him before a Magistrate empowered to deal with the case, together with a copy of his reasons.

(4) A Magistrate before whom a person is sent under this section, may in his discretion detain such person in custody until the completion of the inquiry hereinafter prescribed.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter VIII.—Of Security for keeping the Peace and for Good Behaviour.—Sections 108-115.)

108. Whenever a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate, or a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, has information that there is within the limits of his jurisdiction any person who, within or without such limits, either orally or in writing, disseminates or attempts to disseminate, or in anywise abets the dissemination of,— Security for good behaviour from persons disseminating seditious matter.

(a) any seditious matter, that is to say, any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, or XLV of 1860.

(b) any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 153A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(c) any matter concerning a Judge which amounts to criminal intimidation or defamation under the Indian Penal Code, such Magistrate may (in manner hereinafter provided) require such person to shew cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

No proceedings shall be taken under this section against the editor, proprietor, printer or publisher of any publication registered under, or printed or published in conformity with, the rules laid down in the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, except by the order or under the authority of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor General in Council in this behalf. XXV of 1867.

109. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class receives information—

Security for good behaviour from vagrants and suspected persons.

(a) that any person is taking precautions to conceal his presence within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction, and that there is reason to believe that such person is taking such precautions with a view to committing any offence, or

(b) that there is within such limits a person who has no ostensible means of subsistence, or who cannot give a satisfactory account of himself,

such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

110. Whenever a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, or Subdivisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government receives information that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction—

Security for good behaviour from habitual offenders.

(a) is by habit a robber, house-breaker or thief, or

(b) is by habit a receiver of stolen property knowing the same to have been stolen,

(c) habitually protects or harbours thieves or aids in the concealment or disposal of stolen property, or

(d) habitually commits mischief, extortion or cheating or counterfeiting coin, currency notes or stamps, or attempts so to do, or

(e) habitually commits, or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of, offences involving a breach of the peace, or

(f) is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community, such Magistrate may, in manner hereinafter provided, require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding three years, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.

111. The provisions of sections 109 and 110 do not apply to European British subjects in cases where they may be dealt with under the European Vagrancy Act, 1874. IX of 1874.

Proviso as to European vagrants.

112. When a Magistrate acting under section 107, section 108, section 109 or section 110 deems it necessary to require any person to show cause under such section, he shall make an order in writing, setting forth the substance of the information received, the amount of the bond to be executed, the term for which it is to be in force, and the number, character and class of sureties (if any) required.

Order to be made.

113. If the person in respect of whom such order is made, is present in Court, it shall be read over to him, or, if he so desires, the substance thereof shall be explained to him.

Procedure in respect of person present in Court.

114. If such person is not present in Court, the Magistrate shall issue a summons requiring him to appear, or, when such person is in custody, a warrant directing the officer in whose custody he is, to bring him before the Court:

Summons or warrant in case of person not so present.

Provided that whenever it appears to such Magistrate, upon the report of a police-officer or upon other information (the substance of which report or information shall be recorded by the Magistrate), that there is reason to fear the commission of a breach of the peace, and that such breach of the peace cannot be prevented otherwise than by the immediate arrest of such person, the Magistrate may at any time issue a warrant for his arrest.

115. Every summons or warrant issued under section 114 shall be accompanied by a copy of the order made under section 112, and such copy shall be delivered by the officer serving or executing such summons or warrant to the person served with, or arrested under, the same.

Copy of order under section 112 to accompany summons or warrant.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 18

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter VIII.—Of Security for keeping the Peace and for Good Behaviour.—Sections 116-123.)

116. The Magistrate may, if he sees sufficient cause, dispense with the personal attendance of any person called upon to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond for keeping the peace, and may permit him to appear by a pleader.

Power to dispense with personal attendance.

117. (1) When an order under section 112 has been read or explained under section 113 to a person present in Court, or when any person appears or is brought before a Magistrate in compliance with, or in execution of, a summons or warrant issued under section 114, the Magistrate shall proceed to inquire into the truth of the information upon which action has been taken, and to take such further evidence as may appear necessary.

Inquiry as to truth of information.

(2) Such inquiry shall be made, as nearly as may be practicable where the order requires security for keeping the peace, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in summons-cases; and, where the order requires security for good behaviour, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for conducting trials and recording evidence in warrant-cases, except that no charge need be framed.

(3) For the purposes of this section the fact that a person is an habitual offender may be proved by evidence of general repute or otherwise.

(4) Where two or more persons have been associated together in the matter under inquiry, they may be dealt with in the same or separate inquiries as the Magistrate shall think just.

118. (1) If, upon such inquiry, it is proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made should execute a bond, with or without sureties, the Magistrate shall make an order accordingly:

Order to give security.

Provided—

first, that no person shall be ordered to give security of a nature different from, or of an amount larger than, or for a period longer than, that specified in the order made under section 112:

secondly, that the amount of every bond shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case and shall not be excessive:

thirdly, that, when the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made is a minor, the bond shall be executed only by his sureties.

119. If, on an inquiry under section 117, it is not proved that it is necessary for keeping the peace or maintaining good behaviour, as the case may be, that the person in respect of whom the inquiry is made, should execute a bond, the Magistrate shall make an entry on the record to that effect, and, if such person is in custody only for the purposes of the inquiry, shall release him, or, if such person is not in custody, shall discharge him.

Discharge of person informed against.

C.—Proceedings in all cases subsequent to Order to furnish Security.

120. (1) If any person in respect of whom an order requiring security is made under section 106 or section 118, is, at the time such order is made, sentenced to, or undergoing a sentence of, imprisonment, the period for which such security is required shall commence on the expiration of such sentence.

Commencement of period for which security is required.

(2) In other cases such period shall commence on the date of such order unless the Magistrate, for sufficient reason, fixes a later date.

121. The bond to be executed by any such person shall bind him to keep the peace or to be of good behaviour, as the case may be, and in the latter case the commission or attempt to commit, or the abetment of, any offence punishable with imprisonment, wherever it may be committed, is a breach of the bond.

Contents of bond.

122. A Magistrate may refuse to accept any surety offered under this Chapter, on the ground that, for reasons to be recorded by the Magistrate, such surety is an unfit person.

Power to reject sureties.

123. (1) If any person ordered to give security under section 106 or section 118 does not give such security on or before the date on which the period for which such security is to be given, commences, he shall, except in the case next hereinafter mentioned, be committed to prison, or, if he is already in prison, be detained in prison until such period expires or until within such period he gives the security to the Court or Magistrate who made the order requiring it.

Imprisonment in default of security.

(2) When such person has been ordered by a Magistrate to give security for a period exceeding one year, such Magistrate shall, if such person does not give such security as aforesaid, issue a warrant directing him to be detained in prison pending the orders of the Sessions Judge or, if such Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, pending the orders of the High Court; and the proceedings shall be laid, as soon as conveniently may be, before such Court.

Proceedings when to be laid before High Court or Court of Session.

(3) Such Court, after examining such proceedings and requiring from the Magistrate any further information or evidence which it thinks necessary, may pass such order on the case as it thinks fit:

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter VIII.—Of Security for keeping the Peace and for Good Behaviour.—Sections 124-126.) Unlawful Assemblies.— Sections 127-130.)

Provided that the period (if any) for which any person is imprisoned for failure to give security, shall not exceed three years.

(4) If the security is tendered to the officer in charge of the jail, he shall forthwith refer the matter to the Court or Magistrate who made the order, and shall await the orders of such Court or Magistrate.

Kind of imprisonment.

(5) Imprisonment for failure to give security for keeping the peace shall be simple.

(6) Imprisonment for failure to give security for good behaviour may be rigorous or simple as the Court or Magistrate in each case directs.

Power to release persons imprisoned for failing to give security.

124. (1) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter, whether by the order of such Magistrate or that of his predecessor in office, or of some subordinate Magistrate, may be released without hazard to the community or to any other person, he may order such person to be discharged.

(2) Whenever any person has been imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter, the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may (unless the order has been made by some Court superior to his own) make an order reducing the amount of the security or the number of sureties or the time for which security has been required.

(3) Whenever the District Magistrate or a Chief Presidency Magistrate is of opinion that any person imprisoned for failing to give security under this Chapter as ordered by the Court of Session or High Court may be released without hazard to the community, such Magistrate shall make an immediate report of the case for the orders of the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be, and such Court may, if it thinks fit, order such person to be discharged.

Power of District Magistrate to cancel any bond for keeping the peace or good behaviour.

125. The Chief Presidency or District Magistrate may at any time, for sufficient reasons to be recorded in writing, cancel any bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour executed under this Chapter by order of any Court in his district not superior to his Court.

Discharge of sureties.

126. (1) Any surety for the peaceable conduct or good behaviour of another person may at any time apply to a Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Subdivisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class to cancel any bond executed under this chapter within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

(2) On such application being made, the Magistrate shall issue his summons or warrant, as he thinks fit, requiring the person for whom such surety is bound to appear or to be brought before him.

(3) When such person appears or is brought before the Magistrate, such Magistrate shall cancel the bond, and shall order such person to give, for the unexpired portion of the term of such bond, fresh security of the same description as the original security. Every such order shall, for the purposes of sections 121, 122, 123 and 124, be deemed to be an order made under section 106 or section 118, as the case may be.

CHAPTER IX.

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLIES.

Assembly to disperse on command of Magistrate or police-officer.

127. (1) Any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police-station may command any unlawful assembly, or any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, to disperse; and it shall thereupon be the duty of the members of such assembly to disperse accordingly.

(2) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Use of civil force to disperse.

128. If, upon being so commanded, any such assembly does not disperse, or if, without being so commanded, it conducts itself in such a manner as to show a determination not to disperse, any Magistrate or officer in charge of a police-station, whether within or without the presidency-towns, may proceed to disperse such assembly by force, and may require the assistance of any male person, not being an officer or soldier in Her Majesty's Army or a volunteer enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, and acting as such, for the purpose of dispersing such assembly, and, if necessary, arresting and confining the persons who form part of it, in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law. XX of 1869.

Use of military force.

129. If any such assembly cannot be otherwise dispersed, and if it is necessary for the public security that it should be dispersed, the Magistrate of the highest rank who is present, may cause it to be dispersed by military force.

Duty of officer commanding troops required by Magistrate to disperse assembly.

130. (1) When a Magistrate determines to disperse any such assembly by military force, he may require any commissioned or non-commissioned officer in command of any soldiers in Her Majesty's Army or of any volunteers enrolled under the Indian Volunteers Act, 1869, to disperse such assembly by military force, and to arrest and confine such persons forming part of it as the Magistrate may direct, or as it may be necessary to arrest and confine in order to disperse the assembly or to have them punished according to law. XX of 1869.

(2) Every such officer shall obey such requisition in such manner as he thinks fit; but in so doing he shall use as little force, and do as little injury to person and property, as may be consistent with dispersing the assembly and arresting and detaining such persons.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter IX.—Unlawful Assemblies.—Sections 131-132. Chapter X.—Public Nuisances.—Sections 133-135.)

Power of commissioned military officers to disperse assembly.

131. When the public security is manifestly endangered by any such assembly, and when no Magistrate can be communicated with, any commissioned officer of Her Majesty's Army may disperse such assembly by military force, and may arrest and confine any persons forming part of it, in order to disperse such assembly or that they may be punished according to law; but if, while he is acting under this section, it becomes practicable for him to communicate with a Magistrate, he shall do so, and shall thenceforward obey the instructions of the Magistrate as to whether he shall or shall not continue such action.

Protection against prosecution for acts done under this chapter.

132. No prosecution against any person for any act purporting to be done under this Chapter shall be instituted in any Criminal Court, except with the sanction of the Governor General in Council; and—

(b) no officer acting under section 131 in good faith,

(c) no person doing any act in good faith, in compliance with a requisition under section 128 or section 130, and

(d) no inferior officer, or soldier, or volunteer, doing any act in obedience to any order which he was bound to obey, shall be deemed to have thereby committed an offence.

CHAPTER X.

PUBLIC NUISANCES.

Conditional order for removal of nuisance.

133. (1) Whenever a District Magistrate, a Subdivisional Magistrate or, when empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, a Magistrate of the first class, considers, on receiving a police-report or other information, and on taking such evidence (if any) as he thinks fit, that any unlawful obstruction or nuisance should be removed from any way, river or channel which is or may be lawfully used by the public, or from any public place, or that any trade or occupation, or the keeping of any goods or merchandise, by reason of its being injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community, should be suppressed or removed or prohibited, or that the construction of any building, or the disposal of any substance as likely to occasion conflagration or explosion, should be prevented or stopped, or that any building is in such a condition that it is likely to fall and thereby cause injury to persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood or passing by, and that in consequence its removal, repair or support is necessary, or that any tank, well or excavation adjacent to any such way or public place should be fenced in such a manner as to prevent danger arising to the public, such Magistrate may make a conditional order requiring the person causing such obstruction or nuisance, or carrying on such trade or occupation, or keeping any such goods or merchandise, or owning, possessing or controlling such building, substance, tank, well or excavation, within a time to be fixed in the order, to remove such obstruction or nuisance; or to suppress or remove such trade or occupation; or to remove such goods or merchandise; or to prevent or stop the construction of such building; or to remove, repair or support it; or to alter the disposal of such substance; or to fence such tank, well or excavation, as the case may be; or to appear before himself or some other Magistrate of the first or second class, at a time and place to be fixed by the order, and move to have the order set aside or modified in manner hereinafter provided.

(2) No order duly made by a Magistrate under this section shall be called in question in any Civil Court.

Explanation.—A "public place" includes also property belonging to the State, camping-grounds and grounds left unoccupied for sanitary and recreative purposes.

Service or notification of order.

134. (1) The order shall, if practicable, be served on the person against whom it is made, in manner herein provided for service of a summons.

(2) If such order cannot be so served, it shall be notified by proclamation, published in such manner as the Local Government may by rule direct, and a copy thereof shall be stuck up at such place or places as may be fittest for conveying the information to such person.

Person to whom order is addressed to obey or show cause or claim jury.

135. The person against whom such order is made, shall—

(a) perform, within the time specified in the order, the act directed thereby; or

(b) appear in accordance with such order and either show cause against the same, or apply to

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter X.—Public Nuisances.—Sections 136-143.)

the Magistrate by whom it was made to appoint a jury to try whether the same is reasonable and proper.

Consequence of his failing to do so.

136. If such person does not perform such act or appear and show cause or apply for the appointment of a jury as required by section 135, he shall be liable to the penalty prescribed in that behalf in section 188 of the Indian Penal Code, and the order shall be made absolute. XLV of 1860.

Procedure where he appears to show cause.

137. (1) If he appears and shows cause against the order, the Magistrate shall take evidence in the matter as in a summons-case.

(2) If the Magistrate is satisfied that the order is not reasonable and proper, no further proceedings shall be taken in the case.

(3) If the Magistrate is not so satisfied, the order shall be made absolute.

Procedure where he claims jury.

138. (1) On receiving an application under section 135 to appoint a jury, the Magistrate shall—

(a) forthwith appoint a jury consisting of an uneven number of persons not less than five, of whom the foreman and one-half of the remaining members shall be nominated by such Magistrate, and the other members by the applicant;

(b) summon such foreman and members to attend at such place and time as the Magistrate thinks fit; and

(c) fix a time within which they are to return their verdict.

(2) The time so fixed may, for good cause shown, be extended by the Magistrate.

Procedure where jury finds Magistrate's order to be reasonable.

139. (1) If the jury or a majority of the jurors find that the order of the Magistrate is reasonable and proper as originally made, or subject to a modification which the Magistrate accepts, the Magistrate shall make the order absolute, subject to such modification (if any).

(2) In other cases, no further proceedings shall be taken under this Chapter.

Procedure on order being made absolute.

140. (1) When an order has been made absolute under section 136, section 137 or section 139, the Magistrate shall give notice of the same to the person against whom the order was made, and shall further require him to perform the act directed by the order within a time to be fixed in the notice, and inform him that, in case of disobedience, he will be liable to the penalty provided by section 188 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

Consequences of disobedience to order.

(2) If such act is not performed within the time fixed, the Magistrate may cause it to be performed, and may recover the costs of performing it, either by the sale of any building, goods or other property removed by his order, or by the distress and sale of any other moveable property of such person within or without the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction. If such other property is without such limits, the order shall authorise its attachment and sale when endorsed by the Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property to be attached is found.

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith under this section.

Procedure on failure to appoint jury or omission to return verdict.

141. If the applicant by neglect or otherwise prevents the appointment of the jury, or if from any cause the jury appointed do not return their verdict within the time fixed or within such further time as the Magistrate may in his discretion allow, the Magistrate may pass such order as he thinks fit, and such order shall be executed in the manner provided by section 140.

Injunction pending inquiry.

142. (1) If a Magistrate making an order under section 133 considers that immediate measures should be taken to prevent imminent danger or injury of a serious kind to the public, he may, whether a jury is to be, or has been, appointed or not, issue such an injunction to the person against whom the order was made, as is required to obviate or prevent such danger or injury pending the determination of the matter.

(2) In default of such person forthwith obeying such injunction, the Magistrate may himself use, or cause to be used, such means as he thinks fit to obviate such danger or to prevent such injury.

(3) No suit shall lie in respect of anything done in good faith by a Magistrate under this section.

Magistrate may prohibit repetition or continuance of public nuisance.

143. A District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate, or any other Magistrate empowered by the Local Government or the District Magistrate in this behalf, may order any person not to repeat or continue a public nuisance, as defined in the Indian Penal Code or any special or local law. XLV of 1860.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IV.—Prevention of Offences. Chapter XI.—Temporary Orders in Urgent Cases of Nuisance or apprehended Danger.—Section 144. Chapter XII.—Disputes as to Immoveable Property.—Sections 145-146.)

CHAPTER XI.

TEMPORARY ORDERS IN URGENT CASES OF NUISANCE OR APPREHENDED DANGER.

Power to issue order absolute at once in urgent cases of nuisance or apprehended danger.

144. (1) In cases where, in the opinion of a District Magistrate, a Chief Presidency Magistrate, a Subdivisional Magistrate, or of any other Magistrate specially empowered by the Local Government or the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the District Magistrate to act under this section, immediate prevention or speedy remedy is desirable, such Magistrate may, by a written order stating the material facts of the case and served in manner provided by section 134, direct any person to abstain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management, if such Magistrate considers that such direction is likely to prevent, or tends to prevent, obstruction, annoyance or injury, or risk of obstruction, annoyance or injury, to any person lawfully employed, or danger to human life, health or safety, or a disturbance of the public tranquillity, or a riot, or an affray.

(2) An order under this section may, in cases of emergency or in cases where the circumstances do not admit of the serving in due time of a notice upon the person against whom the order is directed, be passed ex parte.

(3) An order under this section may be directed to a particular individual, or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place.

(4) Any Magistrate may rescind or alter any order made under this section by himself or any Magistrate subordinate to him, or by his predecessor in office.

(5) No order under this section shall remain in force for more than two months from the making thereof; unless, in cases of danger to human life, health or safety, or a likelihood of a riot or an affray, the Local Government, by notification in the official Gazette, otherwise directs.

CHAPTER XII.

DISPUTES AS TO IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

Procedure where dispute concerning land, etc., is likely to cause breach of peace.

145. (1) Whenever a District Magistrate, Subdivisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied from a police-report or other information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists concerning any land or water or the boundaries thereof, within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he shall make an order in writing, stating the grounds of his being so satisfied, and requiring the parties concerned in such dispute to attend his Court in person or by pleader, within a time to be fixed by such Magistrate, and to put in written statements of their respective claims as respects the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute.

(2) For the purposes of this section the expression "land or water" includes buildings, markets, fisheries, crops or other produce of land, and the rents or profits of any such property.

(3) A copy of the order shall be served in manner provided by this Code for the service of a summons upon such person or persons as the Magistrate may direct, and at least one copy shall be published by being affixed to some conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute.

Inquiry as to possession.

(4) The Magistrate shall then, without reference to the merits of the claims of any of such parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute, peruse the statements so put in, hear the parties, receive the evidence produced by them respectively, consider the effect of such evidence, take such further evidence (if any) as he thinks necessary, and, if possible, decide whether any and which of the parties was at the date of the order before mentioned in such possession of the said subject:

Provided that, if it appears to the Magistrate that any party has within two months next before the date of such order been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed, he may treat the party so dispossessed as if he had been in possession at such date.

Provided also, that, if the Magistrate considers the case one of emergency, he may at any time attach the subject of dispute, pending his decision under this section.

(5) Nothing in this section shall preclude any party so required to attend, or any other person interested, from showing that no such dispute as aforesaid exists or has existed; and in such case the Magistrate shall cancel his said order, and all further proceedings thereon shall be stayed, but, subject to such cancellation, the order of the Magistrate under sub-section (1) shall be final.

Party in possession to retain possession until legally evicted.

(6) If the Magistrate decides that one of the parties was in such possession of the said subject, he shall issue an order declaring such party to be entitled to possession thereof until evicted therefrom in due course of law, and forbidding all disturbance of such possession until such eviction.

(7) Proceedings under this section shall not abate by reason only of the death of any of the parties thereto.

Power to attach subject of dispute.

146. (1) If the Magistrate decides that none of the parties was then in such possession, or is unable to satisfy himself as to which of them was then in such possession of the subject of dispute, he may attach it until a competent Court has determined the rights of the parties thereto, or the person entitled to possession thereof.

(2) When the Magistrate attaches the subject of dispute, he may, if he thinks fit, appoint a receiver thereof, who, subject to the control of the Magistrate, shall have all the powers of a receiver appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure. XIV of 1882.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Disputes concerning easements, etc.

147. Whenever any such Magistrate is satisfied as aforesaid that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists concerning the right of use of any land or water (including any right of way or other easement over the same) within the local limits of his jurisdiction, he may inquire into the matter in manner provided by section 145; and may, if it appears to him that such right exists, make an order permitting such thing to be done, or directing that such thing shall not be done, as the case may be, until the person objecting to such thing being done, or claiming that such thing may be done, obtains the decision of a competent Court adjudging him to be entitled to prevent the doing of, or to do, such thing, as the case may be:

Provided that no order shall be passed under this section permitting the doing of anything where the right to do such thing is exerciseable at all times of the year, unless such right has been exercised within three months next before the institution of the inquiry; or, where the right is exerciseable only at particular seasons or on particular occasions, unless the right has been exercised during the last of such seasons or occasions before such institution.

Local inquiry.

148. (1) Whenever a local inquiry is necessary for the purposes of this Chapter, any District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate may depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to make the inquiry, and may furnish him with such written instructions as may seem necessary for his guidance, and may declare by whom the whole or any part of the necessary expenses of the inquiry shall be paid.

(2) The report of the person so deputed may be read as evidence in the case.

Order as to costs.

(3) When any costs have been incurred by any party to a proceeding under this Chapter for witnesses, or pleaders' fees, or both, the Magistrate passing a decision under section 145, section 146 or section 147 may direct by whom such costs shall be paid, whether by such party or by any other party to the proceeding, and whether in whole or in part or proportion. All costs so directed to be paid may be recovered as if they were fines.

CHAPTER XIII.

PREVENTIVE ACTION OF THE POLICE.

Police to prevent cognizable offences.

149. Every police-officer may interpose for the purpose of preventing, and shall, to the best of his ability, prevent, the commission of any cognizable offence.

Information of design to commit such offences.

150. Every police-officer receiving information of a design to commit any cognizable offence shall communicate such information to the police-officer to whom he is subordinate, and to any other officer whose duty it is to prevent or take cognizance of the commission of any such offence.

Arrest to prevent such offences.

151. A police-officer knowing of a design to commit any cognizable offence may arrest, without orders from a Magistrate and without a warrant, the person so designing, if it appears to such officer that the commission of the offence cannot be otherwise prevented.

Prevention of injury to public property.

152. A police-officer may of his own authority interpose to prevent any injury attempted to be committed in his view to any public property, moveable or immoveable, or the removal or injury of any public landmark or buoy or other mark used for navigation.

Inspection of weights and measures.

153. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, without a warrant, enter any place within the limits of such station for the purpose of inspecting or searching for any weights or measures or instruments for weighing, used or kept therein, whenever he has reason to believe that there are in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing which are false.

(2) If he finds in such place any weights, measures or instruments for weighing which are false, he may seize the same, and shall forthwith give information of such seizure to a Magistrate having jurisdiction.

PART V.

INFORMATION TO THE POLICE AND THEIR POWERS TO INVESTIGATE.

CHAPTER XIV.

Information in cognizable cases.

154. Every information relating to the commission of a cognizable offence, if given orally to an officer in charge of a police-station, shall be reduced to writing by him or under his direction, and be read over to the informant; and every such information, whether given in writing or reduced to writing as aforesaid, shall be signed by the person giving it, and the substance thereof shall be entered in a book to be kept by such officer in such form as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf.

Information in non-cognizable cases.

155. (1) When information is given to an officer in charge of a police-station of the commission within the limits of such station of a non-cognizable offence,

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part V.—Information to the Police and their Powers to Investigate. Chapter XIV. —Sections 156-152.)

he shall enter in a book to be kept as aforesaid the substance of such information and refer the informant to the Magistrate.

Investigation into non-cognizable cases.

(2) No police-officer shall investigate a non-cognizable case without the order of a Magistrate of the first or second class having power to try such case or commit the same for trial, or of a Presidency Magistrate.

(3) Any police-officer receiving such order may exercise the same powers in respect of the investigation (except the power to arrest without warrant) as an officer in charge of a police-station may exercise in a cognizable case.

Investigation into cognizable cases.

156. (1) Any officer in charge of a police-station may, without the order of a Magistrate, investigate any cognizable case which a Court having jurisdiction over the local area within the limits of such station would have power to inquire into or try under the provisions of Chapter XV relating to the place of inquiry or trial.

(2) No proceeding of a police officer in any such case shall at any stage be called in question on the ground that the case was one which such officer was not empowered under this section to investigate.

(3) Any Magistrate empowered under section 190 may order such an investigation as above mentioned.

Procedure where cognizable offence suspected.

157. (1) If, from information received or otherwise, an officer in charge of a police-station has reason to suspect the commission of an offence which he is empowered under section 156 to investigate, he shall forthwith send a report of the same to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of such offence upon a police-report, and shall proceed in person, or shall depute one of his subordinate officers to proceed, to the spot to investigate the facts and circumstances of the case, and to take such measures as may be necessary for the discovery and arrest of the offender:

Provided as follows:—

Where local investigation dispensed with.

(a) when any information as to the commission of any such offence is given against any person by name and the case is not of a serious nature, the officer in charge of a police-station need not proceed in person or depute a subordinate officer to make an investigation on the spot;

Where police-officer in charge sees no sufficient ground for investigation.

(b) if it appear to the officer in charge of a police-station that there is no sufficient ground for entering on an investigation, he shall not investigate the case.

(2) In each of the cases mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of the proviso to sub-section (1), the officer in charge of the police-station shall state in his said report his reasons for not fully complying with the requirements of that sub-section.

Reports under section 157 how submitted.

158. (1) Every report sent to a Magistrate under section 157 shall, if the Local Government so directs, be submitted through such superior officer of police as the Local Government, by general or special order, appoints in that behalf.

(2) Such superior officer may give such instructions to the officer in charge of the police-station as he thinks fit, and shall, after recording such instructions on such report, transmit the same without delay to the Magistrate.

Power to hold investigation or preliminary inquiry.

159. Such Magistrate, on receiving such report, may direct an investigation or, if he thinks fit, at once proceed, or depute any Magistrate subordinate to him to proceed, to hold a preliminary inquiry into, or otherwise to dispose of, the case in manner provided in this Code.

Police-officer's power to require attendance of witnesses.

160. Any police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter may, by order in writing, require the attendance before himself of any person being within the limits of his own or any adjoining station who, from the information given or otherwise, appears to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case; and such person shall attend as so required.

Examination of witnesses by police.

161 (1) Any police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter may examine orally any person supposed to be acquainted with the facts and circumstances of the case.

(2) Such person shall be bound to answer all questions relating to such case put to him by such officer, other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge or to a penalty or forfeiture.

Statements to police not to be signed or admitted in evidence.

162. (1) No statement made by any person to a police-officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter shall, if taken down in writing, be signed by the person making it, nor shall such writing be used as evidence:

Provided that, when any witness is called for the prosecution whose statement has been taken down in writing as aforesaid, the Court shall, on the request of the accused, refer to such writing and may then, if the Court thinks it expedient in the interests of justice, direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof: and such statement may be used to impeach the credit of such witness in manner provided by the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. I of 1872.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part V.—Information to the Police and their Powers to Investigate. Chapter XIV.—Sections 163-167.)

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to any statement falling within the provisions of section 32, clause (1), of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. I of 1872.

163. (1) No police-officer or person in authority shall offer or make, or cause to be offered or made, any such inducement, threat or promise as is mentioned in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 24. I of 1872.

No inducement to be offered.

(2) But no police-officer or other person shall prevent, by any caution or otherwise, any person from making in the course of any investigation under this Chapter any statement which he may be disposed to make of his own free will.

164. (1) Every Magistrate not being a police-officer may record any statement or confession made to him in the course of an investigation under this Chapter or at any time afterwards before the commencement of the inquiry or trial.

Power to record statements and confessions.

(2) Such statements shall be recorded in such of the manners hereinafter prescribed for recording evidence as is, in his opinion, best fitted for the circumstances of the case. Such confessions shall be recorded and signed in the manner provided in section 364, and such statements or confessions shall then be forwarded to the Magistrate by whom the case is to be inquired into or tried.

(3) No Magistrate shall record any such confession unless, upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily; and, when he records any confession, he shall make a memorandum at the foot of such record to the following effect:—

"I believe that this confession was voluntarily made. It was taken in my presence and hearing, and was read over to the person making it and admitted by him to be correct, and it contains a full and true account of the statement made by him.

(Signed) A. B.,
Magistrate."

Explanation.—It is not necessary that the Magistrate receiving and recording a confession or statement should be a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case.

165. (1) Whenever an officer in charge of a police-station, or a police-officer making an investigation, considers that the production of any document or thing is necessary to the conduct of an investigation into any offence which he is authorised to investigate, and there is reason to believe that a person to whom a summons or order under section 94 has been or might be issued will not or would not produce such document or thing according to the directions of the summons or order, or when such document or thing is not known to be in the possession of any person, such officer may search, or cause search to be made, for the same, in any place within the limits of the station of which he is in charge, or to which he is attached.

Search by police-officer.

(2) Such officer shall, if practicable, conduct the search in person.

(3) If he is unable to conduct the search in person, and there is no other person competent to make the search present at the time, he may require any officer subordinate to him to make the search, and he shall deliver to such subordinate officer an order in writing, specifying the document or thing for which search is to be made, and the place to be searched; and such subordinate officer may thereupon search for such thing in such place.

(4) The provisions of this Code as to search-warrants shall, so far as may be, apply to a search made under this section.

166. (1) An officer in charge of a police-station may require an officer in charge of another police-station, whether in the same or a different district, to cause a search to be made in any place, in any case in which the former officer might cause such search to be made within the limits of his own station.

When officer in charge of police-station may require another to issue search-warrant.

(2) Such officer, on being so required, shall proceed according to the provisions of section 165, and shall forward the thing found, if any, to the officer at whose request the search was made.

167. (1) Whenever it appears that any investigation under this Chapter cannot be completed within the period of twenty-four hours fixed by section 61, and there are grounds for believing that the accusation or information is well-founded, the officer in charge of the police-station shall forthwith transmit to the nearest Magistrate a copy of the entries in the diary hereinafter prescribed relating to the case, and shall at the same time forward the accused (if any) to such Magistrate.

Procedure when investigation cannot be completed in twenty-four hours.

(2) The Magistrate to whom an accused person is forwarded under this section may, whether he has or has not jurisdiction to try the case, from time to time authorise the detention of the accused in such custody as such Magistrate thinks fit, for a term not exceeding fifteen days in the whole. If he has not jurisdiction to try the case or commit it for trial, and considers further detention unnecessary, he may order the accused to be forwarded to a Magistrate having such jurisdiction.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part V.—Information to the Police and their Powers to Investigate. Chapter XIV. —Sections 168-172.)

(3) A Magistrate authorising under this section detention in the custody of the police shall record his reasons for so doing.

(4) If such order is given by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate, he shall forward a copy of his order, with his reasons for making it, to the Magistrate to whom he is immediately subordinate.

168. When any subordinate police-officer has made any investigation under this Chapter, he shall report the result of such investigation to the officer in charge of the police-station.

Report of investigation by subordinate police-officer.

169. If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police station that there is not sufficient evidence or reasonable ground of suspicion to justify the forwarding of the accused to a Magistrate, such officer shall, if such person is in custody, release him on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, as such officer may direct, to appear, if and when so required, before a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial.

Release of accused when evidence deficient.

170. (1) If, upon an investigation under this Chapter, it appears to the officer in charge of the police-station that there is sufficient evidence or reasonable ground as aforesaid, such officer shall forward the accused under custody to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence upon a police-report and to try the accused or commit him for trial or, if the offence is bailable and the accused is able to give security, shall take security from him for his appearance before such Magistrate on a day fixed and for his attendance from day to day before such Magistrate until otherwise directed.

Case to be sent to Magistrate when evidence is sufficient.

(2) When the officer in charge of a police-station forwards an accused person to a Magistrate or takes security for his appearance before such Magistrate under this section, he shall send to such Magistrate any weapon or other article which it may be necessary to produce before him, and shall require the complainant (if any) and so many of the persons who appear to such officer to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case as he may think necessary, to execute a bond to appear before the Magistrate as thereby directed and prosecute or give evidence (as the case may be) in the matter of the charge against the accused.

(3) If the Court of the District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate is mentioned in the bond, such Court shall be held to include any Court to which such Magistrate may refer the case for inquiry or trial, provided reasonable notice of such reference is given to such complainant or persons.

(4) The day fixed under this section shall be the day whereon the accused person is to appear, if security for his appearance has been taken, or the day on which he may be expected to arrive at the Court of the Magistrate, if he is to be forwarded in custody.

(5) The officer in whose presence the bond is executed, shall deliver a copy thereof to one of the persons who executed it, and shall then send to the Magistrate the original with his report.

171. No complainant or witness on his way to the Court of the Magistrate shall be required to accompany a police-officer, or shall be subjected to unnecessary restraint or inconvenience, or required to give any security for his appearance other than his own bond:

Complainants and witnesses not to be required to accompany police-officer.

Complainants and witnesses not to be subjected to restraint.

Provided that, if any complainant or witness refuses to attend or to execute a bond as directed in section 170, the officer in charge of the police-station may forward him in custody to the Magistrate, who may detain him in custody until he executes such bond, or until the hearing of the case is completed.

Recusant complainant or witness may be forwarded in custody.

172. (1) Every police-officer making an investigation under this Chapter shall day by day enter his proceedings in the investigation in a diary, setting forth the time at which the information reached him, the time at which he began and closed his investigation, the place or places visited by him, and a statement of the circumstances ascertained through his investigation.

Diary of proceedings in investigation.

(2) Any Criminal Court may send for the police-diaries of a case under inquiry or trial in such Court, and may use such diaries, not as evidence in the case, but to aid it in such inquiry or trial. Neither the accused nor his agents shall be entitled to call for such diaries, nor shall he or they be entitled to see them merely because they are referred to by the Court; but, if they are used by the police-officer who made them, to refresh his memory, or if the Court uses them for the purpose of contradicting such police-officer, the

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part V.—Information to the Police and their Powers to Investigate. Chapter XIV. —Sections 173-176.)

I of 1872. provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 161 or section 145, as the case may be, shall apply.

Report of police-officer.

173. (1) Every investigation under this Chapter shall be completed without unnecessary delay, and, as soon as it is completed, the officer in charge of the police-station shall forward to a Magistrate empowered to take cognizance of the offence on a police-report a report in the form prescribed by the Local Government, setting forth the names of the parties, the nature of the information and the names of the persons who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case, and stating whether the accused person has been forwarded in custody, or has been released on his bond, and, if so, whether with or without sureties.

(2) Where a superior officer of police has been appointed under section 158, the report shall, in any cases in which the Local Government by general or special order so directs, be submitted through that officer, and he may, pending the orders of the Magistrate, direct the officer in charge of the police-station to make further investigation.

(3) Whenever it appears from a report forwarded under this section that the accused has been released on his bond, the Magistrate shall make such order for the discharge of such bond or otherwise as he thinks fit.

Police to inquire and report on suicide, etc.

174. (1) The officer in charge of a police-station, or some other police-officer specially empowered by the Local Government in that behalf, on receiving information that a person—

(a) has committed suicide, or

(b) has been killed by another, or by an animal, or by machinery, or by an accident, or

(c) has died under circumstances raising a reasonable suspicion that some other person has committed an offence, shall immediately give intimation thereof to the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests, and, unless otherwise directed by any rule prescribed by the Local Government, or by any general or special order of the District or Subdivisional Magistrate, shall proceed to the place where the body of such deceased person is, and there, in the presence of two or more respectable inhabitants of the neighbourhood, shall make an investigation, and draw up a report of the apparent cause of death, describing such wounds, fractures, bruises and other marks of injury as may be found on the body, and stating in what manner, or by what weapon or instrument (if any), such marks appear to have been inflicted.

(2) The report shall be signed by such police-officer and other persons, or by so many of them as concur therein, and shall be forthwith forwarded to the District Magistrate or the Subdivisional Magistrate.

(3) When there is any doubt regarding the cause of death, or when for any other reason the police-officer considers it expedient so to do, he shall, subject to such rules as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf, forward the body, with a view to its being examined, to the nearest Civil Surgeon, or other qualified medical man appointed in this behalf by the Local Government, if the state of the weather and the distance admit of its being so forwarded without risk of such putrefaction on the road as would render such examination useless.

(4) In the Presidencies of Fort St. George and Bombay, investigations under this section may be made by the head of the village, who shall then report the result to the nearest Magistrate authorised to hold inquests.

(5) The following Magistrates are empowered to hold inquests, namely, any District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate, and any Magistrate specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government or the District Magistrate.

Power to summon persons.

175. (1) A police-officer proceeding under section 174 may, by order in writing, summon two or more persons as aforesaid for the purpose of the said investigation, and any other person who appears to be acquainted with the facts of the case. Every person so summoned shall be bound to attend and to answer truly all questions other than questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge, or to a penalty or forfeiture.

(2) If the facts do not disclose a cognizable offence to which section 170 applies, such persons shall not be required by the police-officer to attend a Magistrate's Court.

Inquiry by Magistrate into cause of death.

176. (1) When any person dies while in the custody of the police, the nearest Magistrate empowered to hold inquests shall, and, in any other case mentioned in section 174, clauses (a), (b) and (c) of sub-section (1), any Magistrate so empowered may, hold an inquiry into the cause of death,

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XV.—Of the Jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 177-181.)

either instead of, or in addition to, the investigation held by the police-officer; and, if he does so, he shall have all the powers in conducting it which he would have in holding an inquiry into an offence. The Magistrate holding such an inquiry shall record the evidence taken by him in connection therewith in any of the manners hereinafter prescribed according to the circumstances of the case.

Power to disinter corpses.

(2) Whenever such Magistrate considers it expedient to make an examination of the dead body of any person who has been already interred, in order to discover the cause of his death, the Magistrate may cause the body to be disinterred and examined.

PART VI.

PROCEEDINGS IN PROSECUTIONS.

CHAPTER XV.

OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE CRIMINAL COURTS IN INQUIRIES AND TRIALS.

A.—Place of Inquiry or Trial.

Ordinary place of inquiry and trial.

177. Every offence shall ordinarily be inquired into and tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it was committed.

Power to order cases to be tried in different sessions divisions.

178. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 177, the Local Government may direct that any cases or class of cases committed for trial in any district may be tried in any sessions division:

24 & 25 Vict., c. 104.

Provided that such direction is not repugnant to any direction previously issued by the High Court under section 15 of the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or under this Code, section 526.

Accused triable in district where act is done or where consequence ensues.

179. When a person is accused of the commission of any offence by reason of anything which has been done, and of any consequence which has ensued, such offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any such thing has been done, or any such consequence has ensued.

Illustrations.

(a) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and dies within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Z. The offence of the culpable homicide of A may be inquired into or tried either by X or Z.

(b) A is wounded within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and is, during ten days within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y, and during ten days more within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Z, unable in the local limits of the jurisdiction of either Court Y or Court Z to follow his ordinary pursuits. The offence of causing grievous hurt to A may be inquired into or tried by X, Y or Z.

(c) A is put in fear of injury within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court X, and is thereby induced, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Court Y, to deliver property to the person who put him in fear. The offence of extortion committed on A may be inquired into or tried either by X or Y.

(d) A is wounded in the Native State of Baroda, and dies of his wounds in Poona. The offence of causing A's death may be inquired into and tried in Poona.

Place of trial where act is offence by reason of relation to other offence.

180. When an act is an offence by reason of its relation to any other act which is also an offence or which would be an offence if the doer were capable of committing an offence, a charge of the first-mentioned offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction either act was done.

Illustrations.

(a) A charge of abetment may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the abetment was committed, or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offence abetted was committed.

(b) A charge of receiving or retaining stolen goods may be inquired into or tried either by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the goods were stolen, or by any Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any of them were at any time dishonestly received or retained.

(c) A charge of wrongfully concealing a person known to have been kidnapped may be inquired into or tried by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the wrongful concealing, or by the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the kidnapping, took place.

Being a thug or belonging to a gang of dacoits, escape from custody, etc.

181. (1) The offence of being a thug, of being a thug and committing murder, of dacoity, of dacoity with murder, of having belonged to a gang of dacoits, or of having escaped from custody, may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person charged is.

Criminal misappropriation and criminal breach of trust.

(2) The offence of criminal misappropriation or of criminal breach of trust may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received or retained by the accused person, or the offence was committed.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XV.—Of the Jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 182-188.)

Stealing.

(3) The offence of stealing anything may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such thing was stolen or was possessed by the thief or by any person who received or retained the same knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen.

Kidnapping and abduction.

(4) The offence of kidnapping or abduction may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the person kidnapped or abducted was kidnapped or abducted or was conveyed or concealed or detained.

Place of inquiry or trial where scene of offence is uncertain or not in one district only; or where offence is continuing, or consists of several acts.

182. When it is uncertain in which of several local areas an offence was committed, or where an offence is committed partly in one local area and partly in another, or where an offence is a continuing one, and continues to be committed in more local areas than one, or where it consists of several acts done in different local areas, it may be inquired into or tried by a Court having jurisdiction over any of such local areas.

Offence committed on a journey.

183. An offence committed whilst the offender is in the course of performing a journey or voyage may be inquired into or tried by a Court through or into the local limits of whose jurisdiction the offender, or the person against whom, or the thing in respect of which, the offence was committed, passed in the course of that journey or voyage.

Offences against Railway, Telegraph, Post-office and Arms Acts.

184. All offences against the provisions of any law for the time being in force relating to Railways, Telegraphs, the Post-office or Arms and Ammunition may be inquired into or tried in a presidency-town, whether the offence is stated to have been committed within such town or not:

Provided that the offender and all the witnesses necessary for his prosecution are to be found within such town.

High Court to decide, in case of doubt, district where inquiry or trial shall take place.

185. (1) Whenever any doubt arises as to the Court by which any offence should under the preceding provisions of this Chapter be inquired into or tried, the High Court, within the local limits of whose appellate criminal jurisdiction the offender actually is, may decide by which Court the offence shall be inquired into or tried.

(2) In Lower Burma, when the offender is an European British subject, the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon, and in all other cases the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be the High Court.

Power to issue summons or warrant for offence committed beyond local jurisdiction.

186. (1) When a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate, or, if he is specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, a Magistrate of the first class, sees reason to believe that any person within the local limits of his jurisdiction has committed without such limits (whether within or without British India) an offence which cannot, under the provisions of sections 177 to 184 (both inclusive), or any other law for the time being in force, be inquired into or tried within such local limits, but is under some law for the time being in force triable in British India, such Magistrate may inquire into the offence as if it had been committed within such local limits, and compel such person in manner hereinbefore provided to appear before him, and send such person to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try such offence, or, if such offence is bailable, take a bond with or without sureties for his appearance before such Magistrate.

Magistrate's procedure on arrest.

(2) When there are more Magistrates than one having such jurisdiction and the Magistrate acting under this section cannot satisfy himself as to the Magistrate to or before whom such person should be sent, or bound to appear, the case shall be reported for the orders of the High Court.

Procedure where warrant issued by subordinate Magistrate.

187. (1) If the person has been arrested under a warrant issued under section 186 by a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, such Magistrate shall send the person arrested to the District or Subdivisional Magistrate to whom he is subordinate, unless the Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try such offence issues his warrant for the arrest of such person, in which case the person arrested shall be delivered to the police-officer executing such warrant, or shall be sent to the Magistrate by whom such warrant was issued.

(2) If the offence which the person arrested is alleged or suspected to have committed is one which may be inquired into or tried by any Criminal Court in the same district other than that of the Magistrate acting under section 186, such Magistrate shall send such person to such Court.

Liability of British subjects for offences committed out of British India.

188. When a Native Indian subject of Her Majesty commits an offence at any place without and beyond the limits of British India, or when any British subject commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India, or

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XV.—Of the Jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 189-194.)

(b) when a servant of the Queen (whether a British subject or not) commits an offence in the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India, he may be dealt with in respect of such offence as if it had been committed at any place within British India at which he may be found:

Political Agent to certify fitness of inquiry into charge.

Provided that no charge as to any such offence shall be inquired into in British India unless the Political Agent, if there is one, for the territory in which the offence is alleged to have been committed, certifies that, in his opinion, the charge ought to be inquired into in British India; and, where there is no Political Agent, the sanction of the Local Government shall be required:

Provided, also, that any proceedings taken against any person under this section which would be a bar to subsequent proceedings against such person for the same offence if such offence had been committed in British India shall be a bar to further proceedings against him under the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879, in respect of the same offence in any territory beyond the limits of British India. XXI of 1879.

Power to direct copies of depositions and exhibits to be received in evidence.

189. Whenever any such offence as is referred to in section 188 is being inquired into or tried, the Local Government may, if it thinks fit, direct that copies of depositions made or exhibits produced before the Political Agent or a judicial officer in or for the territory in which such offence is alleged to have been committed shall be received as evidence by the Court holding such inquiry or trial in any case in which such Court might issue a commission for taking evidence as to the matters to which such depositions or exhibits relate.

B.—Conditions requisite for Initiation of Proceedings.

Cognizance of offences by Magistrates.

190. (1) Except as hereinafter provided, any Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, and any other Magistrate specially empowered in this behalf, may take cognizance of any offence—

(a) upon receiving a complaint of facts which constitute such offence;

(b) upon a police-report of such facts;

(c) upon information received from any person other than a police-officer, or upon his own knowledge or suspicion, that such offence has been committed.

(2) The Local Government, or the District Magistrate subject to the general or special orders of the Local Government, may empower any Magistrate to take cognizance under sub-section (1), clause (a) or clause (b), of offences for which he may try or commit for trial.

(3) The Local Government may empower any Magistrate of the first or second class to take cognizance under sub-section (1), clause (c), of offences for which he may try or commit for trial.

Transfer or commitment on application of accused.

191. When a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence under sub-section (1), clause (c), of the preceding section, the accused shall, before any evidence is taken, be informed that he is entitled to have the case tried by another Court, and if the accused, or any of the accused if there be more than one, objects to being tried by such Magistrate, the case shall, instead of being tried by such Magistrate, be committed to the Court of Session or transferred to another Magistrate.

Transfer of cases by Magistrates.

192. (1) Any Chief Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may transfer any case, of which he has taken cognizance, for inquiry or trial, to any Magistrate subordinate to him.

(2) Any District Magistrate may empower any Magistrate of the first class who has taken cognizance of any case, to transfer it for inquiry or trial to any other specified Magistrate in his district who is competent under this Code to try the accused or commit him for trial; and such Magistrate may dispose of the case accordingly.

Cognizance of offences by Courts of Session.

193. (1) Except as otherwise expressly provided by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, no Court of Session shall take cognizance of any offence as a Court of original jurisdiction unless the accused has been committed to it by a Magistrate duly empowered in that behalf.

(2) Additional Sessions Judges and Assistant Sessions Judges shall try such cases only as the Local Government by general or special order may direct them to try, or, in the case of Assistant Sessions Judges, as the Sessions Judge of the division, by general or special order, may make over to them for trial.

Cognizance of offences by High Court.

194. (1) The High Court may take cognizance of any offence upon a commitment made to it in manner hereinafter provided.

Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect the provisions of any letters patent granted under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or any other provision of this Code. 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XV.—Of the Jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 195-197.)

Informations by the Advocate General.

(2) (a) Notwithstanding anything in this Code contained, the Advocate General may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government, exhibit to the High Court, against persons subject to the jurisdiction of the High Court, informations for all purposes for which Her Majesty's Attorney-General may exhibit informations on behalf of the Crown in the High Court of Justice in England.

(b) Such proceedings may be taken upon every such information as may lawfully be taken in the case of similar informations filed by Her Majesty's Attorney-General so far as the circumstances of the case and the practice and procedure of the said High Court will admit.

(c) All fines, penalties, forfeitures, debts and sums of money recovered or levied under or by virtue of any such information shall belong to the Government of India.

(d) The High Court may make rules for carrying into effect the provisions of this section.

195. (1) No Court shall take cognizance—

Prosecution for contempts of lawful authority of public servants.

XLV of 1860.

(a) of any offence punishable under sections 172 to 188 (both inclusive) of the Indian Penal Code, except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of the public servant concerned or of some public servant to whom he is subordinate;

Prosecution for certain offences against public justice.

(b) of any offence punishable under section 193, 194, 195, 196, 199, 200, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211 or 228 of the same Code, when such offence is committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of such Court, or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate;

Prosecution for certain offences relating to documents given in evidence.

(c) of any offence described in section 463 or punishable under section 471, 475 or 476 of the same Code, when such offence has been committed by a party to any proceeding in any Court in respect of a document produced or given in evidence in such proceeding, except with the previous sanction, or on the complaint, of such Court, or of some other Court to which such Court is subordinate.

(2) In clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) the term "Court" means a Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court, but does not include a Registrar or Sub-Registrar under the Indian Registration Act, 1877. III of 1877.

(3) The provisions of sub-section (1), with reference to the offences named therein, apply also to the abetment of such offences, and attempts to commit them.

Nature of sanction necessary.

(4) The sanction referred to in this section may be expressed in general terms, and need not name the accused person; but it shall, so far as practicable, specify the Court or other place in which, and the occasion on which, the offence was committed.

(5) When sanction is given in respect of any offence referred to in this section, the Court taking cognizance of the case may frame a charge of any other offence so referred to which is disclosed by the facts.

(6) Any sanction given or refused under this section may be revoked or granted by any authority to which the authority giving or refusing it is subordinate; and no sanction shall remain in force for more than six months from the date on which it was given: provided that the High Court may, for good cause shewn, extend the time.

(7) For the purposes of this section every Court shall be deemed to be subordinate only to the Court to which appeals from the former Court ordinarily lie, that is to say:—

(a) where such appeals lie to more than one Court, the Appellate Court of inferior jurisdiction shall be the Court to which such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate;

(b) where such appeals lie to a Civil and also to a Revenue Court, such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the Civil or Revenue Court according to the nature of the case in connection with which the offence is alleged to have been committed;

(c) where no appeal lies such Court shall be deemed to be subordinate to the principal Court of original jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such first-mentioned Court is situate.

Prosecution for offences against the State.

196 No Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code (except section 127), or punishable under section 108A, or section 153A or section 294A or section 505 of the same Code, unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from, the Governor General in Council, the Local Government, or some officer empowered by the Governor General in Council in this behalf. XLV of 1860.

Prosecution of Judges and public servants.

197. (1) When any Judge, or any public servant not removeable from his office without the sanction of the Government of India or the Local Government, is accused as such Judge or public servant of any offence, no Court shall take cognizance of such offence, except with the previous sanction of the Government having power to order his removal, or of some officer empowered in this behalf by such Government, or of some Court or other authority to which such Judge or public servant is subordinate, and whose power to give such sanction has not been limited by such Government.

Power of Government as to prosecution.

(2) Such Government may determine the person by whom, the manner in which, the offence or offences for which, the prosecution of such Judge or public servant is to be conducted, and may specify the Court before which the trial is to be held.

Prosecution for breach of contract, defamation and offences against marriage.

XLV of 1860.

198. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence falling under Chapter XIX or Chapter XXI of the Indian Penal Code or under sections 493 to 496 (both inclusive) of the same Code, except upon a complaint made by some person aggrieved by such offence.

Prosecution for adultery or enticing a married woman.

XLV of 1860.

199. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence under section 497 or section 498 of the Indian Penal Code, except upon a complaint made by the husband of the woman, or, in his absence, by some person who had care of such woman on his behalf at the time when such offence was committed.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF COMPLAINTS TO MAGISTRATES.

Examination of complainant.

200. Subject to the provisions of section 476, a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence on complaint shall at once examine the complainant upon oath, and the substance of the examination shall be reduced to writing and shall be signed by the complainant, and also by the Magistrate:

Provided as follows:—

(a) when the complaint is made in writing, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require a Magistrate to examine the complainant before transferring the case under section 192;

(b) where the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate, such examination may be on oath or not as the Magistrate in each case thinks fit, and need not be reduced to writing; but the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, before the matter of the complaint is brought before him, require it to be reduced to writing:

(c) when the case has been transferred under section 192 and the Magistrate so transferring it has already examined the complainant, the Magistrate to whom it is so transferred shall not be bound to re-examine the complainant.

Procedure by Magistrate not competent to take cognizance of the case.

201. (1) If the complaint has been made in writing to a Magistrate who is not competent to take cognizance of the case, he shall return the complaint for presentation to the proper Court with an endorsement to that effect.

(2) If the complaint has not been made in writing, such Magistrate shall direct the complainant to the proper Court.

Postponement of issue of process.

202. (1) If the Chief Presidency Magistrate, or any other Presidency Magistrate whom the Local Government may from time to time authorise in this behalf, or any Magistrate of the first or second class, is not satisfied as to the truth of a complaint of an offence of which he is authorised to take cognizance, he may, when the complainant has been examined, record his reasons, and may then postpone the issue of process for compelling the attendance of the person complained against and either inquire into the case himself or direct a previous local investigation to be made by any officer subordinate to such Magistrate, or by a police-officer, or by such other person, not being a Magistrate or police-officer, as he thinks fit, for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsehood of the complaint.

(2) If such investigation is made by some person not being a Magistrate or a police-officer, he shall exercise all the powers conferred by this Code on an officer in charge of a police-station, except that he shall not have power to arrest without warrant.

(3) This section applies also to the police in the towns of Calcutta and Bombay.

Dismissal of complaint.

203. The Magistrate before whom a complaint is made or to whom it has been transferred, may dismiss the complaint, if, after examining the complainant and considering the result of the investigation (if any) made under section 202, there is in his judgment no sufficient ground for proceeding. In such case he shall briefly record his reasons for so doing.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF THE COMMENCEMENT OF PROCEEDINGS BEFORE MAGISTRATES.

Issue of process.

204. (1) If, in the opinion of a Magistrate taking cognizance of an offence, there is sufficient ground for proceeding, and the case appears to be one in which, according to the fourth column of the second schedule, a summons should issue in the first instance, he shall issue his summons for the attendance of the accused. If the case appears to be one in which, according to that column, a warrant should issue in the first instance, he may issue a warrant, or, if he thinks fit, a summons, for causing the accused to be brought or to appear at a certain time before such Magistrate or (if he has not jurisdiction himself) some other Magistrate having jurisdiction.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of section 90.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XVII.—Of the Commencement of Proceedings before Magistrates.—Section 205. Chapter XVIII —Of Inquiry into Cases triable by the Court of Session or High Court.—Sections 205-212.)

(3) When by any law for the time being in force any process-fees or other fees are payable, no process shall be issued until the fees are paid, and, if such fees are not paid within a reasonable time, the Magistrate may dismiss the complaint.

Magistrate may dispense with personal attendance of accused.

205. (1) Whenever a Magistrate issues a summons, he may, if he sees reason so to do, dispense with the personal attendance of the accused, and permit him to appear by his pleader.

(2) But the Magistrate inquiring into or trying the case may, in his discretion, at any stage of the proceedings, direct the personal attendance of the accused, and, if necessary, enforce such attendance in manner hereinbefore provided.

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF INQUIRY INTO CASES TRIABLE BY THE COURT OF SESSION OR HIGH COURT.

Power to commit for trial.

206. (1) Subject to the provisions of section 443, any Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Subdivisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, or any Magistrate empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may commit any person for trial to the Court of Session or High Court for any offence triable by such Court.

(2) But, save as herein otherwise provided, no person triable by the Court of Session shall be committed for trial to the High Court.

Procedure in inquiries preparatory to commitment.

207. The following procedure shall be adopted in inquiries before Magistrates where the case is triable exclusively by a Court of Session or High Court, or, in the opinion of the Magistrate, ought to be tried by such Court.

Taking of evidence produced.

208. (1) The Magistrate shall, when the accused appears or is brought before him, proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take in manner hereinafter provided all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution or in behalf of the accused, or as may be called for by the Magistrate.

(2) The accused shall be at liberty to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution, and in such case the prosecutor may re-examine them.

Process for production of further evidence.

(3) If the complainant or officer conducting the prosecution, or the accused, applies to the Magistrate to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness or the production of any document or thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless, for reasons to be recorded, he deems it unnecessary to do so.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require a Presidency Magistrate to record his reasons.

When accused person to be discharged.

209. (1) When the evidence referred to in section 208, sub-sections (1) and (3), has been taken, and he has (if necessary) examined the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, such Magistrate shall, if he finds that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused person for trial, record his reasons and discharge him, unless it appears to the Magistrate that such person should be tried before himself or some other Magistrate, in which case he shall proceed accordingly.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a Magistrate from discharging the accused at any previous stage of the case if for reasons to be recorded by such Magistrate, he considers the charge to be groundless.

When charge is to be framed.

210. (1) When, upon such evidence being taken and such examination (if any) being made, the Magistrate is satisfied that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, he shall frame a charge under his hand, declaring with what offence the accused is charged.

Charge to be explained, and copy furnished, to accused.

(2) As soon as the charge has been framed, it shall be read and explained to the accused, and a copy thereof shall, if he so requires, be given to him free of cost.

List of witnesses for defence on trial.

211. (1) The accused shall be required at once to give in, orally or in writing, a list of the persons (if any) whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on his trial.

Further list.

(2) The Magistrate may, in his discretion, allow the accused to give in any further list of witnesses at a subsequent time; and, where the accused is committed for trial before the High Court, nothing in this section shall be deemed to preclude the accused from giving, at any time before his trial, to the Clerk of the Crown a further list of the persons whom he wishes to be summoned to give evidence on such trial.

Power of Magistrate to examine such witnesses.

212. The Magistrate may, in his discretion, summon and examine any witness named in any list given in to him under section 211.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XVIII.—Of Inquiry into Cases triable by the Court of Session or High Court.—Sections 213-219.)

Order of commitment.

213. (1) When the accused, on being required to give in a list under section 211, has declined to do so, or when he has given in such list and the witnesses (if any) included therein whom the Magistrate desires to examine have been summoned and examined under section 212, the Magistrate may make an order committing the accused for trial by the High Court or the Court of Session (as the case may be), and (unless the Magistrate is a Presidency Magistrate) shall also record briefly the reasons for such commitment.

(2) If the Magistrate, after hearing the witnesses for the defence, is satisfied that there are not sufficient grounds for committing the accused, he may cancel the charge and discharge the accused.

Person charged outside presidency-towns jointly with European British subject.

214. If any person (not being an European British subject) is accused before a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate of having committed an offence conjointly with an European British subject who is about to be committed for trial, or to be tried, before the High Court on a similar charge arising out of the same transaction, and the Magistrate finds that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, he shall commit him for trial before the High Court, and not before the Court of Session.

Quashing commitments under section 213 or 214

215 A commitment once made under section 213 or section 214 by a competent Magistrate or by a Court of Session under section 477, or by a Civil or Revenue Court under section 478, can be quashed by the High Court only, and only on a point of law.

Summons to witnesses for defence when accused is committed.

216 When the accused has given in any list of witnesses under section 211 and has been committed for trial, the Magistrate shall summon such of the witnesses included in the list, as have not appeared before himself, to appear before the Court to which the accused has been committed:

Provided that, where the accused has been committed to the High Court, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, leave such witnesses to be summoned by the Clerk of the Crown, and such witnesses may be summoned accordingly:

Refusal to summon unnecessary witness unless deposit made.

Provided, also, that, if the Magistrate thinks that any witness is included in the list for the purpose of vexation or delay, or of defeating the ends of justice, the Magistrate may require the accused to satisfy him that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the evidence of such witness is material, and, if he is not so satisfied, may refuse to summon the witness (recording his reasons for such refusal), or may before summoning him require such sum to be deposited as such Magistrate thinks necessary to defray the expense of obtaining the attendance of the witness and all other proper expenses.

Bond of complainants and witnesses.

217. (1) Complainants and witnesses for the prosecution and defence, whose attendance before the Court of Session or High Court is necessary and who appear before the Magistrate, shall execute before him bonds binding themselves to be in attendance when called upon at the Court of Session or High Court to prosecute or to give evidence, as the case may be.

Detention in custody in case of refusal to attend or to execute bond.

(2) If any complainant or witness refuses to attend before the Court of Session or High Court, or execute the bond above directed, the Magistrate may detain him in custody until he executes such bond, or until his attendance at the Court of Session or High Court is required, when the Magistrate shall send him in custody to the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

Commitment when to be notified.

218. (1) When the accused is committed for trial, the Magistrate shall issue an order to such person as may be appointed by the Local Government in this behalf, notifying the commitment, and stating the offence in the same form as the charge, unless the Magistrate is satisfied that such person is already aware of the commitment and the form of the charge;

Charge, etc., to be forwarded to High Court or Court of Session.

and shall send the charge, the record of the inquiry and any weapon or other thing which is to be produced in evidence, to the Court of Session or (where the commitment is made to the High Court) to the Clerk of the Crown or other officer appointed in this behalf by the High Court.

English translation to be forwarded to High Court.

(2) When the commitment is made to the High Court and any part of the record is not in English, an English translation of such part shall be forwarded with the record.

Power to summon supplementary witnesses

219 (1) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, summon and examine supplementary witnesses after the commitment and before the commencement of the trial, and bind them over in manner hereinbefore provided to appear and give evidence.

(2) Such examination shall, if possible, be taken in the presence of the accused, and, where the Magistrate is not a Presidency Magistrate, a copy of the evidence of such witnesses shall, if the accused so require, be given to him free of cost.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XVIII—Of Inquiry into Case triable by the Court of Session or High Court.—Section 220. Chapter XIX. —Of the Charge.—Sections 221-224.)

Custody of accused pending trial.

220. Until and during the trial, the Magistrate shall, subject to the provisions of this Code regarding the taking of bail, commit the accused, by warrant, to custody.

CHAPTER XIX.

OF THE CHARGE.

Form of Charges.

Charge to state offence.

221. (1) Every charge under this Code shall state the offence with which the accused is charged.

Specific name of offence sufficient description.

(2) If the law which creates the offence gives it any specific name, the offence may be described in the charge by that name only.

How stated where offence has no specific name.

(3) If the law which creates the offence does not give it any specific name, so much of the definition of the offence must be stated as to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

(4) The law and section of the law against which the offence is said to have been committed shall be mentioned in the charge.

What implied in charge.

(5) The fact that the charge is made is equivalent to a statement that every legal condition required by law to constitute the offence charged was fulfilled in the particular case.

Language of charge.

(6) In the presidency-towns the charge shall be written in English; elsewhere it shall be written either in English or in the language of the Court.

Previous conviction when to be set out.

(7) If the accused has been previously convicted of any offence, and it is intended to prove such previous conviction for the purpose of affecting the punishment which the Court is competent to award, the fact, date and place of the previous conviction shall be stated in the charge. If such statement is omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged with the murder of B. This is equivalent to a statement that A's act fell within the definition of murder given in sections 299 and 300 of the Indian Penal Code; that it did not fall within any of the general exceptions of the same Code; and that it did not fall within any of the five exceptions to section 300, or that, if it did fall within Exception I, one or other of the three provisoes to that exception applied to it. XLV of 1860.

(b) A is charged, under section 326 of the Indian Penal Code, with voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B by means of an instrument for shooting. This is equivalent to a statement that the case was not provided for by section 335 of the Indian Penal Code, and that the general exceptions did not apply to it. XLV of 1860.

(c) A is accused of murder, cheating, theft, extortion, adultery or criminal intimidation, or using a false property-mark. The charge may state that A committed murder, or cheating, or theft, or extortion, or adultery, or criminal intimidation, or that he used a false property-mark, without reference to the definitions of those crimes contained in the Indian Penal Code; but the sections under which the offence is punishable must, in each instance, be referred to in the charge. XLV of 1860.

(d) A is charged, under section 184 of the Indian Penal Code, with intentionally obstructing a sale of property offered for sale by the lawful authority of a public servant. The charge should be in those words. XLV of 1860.

Particulars as to time, place and person.

222. (1) The charge shall contain such particulars as to the time and place of the alleged offence, and the person (if any) against whom, or the thing (if any) in respect of which, it was committed, as are reasonably sufficient to give the accused notice of the matter with which he is charged.

(2) When the accused is charged with criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money, it shall be sufficient to specify the gross sum in respect of which the offence is alleged to have been committed, and the dates between which the offence is alleged to have been committed, without specifying particular items or exact dates, and the charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence within the meaning of section 234:

Provided that the time included between the first and last of such dates shall not exceed one year.

When manner of committing offence must be stated.

223. When the nature of the case is such that the particulars mentioned in sections 221 and 222 do not give the accused sufficient notice of the matter with which he is charged, the charge shall also contain such particulars of the manner in which the alleged offence was committed as will be sufficient for that purpose.

Illustrations.

(a) A is accused of the theft of a certain article at a certain time and place. The charge need not set out the manner in which the theft was effected.

(b) A is accused of cheating B at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A cheated B.

(c) A is accused of giving false evidence at a given time and place. The charge must set out that portion of the evidence given by A which is alleged to be false.

(d) A is accused of obstructing B, a public servant, in the discharge of his public functions at a given time and place. The charge must set out the manner in which A obstructed B in the discharge of his functions.

(e) A is accused of the murder of B at a given time and place. The charge need not state the manner in which A murdered B.

(f) A is accused of disobeying a direction of the law with intent to save B from punishment. The charge must set out the disobedience charged and the law infringed.

Words in charge taken in sense of law under which offence is punishable.

224. In every charge words used in describing an offence shall be deemed to have been used in the sense attached to them respectively by the law under which such offence is punishable.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XIX.—Of the Charge.—Sections 225-232.)

Effect of errors.

225. No error in stating either the offence or the particulars required to be stated in the charge, and no omission to state the offence or those particulars, shall be regarded at any stage of the case as material, unless the accused was in fact misled by such error or omission, and it has occasioned a failure of justice.

Illustrations.

XLV of 1860.

(a) A is charged, under section 242 of the Indian Penal Code, with "having been in possession of counterfeit coin, having known at the time when he became possessed thereof that such coin was counterfeit," the word "fraudulently" being omitted in the charge. Unless it appears that A was in fact misled by this omission, the error shall not be regarded as material.

(b) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge, or is set out incorrectly. A defends himself, calls witnesses, and gives his own account of the transaction. The Court may infer from this that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating is not material.

(c) A is charged with cheating B, and the manner in which he cheated B is not set out in the charge. There were many transactions between A and B, and A had no means of knowing to which of them the charge referred, and offered no defence. The Court may infer from such facts that the omission to set out the manner of the cheating was, in this case, a material error.

(d) A is charged with the murder of Khoda Baksh on the 21st January, 1882. In fact, the murdered person's name was Haidar Baksh, and the date of the murder was the 20th January, 1882. A was never charged with any murder but one, and had heard the inquiry before the Magistrate, which referred exclusively to the case of Haidar Baksh. The Court may infer from these facts that A was not misled, and that the error in the charge was immaterial.

(e) A was charged with murdering Haidar Baksh on the 20th January, 1882, and Khoda Baksh (who tried to arrest him for that murder) on the 21st January, 1882. When charged for the murder of Haidar Baksh, he was tried for the murder of Khoda Baksh. The witnesses present in his defence were witnesses in the case of Haidar Baksh. The Court may infer from this that A was misled and that the error was material.

Procedure on commitment without charge or with imperfect charge.

226. When any person is committed for trial without a charge, or with an imperfect or erroneous charge, the Court, or, in the case of a High Court, the Clerk of the Crown, may frame a charge, or add to or otherwise alter the charge, as the case may be, having regard to the rules contained in this Code as to the form of charges.

Illustrations.

1. A is charged with the murder of C. A charge of abetting the murder of C may be added or substituted.

XLV of 1860.

2. A is charged with forging a valuable security under section 467 of the Indian Penal Code. A charge of fabricating false evidence under section 193 may be added.

3. A is charged with receiving stolen property knowing it to be stolen. During the trial it incidentally appears that he has in his possession instruments for the purpose of counterfeiting coin. A charge under section 235 of the Indian Penal Code cannot be added.

Court may alter charge.

227. (1) Any Court may alter or add to any charge at any time before judgment is pronounced, or, in the case of trials before the Court of Session or High Court, before the verdict of the jury is returned or the opinions of the assessors are expressed.

(2) Every such alteration or addition shall be read and explained to the accused.

When trial may proceed immediately after alteration.

228. If the charge framed or alteration or addition made under section 226 or section 227 is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is not likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused in his defence or the prosecutor in the conduct of the case, the Court may, in its discretion, after such charge or alteration or addition has been framed or made, proceed with the trial as if the new or altered charge had been the original charge.

When new trial may be directed, or trial suspended.

229. If the new or altered or added charge is such that proceeding immediately with the trial is likely, in the opinion of the Court, to prejudice the accused or the prosecutor as aforesaid, the Court may either direct a new trial or adjourn the trial for such period as may be necessary.

Stay of proceedings if prosecution of offence in altered charge require previous sanction.

230. If the offence stated in the new or altered or added charge is one for the prosecution of which previous sanction is necessary, the case shall not be proceeded with until such sanction is obtained, unless sanction has been already obtained for a prosecution on the same facts as those on which the new or altered charge is founded.

Recall of witnesses when charge altered.

231. Whenever a charge is altered or added to by the Court after the commencement of the trial, the prosecutor and the accused shall be allowed to recall or re-summon, and examine with reference to such alteration or addition, any witness who may have been examined, and also to call any further witness whom the Court may think to be material.

Effect of material error.

232. (1) If any Appellate Court, or the High Court in the exercise of its powers of revision or of its powers under Chapter XXVII, is of opinion that any person convicted of an offence was misled in his defence by the absence of a charge or by an error in the charge, it shall direct a new trial to be had upon a charge framed in whatever manner it thinks fit.

(2) If the Court is of opinion that the facts of the case are such that no valid charge could be preferred against the accused in respect of the facts proved, it shall quash the conviction.

attempted to use as true or genuine, was false or fabricated. If the Court thinks it probable that A had such knowledge, and that he was misled in his defence by the omission from the charge of the statement that he had it, it shall direct a new trial upon an amended charge; but, if it appears probable from the proceedings that A had no such knowledge, it shall quash the conviction.

Joinder of Charges.

Separate charges for distinct offences.

233. For every distinct offence of which any person is accused there shall be a separate charge, and every such charge shall be tried separately, except in the cases mentioned in sections 234, 235, 236 and 239.

Illustration.

A is accused of a theft on one occasion, and of causing grievous hurt on another occasion. A must be separately charged and separately tried for the theft and causing grievous hurt.

Three offences of same kind within year may be charged together.

234. (1) When a person is accused of more offences than one of the same kind committed within the space of twelve months from the first to the last of such offences, he may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, any number of them not exceeding three.

(2) Offences are of the same kind when they are punishable with the same amount of punishment under the same section of the Indian Penal Code or of any special or local law. XLV of 1860.

Trial for more than one offence.

235. (1) If, in one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction, more offences than one are committed by the same person, he may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, every such offence.

Offence falling within two definitions.

(2) If the acts alleged constitute an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, the person accused of them may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, each of such offences.

Acts constituting one offence, but constituting when combined a different offence.

(3) If several acts, of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence, constitute when combined a different offence, the person accused of them may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, the offence constituted by such acts when combined, and for any offence constituted by any one, or more, of such acts.

(4) Nothing contained in this section shall affect the Indian Penal Code, section 71. XLV of 1860.

to sub-section (1)—

(a) A rescues B, a person in lawful custody, and in so doing causes grievous hurt to C, a constable in whose custody B was. A may be charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 225 and 333 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(b) A commits house-breaking by day with intent to commit adultery, and commits, in the house so entered, adultery with B's wife. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 454 and 497 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(c) A entices B, the wife of C, away from C, with intent to commit adultery with B, and then commits adultery with her. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 498 and 497 of the Indian Penal Code.

(d) A has in his possession several seals, knowing them to be counterfeit and intending to use them for the purpose of committing several forgeries punishable under section 466 of the Indian Penal Code. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, the possession of each seal under section 473 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(e) With intent to cause injury to B, A institutes a criminal proceeding against him, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such proceeding; and also falsely accuses B of having committed an offence, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such charges. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, two offences under section 211 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(f) A, with intent to cause injury to B, falsely accuses him of having committed an offence, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such charge. On the trial, A gives false evidence against B, intending thereby to cause B to be convicted of a capital offence. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 211 and 194 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(g) A, with six others, commits the offences of rioting, grievous hurt and assaulting a public servant endeavouring in the discharge of his duty as such to suppress the riot. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 147, 325 and 152 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(h) A threatens B, C and D at the same time with injury to their persons with intent to cause alarm to them. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, each of the three offences under section 506 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

The separate charges referred to in Illustrations (a) to (h) respectively may be tried at the same time.

to sub-section (2)—

(i) A wrongfully strikes B with a cane. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 352 and 323 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(j) Several stolen sacks of corn are made over to A and B, who know they are stolen property, for the purpose of concealing them. A and B thereupon voluntarily assist each other to conceal the sacks at the bottom of a grain-pit. A and B may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 411 and 414 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(k) A exposes her child with the knowledge that she is thereby likely to cause its death. The child dies in consequence of such exposure. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 317 and 304 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

(l) A dishonestly uses a forged document as genuine evidence, in order to convict B, a public servant, of an offence under section 167 of the Indian Penal Code. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 471 (read with 466) and 196 of the same Code. XLV of 1860.

(m) A commits robbery on B, and in doing so voluntarily causes hurt to him. A may be separately charged with, and convicted of, offences under sections 323, 392 and 394 of the Indian Penal Code. XLV of 1860.

Where it is doubtful what offence has been committed.

236. If a single act or series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, the accused may be charged with having committed all or any of such offences, and any number of such charges may be tried at once; or he may be charged in the alternative with having committed some one of the said offences.

Illustrations.

(a) A is accused of an act which may amount to theft, or receiving stolen property, or criminal breach of trust or cheating. He may be charged with theft, receiving stolen property, criminal breach of trust and cheating, or he may be charged with having committed theft, or receiving stolen property, or criminal breach of trust or cheating.

(b) A states on oath before the Magistrate that he saw B hit C with a club. Before the Sessions Court A states on oath that B never hit C. A may be charged in the alternative and convicted of intentionally giving false evidence, although it cannot be proved which of these contradictory statements was false.

When a person is charged with one offence, he can be convicted of another.

237. (1) If, in the case mentioned in section 236, the accused is charged with one offence, and it appears in evidence that he committed a different offence for which he might have been charged under the provisions of that section, he may be convicted of the offence which he is shown to have committed, although he was not charged with it.

(2) When the accused is charged with an offence, he may be convicted of having attempted to commit that offence, although the attempt is not separately charged.

Illustration.

A is charged with theft. It appears that he committed the offence of criminal breach of trust, or that of receiving stolen goods. He may be convicted of criminal breach of trust, or of receiving stolen goods (as the case may be), though he was not charged with such offence.

When offence proved included in offence charged.

238. (1) When a person is charged with an offence consisting of several particulars, a combination of some only of which constitutes a complete minor offence, and such combination is proved, but the remaining particulars are not proved, he may be convicted of the minor offence, though he was not charged with it.

(2) When a person is charged with an offence and facts are proved which reduce it to a minor offence, he may be convicted of the minor offence, although he is not charged with it.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise a conviction of any offence referred to in section 198 or section 199 when no complaint has been made as required by that section.

Illustrations.

(a) A is charged, under section 407 of the Indian Penal Code, with criminal breach of trust in respect of property entrusted to him as a carrier. It appears that he did commit criminal breach of trust under section 406 in respect of the property, but that it was not entrusted to him as a carrier. He may be convicted of criminal breach of trust under section 406. XLV of 1860.

(b) A is charged, under section 325 of the Indian Penal Code, with causing grievous hurt. He proves that he acted on grave and sudden provocation. He may be convicted under section 335 of that Code. XLV of 1860.

What persons may be charged jointly.

239. When more persons than one are accused of the same offence or of different offences committed in the same transaction, or when one person is accused of committing any offence, and another of abetment of, or attempt to commit, such offence, they may be charged and tried together or separately, as the Court thinks fit; and the provisions contained in the former part of this Chapter shall apply to all such charges.

Illustrations.

(a) A and B are accused of the same murder. A and B may be charged and tried together for the murder.

(b) A and B are accused of a robbery, in the course of which A commits a murder with which B has nothing to do. A and B may be tried together on a charge, charging both of them with the robbery, and A alone with the murder.

(c) A and B are both charged with a theft, and B is charged with two other thefts committed by him in the course of the same transaction. A and B may be both tried together on a charge, charging both with the one theft, and B alone with the two other thefts.

Withdrawal of remaining charges on conviction on one of several charges.

240. When a charge containing more heads than one is framed against the same person, and when a conviction has been had on one or more of them, the complainant, or the officer conducting the prosecution, may, with the consent of the Court, withdraw the remaining charge or charges, or the Court of its own accord may stay the inquiry into, or trial of, such charge or charges. Such withdrawal shall have the effect of an acquittal on such charge or charges, unless the conviction be set aside, in which case the said Court (subject to the order of the Court setting aside the conviction) may proceed with the inquiry into or trial of the charge or charges so withdrawn.

CHAPTER XX.

OF THE TRIAL OF SUMMONS-CASES BY MAGISTRATES.

Procedure in summons-cases.

241. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of summons-cases.

242. When the accused appears or is brought before the Magistrate, the particulars of the offence of which he is accused shall be stated to him, and he shall be asked if he has any cause to show why he should not be convicted; but it shall not be necessary to frame a formal charge.

Substance of accusation to be stated.

243. If the accused admits that he has committed the offence of which he is accused, his admission shall be recorded as nearly as possible in the words used by him; and, if he shows no sufficient cause why he should not be convicted, the Magistrate shall convict him accordingly.

Conviction on admission of truth of accusation.

244. (1) If the accused does not make such admission, the Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any), and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution, and also to hear the accused and take all such evidence as he produces in his defence.

Procedure when no such admission is made.

(2) The Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, on the application of the complainant or accused, issue process to compel the attendance of any witness or the production of any document or other thing.

(3) The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application, require that his reasonable expenses, incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial, be deposited in Court.

245. (1) If the Magistrate upon taking the evidence referred to in section 244 and such further evidence (if any) as he may, of his own motion, cause to be produced, and (if he thinks fit) examining the accused, finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal.

Acquittal.

(2) If he finds the accused guilty, he shall pass sentence upon him according to law.

Sentence.

246. A Magistrate may, under section 243 or section 245, convict the accused of any offence triable under this chapter which from the facts admitted or proved he appears to have committed, whatever may be the nature of the complaint or summons.

Finding not limited by complaint or summons.

247. If the summons has been issued on complaint, and upon the day appointed for the appearance of the accused, or any day subsequent thereto to which the hearing may be adjourned, the complainant does not appear, the Magistrate shall, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, acquit the accused, unless for some reason he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing of the case to some other day:

Non-appearance of complainant.

Provided that, where the complainant is a public servant and his personal attendance is not required, the Magistrate may dispense with his attendance, and proceed with the case.

248. If a complainant, at any time before a final order is passed in any case under this Chapter, satisfies the Magistrate that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw his complaint, the Magistrate may permit him to withdraw the same, and shall thereupon acquit the accused.

Withdrawal of complaint.

249. In any case instituted otherwise than upon complaint, a Presidency Magistrate, a Magistrate of the first class, or, with the previous sanction of the District Magistrate, any other Magistrate, may, for reasons to be recorded by him, stop the proceedings at any stage without pronouncing any judgment either of acquittal or conviction, and may thereupon release the accused.

Power to stop proceedings when no complainant.

Frivolous Accusations in Summons and Warrant Cases.

250. (1) If, in any case instituted by complaint as defined in this Code, or upon information given to a police-officer or to a Magistrate, a person is accused before a Magistrate of any offence triable by a Magistrate, and the Magistrate by whom the case is heard discharges or acquits the accused and is satisfied that the accusation against him was frivolous or vexatious, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, by his order of discharge or acquittal, direct the person upon whose complaint or information the accusation was made to pay to the accused, or to each of the accused where there are more than one, such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, as the Magistrate thinks fit:

Frivolous or vexatious accusations.

Provided that, before making any such direction, the Magistrate shall—

(a) record and consider any objection which the complainant or informant may urge against the making of the direction, and,

(b) if the Magistrate directs any compensation to be paid, state in writing, in his order of discharge or acquittal, his reasons for awarding the compensation.

(2) Compensation of which a Magistrate has ordered payment under sub-section (1) shall be recoverable as if it were a fine:

Provided that, if it cannot be recovered, the imprisonment to be awarded shall be simple, and for such term, not exceeding thirty days, as the Magistrate directs.

(3) A complainant or informant who has been ordered under sub-section (1) by a Magistrate of the second or third class to pay compensation to an accused person may appeal from the order, in so far as the order relates to the payment of the compensation, as if such complainant or informant had been convicted on a trial held by such Magistrate.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXI.- Of the Trial of Warrant-cases by Magistrates.—Sections 251-259.)

(4) Where an order for payment of compensation to an accused person is made in a case which is subject to appeal under sub-section (3), the compensation shall not be paid to him before the period allowed for the presentation of the appeal has elapsed, or, if an appeal is presented, before the appeal has been decided.

(5) At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any compensation paid or recovered under this section.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF THE TRIAL OF WARRANT-CASES BY MAGISTRATES.

Procedure in warrant-cases.

251. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of warrant-cases.

Evidence for prosecution.

252. (1) When the accused appears or is brought before a Magistrate, such Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any) and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution.

(2) The Magistrate shall ascertain, from the complainant or otherwise, the names of any persons likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case and to be able to give evidence for the prosecution, and shall summon to give evidence before himself such of them as he thinks necessary.

Discharge of accused.

253. (1) If, upon taking all the evidence referred to in section 252, and making such examination (if any) of the accused as the Magistrate thinks necessary, he finds that no case against the accused has been made out which, if unrebutted, would warrant his conviction, the Magistrate shall discharge him.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a Magistrate from discharging the accused at any previous stage of the case if, for reasons to be recorded by such Magistrate, he considers the charge to be groundless.

Charge to be framed when offence appears proved.

254. If, when such evidence and examination have been taken and made, or at any previous stage of the case, the Magistrate is of opinion that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence triable under this chapter, which such Magistrate is competent to try, and which, in his opinion, could be adequately punished by him, he shall frame in writing a charge against the accused.

Plea.

255. (1) The charge shall then be read and explained to the accused, and he shall be asked whether is guilty or has any defence to make.

(2) If the accused pleads guilty, the Magistrate shall record the plea and may in his discretion convict him thereon

Defence.

256. (1) If the accused refuses to plead, or does not plead, or claims to be tried, he shall be required to state whether he wishes to cross-examine any, and, if so, which, of the witnesses for the prosecution whose evidence has been taken. If he says he does so wish, the witnesses named by him shall be re-called, and, after cross-examination and re-examination (if any), they shall be discharged. The evidence of any remaining witnesses for the prosecution shall next be taken, and, after cross-examination and re-examination (if any), they also shall be discharged. The accused shall then be called upon to enter upon his defence and produce his evidence.

(2) If the accused puts in any written statement, the Magistrate shall file it with the record.

Process for compelling production of evidence at instance of accused.

257. (1) If the accused, after he has entered upon his defence, applies to the Magistrate to issue any process for compelling the attendance of any witness for the purpose of examination or cross-examination, or the production of any document or other thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless he considers that such application should be refused on the ground that it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice. Such ground shall be recorded by him in writing:

Provided that, when the accused has cross-examined or had the opportunity of cross-examining any witness after the charge is framed, the attendance of such witness shall not be compelled under this section, unless the Magistrate is satisfied that it is necessary for the purposes of justice.

(2) The Magistrate may, before summoning any witness on such application, require that his reasonable expenses incurred in attending for the purposes of the trial be deposited in Court.

Acquittal.

258. (1) If in any case under this Chapter in which a charge has been framed the Magistrate finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal.

Conviction.

(2) If in any such case the Magistrate finds the accused guilty, he shall pass sentence upon him according to law.

Absence of complainant.

259. When the proceedings have been instituted upon complaint, and upon any day fixed for the hearing of the case the complainant is absent, and the offence may be lawfully compounded, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, at any time before the charge has been framed, discharge the accused.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXII.—Of Summary Trials.—Sections 260-263.)

CHAPTER XXII.

OF SUMMARY TRIALS.

Power to try summarily.

260. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Code,—

(a) the District Magistrate,

(b) any Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, and

(c) any Bench of Magistrates invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the first class and specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may, he or they think fit, try in a summary way all or any of the following offences:—

(a) offences not punishable with death, transportation or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months;

(b) offences relating to weights and measures under sections 264, 265 and 266 of the Indian Penal Code; XLV of 1860.

(c) hurt, under section 323 of the same Code;

(d) theft, under section 379, 380 or 381 of the same Code, where the value of the property stolen does not exceed fifty rupees;

(e) dishonest misappropriation of property under section 403 of the same Code, where the value of the property misappropriated does not exceed fifty rupees;

(f) receiving or retaining stolen property, under section 411 of the same Code, where the value of such property does not exceed fifty rupees;

(g) assisting in the concealment or disposal of stolen property, under section 414 of the same Code, where the value of such property does not exceed fifty rupees;

(h) mischief, under section 427 of the same Code;

(i) house-trespass, under section 448 and offences under sections 451, 45[illegible] and 457 of the same Code;

(j) insult with intent to provoke a breach of the peace, under section 504, and criminal intimidation, under section 506, of the same Code;

(k) abetment of any of the foregoing offences;

(l) an attempt to commit any of the foregoing offences, when such attempt is an offence;

(m) offences under section 20 of the Cattle-trespass Act, 1871: I of 1871

Provided that no case in which a Magistrate exercises the special powers conferred by section 34, shall be tried in a summary way.

(2) When in the course of a summary trial it appears to the Magistrate or Bench that the case is one which is of a character which renders it undesirable that it should be tried summarily, the Magistrate or Bench shall recall any witnesses who may have been examined and proceed to re-hear the case in manner provided by this Code.

Power to invest Bench of Magistrates invested with less power.

261. The Local Government may confer on any Bench of Magistrates invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the second or third class power to try summarily all or any of the following offences:—

(a) offences against the Indian Penal Code, sections 277, 278, 279, 285, 286, 289, 290, 292, 293, 294, 323, 334, 336, 341, 352, 426 and 447; XLV of 1860.

(b) offences against Municipal Acts, and the conservancy clauses of Police Acts which are punishable only with fine, or with imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month;

(c) abetment of any of the foregoing offences;

(d) an attempt to commit any of the foregoing offences, when such attempt is an offence.

Procedure for summons and warrant cases applicable.

262. (1) In trials under this Chapter, the procedure prescribed for summons-cases shall be followed in summons-cases, and the procedure prescribed for warrant-cases shall be followed in warrant-cases, except as hereinafter mentioned.

Limit of imprisonment.

(2) No sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding three months shall be passed in the case of any conviction under this Chapter.

Record in cases where there is no appeal.

263. In cases where no appeal lies, the Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates need not record the evidence of the witnesses or frame a formal charge; but he or they shall enter in such form as the Local Government may direct the following particulars:—

(a) the serial number;

(b) the date of the commission of the offence;

(c) the date of the report or complaint;

(d) the name of the complainant (if any);

(e) the name, parentage and residence of the accused;

(f) the offence complained of and the offence (if any) proved, and in cases coming under clause (d), clause (e), clause (f) or clause (g) of sub-section (1) of section 260 the value of the property in respect of which the offence has been committed;

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXII.—Of Summary Trials.—Sections 264-265. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 266-271.)

(g) the plea of the accused and his examination (if any);

(h) the finding, and, in the case of a conviction, a brief statement of the reasons therefor;

(i) the sentence or other final order, and

(j) the date on which the proceedings terminated

Record in appealable cases.

264. (1) In every case tried summarily by a Magistrate or Bench in which an appeal lies, such Magistrate or Bench shall, before passing sentence, record a judgment embodying the substance of the evidence and also the particulars mentioned in section 263

(2) Such judgment shall be the only record in cases coming within this section.

Language of record and judgment.

265 (1) Records made under section 263 and judgments recorded under section 264 shall be written by the presiding officer, either in English or in the language of the Court, or, if the Court to which such presiding officer is immediately subordinate so directs, in such officer's mother-tongue

Bench may be authorised to employ clerk

(2) The Local Government may authorise any Bench of Magistrates empowered to try offences summarily to prepare the aforesaid record or judgment by means of an officer appointed in this behalf by the Court to which such Bench is immediately subordinate, and the record or judgment so prepared shall be signed by each member of such Bench present taking part in the proceedings

(3) If no such authorisation be given, the record prepared by a member of the Bench and signed as aforesaid shall be the proper record.

(4) If the Bench differ in opinion, any dissentient member may write a separate judgment.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.

A.—Preliminary.

"High Court" defined.

266. In this Chapter, except in sections 276 and 307, and in Chapter XVIII, the expression "High Court" means a High Court of Judicature established or to be established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, and includes the Chief Court of the Punjab, the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon and such other Courts as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, declare to be High Courts for the purposes of this Chapter.

24 & 25 Vict., c. 104.

Trials before High Court to be by jury.

267. All trials under this Chapter before a High Court shall be by jury; and, notwithstanding anything herein contained, in all criminal cases transferred to a High Court under this Code or under the Letters Patent of any High Court established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, the trial may, if the High Court so directs, be by jury.

24 & 25 Vict., c 104.

Trials before Court of Session to be by jury or with assessors

268. All trials before a Court of Session shall be either by jury, or with the aid of assessors.

Local Government may order trials before Court of Session to be by jury.

269. (1) The Local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by order in the official Gazette, direct that the trial of all offences, or of any particular class of offences, before any Court of Session, shall be by jury in any district, and may, with the like sanction, revoke or alter such order.

(2) The Local Government, by like order, may also declare that, in the case of any district in which the trial of any offence is to be by jury, the trial of such offences shall, if the Judge, on application made to him or of his own motion, so directs, be by jurors summoned from a special jury list, and may revoke or alter such order

(3) When the accused is charged at the same trial with several offences of which some are and some are not triable by jury, he shall be tried by jury for such of those offences as are triable by jury, and by the Court of Session, with the aid of the jurors as assessors, for such of them as are not triable by jury.

Trial before Court of Session to be conducted by Public Prosecutor

270. In every trial before a Court of Session the prosecution shall be conducted by a Public Prosecutor.

B.—Commencement of Proceedings.

Commencement of trial

271. (1) When the Court is ready to commence the trial, the accused shall appear or be brought before it, and the charge shall be read out in Court and explained to him, and he shall be asked whether he is guilty of the offence charged, or claims to be tried.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 272-278.)

(2) If the accused pleads guilty, the plea shall be recorded, and he may be convicted thereon.

Plea of guilty.

272. If the accused refuses to, or does not, plead, or if he claims to be tried, the Court shall proceed to choose jurors or assessors as hereinafter directed and to try the case:

Refusal to plead or claim to be tried.

Provided that, subject to the right of objection hereinafter mentioned, the same jury may try, or the same assessors may aid in the trial of, as many accused persons successively as the Court thinks fit.

Trial by same jury or assessors of several offenders in succession.

273. (1) In trials before the High Court, when it appears to the High Court, at any time before the commencement of the trial of the person charged, that any charge or any portion thereof is clearly unsustainable, the Judge may make on the charge an entry to that effect.

Entry on sustainable charges.

(2) Such entry shall have the effect of staying proceedings upon the charge or portion of the charge, as the case may be.

Effect of entry.

C.—Choosing a Jury.

274. (1) In trials before the High Court the jury shall consist of nine persons.

Number of jury.

(2) In trials by jury before the Court of Session the jury shall consist of such uneven number, not being less than three, or more than nine, as the Local Government, by order applicable to any particular district or to any particular class of offences in that district, may direct.

275. In a trial by jury before the Court of Session of a person not being an European or an American, a majority of the jury shall, if he so desires, consist of persons who are neither Europeans nor Americans.

Jury for trial of persons not Europeans or Americans before Court of Session.

276. The jurors shall be chosen by lot from the persons summoned to act as such, in such manner as the High Court may from time to time by rule direct:

Jurors to be chosen by lot.

Provided that—first, pending the issue under this section of rules for any Court, the practice now prevailing in such Court in respect to the choosing of jurors shall be followed;

Existing practice maintained;

secondly, in case of a deficiency of persons summoned, the number of jurors required may, with the leave of the Court, be chosen from such other persons as may be present;

persons not summoned when eligible;

thirdly, in the presidency-towns—trials before special jurors.

(a) if the accused person is charged with having committed an offence punishable with death, or

(b) if in any other case a Judge of the High Court so directs, the jurors shall be chosen from the special jury list hereinafter prescribed; and fourthly, in any district for which the Local Government has declared that the trial of certain offences may be by special jury, the jurors shall, in any case in which the Judge so directs, be chosen from the special jury list prescribed in section 325.

277. (1) As each juror is chosen, his name shall be called aloud, and, upon his appearance, the accused shall be asked if he objects to be tried by such juror.

Names of jurors to be called.

(2) Objection may then be taken to such juror by the accused or by the prosecutor, and the grounds of objection shall be stated:

Objection to jurors.

Provided that, in the High Court, objections without grounds stated shall be allowed to the number of eight on behalf of the Crown and eight on behalf of the person or all the persons charged.

Objection without grounds stated.

278. Any objection taken to a juror on any of the following grounds, if made out to the satisfaction of the Court, shall be allowed—

Grounds of objection.

(a) some presumed or actual partiality in the juror;

(b) some personal ground, such as alienage, deficiency in the qualification required by any law or rule having the force of law for the time being in force, or being under the age of twenty-one or above the age of sixty years;

(c) his having by habit or religious vows relinquished all care of worldly affairs;

(d) his holding any office in or under the Court;

(e) his executing any duties of police or being entrusted with police-duties;

(f) his having been convicted of any offence which, in the opinion of the Court, renders him unfit to serve on the jury;

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 279-289.)

(g) his inability to understand the language in which the evidence is given, or when such evidence is interpreted the language in which it is interpreted;

(h) any other circumstance which, in the opinion of the Court, renders him improper as a juror.

Decision of objection.

279. (1) Every objection taken to a juror shall be decided by the Court and such decision shall be recorded and be final.

Supply of place of juror against whom objection allowed.

(2) If the objection is allowed, the place of such juror shall be supplied by any other juror attending in obedience to a summons and chosen in manner provided by section 276, or if there is no such other juror present, then by any other person present in the Court whose name is on the list of jurors, or whom the Court considers a proper person to serve on the jury:

Provided that no objection to such juror or other person is taken under section 278 and allowed.

Foreman of jury.

280. (1) When the jurors have been chosen, they shall appoint one of their number to be foreman.

(2) The foreman shall preside in the debates of the jury, deliver the verdict of the jury, and ask any information from the Court that is required by the jury or any of the jurors.

(3) If a majority of the jury do not, within such time as the Judge thinks reasonable, agree in the appointment of a foreman, he shall be appointed by the Court.

Swearing of jurors.

281 When the foreman has been appointed, the jurors shall be sworn under the Indian Oaths Act, 1873. X of 1873.

Procedure when juror ceases to attend, etc.

282. (1) If, in the course of a trial by jury, at any time before the return of the verdict, any juror, from any sufficient cause, is prevented from attending throughout the trial, or if any juror absents himself, and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, or if it appears that any juror is unable to understand the language in which the evidence is given, or, when such evidence is interpreted, the language in which it is interpreted, a new juror shall be added, or the jury shall be discharged and a new jury chosen.

Discharge of jury in case of sickness of prisoner.

283. The Judge may also discharge the jury whenever the prisoner becomes incapable of remaining at the bar.

D.—Choosing Assessors.

Assessors how chosen.

284. When the trial is to be held with the aid of assessors, two or more shall be chosen, as the Judge thinks fit, from the persons summoned to act as such.

Procedure when assessor is unable to attend.

285. (1) If, in the course of a trial with the aid of assessors, at any time before the finding, any assessor is, from any sufficient cause, prevented from attending throughout the trial, or absents himself, and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, the trial shall proceed with the aid of the other assessor or assessors.

(2) If all the assessors are prevented from attending, or absent themselves, the proceedings shall be stayed, and a new trial shall be held with the aid of fresh assessors.

E.—Trial to Close of Cases for Prosecution and Defence.

Opening case for prosecution.

286. (1) When the jurors or assessors have been chosen, the prosecutor shall open his case by reading from the Indian Penal Code or other law the description of the offence charged, and stating shortly by what evidence he expects to prove the guilt of the accused. XLV of 1860.

Examination of witnesses.

(2) The prosecutor shall then examine his witnesses.

Examination of accused before Magistrate to be evidence.

287. The examination of the accused duly recorded by or before the committing Magistrate shall be tendered by the prosecutor and read as evidence.

Evidence given at preliminary inquiry before the committing admissible.

288. The evidence of a witness duly taken in the presence of the accused before the committing Magistrate may, in the discretion of the presiding Judge, if such witness is produced and examined, be treated as evidence in the case.

Procedure after examination of witnesses for prosecution.

289. (1) When the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution and the examination (if any) of the accused are concluded, the accused shall be asked whether he means to adduce evidence.

(2) If he says that he does not, the prosecutor may sum up his case; and, if the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence, it may then, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, record a finding, or, in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury to return a verdict, of not guilty.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 290-293.)

(3) If the accused, or any one of several accused, says that he means to adduce evidence, and the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence, the Court may then, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, record a finding, or, in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury to return a verdict, of not guilty.

(4) If the accused, or any one of several accused, says that he means to adduce evidence, and the Court considers that there is evidence that he committed the offence, or if, on his saying that he does not mean to adduce evidence, the prosecutor sums up his case and the Court considers that there is evidence that the accused committed the offence, the Court shall call on the accused to enter on his defence.

Defence.

290. The accused or his pleader may then open his case, stating the facts or law on which he intends to rely, and making such comments as he thinks necessary on the evidence for the prosecution. He may then examine his witnesses (if any) and after their cross-examination and re-examination (if any) may sum up his case.

Right of accused as to examination and summoning of witnesses.

291. The accused shall be allowed to examine any witness not previously named by him, if such witness is in attendance; but he shall not, except as provided in sections 211 and 231, be entitled of right to have any witness summoned, other than the witnesses named in the list delivered to the Magistrate by whom he was committed for trial.

Prosecutor's right of reply.

292. If the accused, or any of the accused, adduces any evidence, the prosecutor shall be entitled to reply.

View by jury or assessors.

293. (1) Whenever the Court thinks that the jury or assessors should view the place in which the offence charged is alleged to have been committed, or any other place in which any other transaction material to the trial is alleged to have occurred, the Court shall make an order to that effect, and the jury or assessors shall be conducted in a body, under the care of an officer of the Court, to such place, which shall be shown to them by a person appointed by the Court

(2) Such officer shall not except with the permission of the Court, suffer any other person to speak to, or hold any communication with, any of the jury or assessors, and, unless the Court otherwise directs, they shall, when the view is finished, be immediately conducted back into Court.

When juror or assessor may be examined.

294. If a juror or assessor is personally acquainted with any relevant fact, it is his duty to inform the Judge that such is the case, whereupon he may be sworn, examined, cross-examined and re-examined in the same manner as any other witness.

Jury or assessors to attend at adjourned sitting.

295. If a trial is adjourned, the jury or assessors shall attend at the adjourned sitting, and at every subsequent sitting, until the conclusion of the trial.

Locking up jury.

296. The High Court may, from time to time, make rules as to keeping the jury together during a trial before such Court lasting for more than one day; and, subject to such rules, the presiding Judge may order whether and in what manner the jurors shall be kept together under the charge of an officer of the Court, or whether they shall be allowed to return to their respective homes.

F.—Conclusion of Trial in Cases tried by Jury.

Charge to jury.

297. In cases tried by jury, when the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded, the Court shall proceed to charge the jury, summing up the evidence for the prosecution and defence, and laying down the law by which the jury are to be guided.

Duty of Judge

298. (1) In such cases it is the duty of the Judge—

(a) to decide all questions of law arising in the course of the trial, and especially all questions as to the relevancy of facts which it is proposed to prove, and the admissibility of evidence or the propriety of questions asked by or on behalf of the parties; and, in his discretion, to prevent the production of inadmissible evidence, whether it is or is not objected to by the parties;

(b) to decide upon the meaning and construction of all documents given in evidence at the trial;

(c) to decide upon all matters of fact which it may be necessary to prove in order to enable evidence of particular matters to be given

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Section 299-306.)

(d) to decide whether any question which arises is for himself or for the jury, and upon this point his decision shall bind the jurors.

(2) The Judge may, if he thinks proper, in the course of his summing up, express to the jury his opinion upon any question of fact, or upon any question of mixed law and fact, relevant to the proceeding.

Illustrations.

(a) It is proposed to prove a statement made by a person not being a witness in the case, on the ground that circumstances are proved which render evidence of such statement admissible.

It is for the Judge, and not for the jury, to decide whether the existence of those circumstances has been proved.

(b) It is proposed to give secondary evidence of a document the original of which is alleged to have been lost or destroyed.

It is the duty of the Judge to decide whether the original has been lost or destroyed.

Duty of jury.

299. It is the duty of the jury—

(a) to decide which view of the facts is true and then to return the verdict which under such view ought, according to the direction of the Judge, to be returned;

(b) to determine the meaning of all technical terms (other than terms of law) and words used in an unusual sense which it may be necessary to determine, whether such words occur in documents or not;

(c) to decide all questions which according to law are to be deemed questions of fact;

(d) to decide whether general indefinite expressions do or do not apply to particular cases, unless such expressions refer to legal procedure or unless their meaning is ascertained by law, in either of which cases it is the duty of the Judge to decide their meaning.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tried for the murder of B.

It is the duty of the Judge to explain to the jury the distinction between murder and culpable homicide, and to tell them under what views of the facts A ought to be convicted of murder, or of culpable homicide, or to be acquitted.

It is the duty of the jury to decide which view of the facts is true, and to return a verdict in accordance with the direction of the Judge, whether that direction is right or wrong, and whether they do or do not agree with it.

(b) The question is whether a person entertained a reasonable belief on a particular point,—whether work was done with reasonable skill or due diligence.

Each of these is a question for the jury.

Retirement to consider.

300. In cases tried by jury, after the Judge has finished his charge, the jury may retire to consider their verdict.

Except with the leave of the Court, no person other than a juror shall speak to, or hold any communication with, any member of such jury.

Delivery of verdict.

301. When the jury have considered their verdict the foreman shall inform the Judge what is their verdict, or what is the verdict of a majority.

Procedure where jury differ.

302. If the jury are not unanimous, the Judge may require them to retire for further consideration. After such a period as the Judge considers reasonable, the jury may deliver their verdict, although they are not unanimous.

Verdict to be given on each charge.
Judge may question jury.

303. (1) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, the jury shall return a verdict on all the charges on which the accused is tried, and the Judge may ask them such questions as are necessary to ascertain what their verdict is.

Questions and answers to be recorded.

(2) Such questions and the answers to them shall be recorded.

Amending verdict.

304. When by accident or mistake a wrong verdict is delivered, the jury may, before or immediately after it is recorded, amend the verdict, and it shall stand as ultimately amended.

Verdict in High Court when to prevail.

305. (1) When in a case tried before a High Court the jury are unanimous in their opinion, or when as many as six are of one opinion and the Judge agrees with them, the Judge shall give judgment in accordance with such opinion.

(2) When in any such case the jury are satisfied that they will not be unanimous, but six of them are of one opinion, the foreman shall so inform the Judge.

Discharge of jury in other cases.

(3) If the Judge disagrees with the majority, he shall at once discharge the jury.

(4) If there are not so many as six who agree in opinion, the Judge shall, after the lapse of such time as he thinks reasonable, discharge the jury.

Verdict in Court of Session when to prevail.

306. (1) When in a case tried before the Court of Session the Judge does not think it necessary to express disagreement with the verdict of the jurors or of a majority of the jurors, he shall give judgment accordingly.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 307-309.)

(2) If the accused is acquitted, the Judge shall record judgment of acquittal. If the accused is convicted, the Judge shall pass sentence on him according to law.

307. (1) If in any such case the Judge disagrees with the verdict of the jurors, or of a majority of the jurors, on all or any of the charges on which the accused has been tried, and is clearly of opinion that it is necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court, he shall submit the case accordingly, recording the grounds of his opinion, and, when the verdict is one of acquittal, stating the offence which he considers to have been committed.

Procedure where Sessions Judge disagrees with verdict.

(2) Whenever the Judge submits a case under this section, he shall not record judgment of acquittal or of conviction on any of the charges on which the accused has been tried, but he may either remand the accused to custody or admit him to bail.

(3) In dealing with the case so submitted the High Court may exercise any of the powers which it may exercise on an appeal, and subject thereto it shall, after considering the entire evidence and after giving due weight to the opinions of the Sessions Judge and the jury, acquit or convict the accused of any offence of which the jury could have convicted him upon the charge framed and placed before it; and, if it convicts him, may pass such sentence as might have been passed by the Court of Session.

G.—Re-trial of Accused after Discharge of Jury.

308. Whenever the jury is discharged, the accused shall be detained in custody or on bail (as the case may be), and shall be tried by another jury, unless the Judge considers that he should not be re-tried, in which case the Judge shall make an entry to that effect on the charge, and such entry shall operate as an acquittal.

Re-trial of accused after discharge of jury.

H.—Conclusion of Trial in Cases tried with Assessors.

309. (1) When, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded, the Court may sum up the evidence for the prosecution and defence, and shall then require each of the assessors to state his opinion orally, and shall record such opinion.

Delivery of opinions of assessors.

(2) The Judge shall then give judgment, but in doing so shall not be bound to conform to the opinions of the assessors.

Judgment.

(3) If the accused is convicted, the Judge shall pass sentence on him according to law.

I.—Procedure in Case of Previous Conviction.

310. In the case of a trial by jury or with the aid of assessors, where the accused is charged with an offence committed after a previous conviction for any offence, the procedure laid down in sections 271, 286, 305, 306 and 309 shall be modified as follows:—

Procedure in case of previous conviction.

(a) the part of the charge stating the previous conviction shall not be read out in Court, nor shall the accused be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge unless and until he has either pleaded guilty to, or been convicted of, the subsequent offence:

(b) if he pleads guilty to, or is convicted of, the subsequent offence, he shall then be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge:

(c) if he answers that he has been so previously convicted, the Judge may proceed to pass sentence on him accordingly; but, if he denies that he has been so previously convicted, or refuses to, or does not, answer such question, the jury, or the Court and the assessors (as the case may be), shall then hear evidence concerning such previous conviction, and in such case (where the trial is by jury) it shall not be necessary to swear the jurors again.

311. Notwithstanding anything in the last foregoing section, evidence of the previous conviction may be given at the trial for the subsequent offence, if the fact of the previous conviction is relevant under the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. I of 1872.

When evidence of previous conviction may be given.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 312-319.)

J.—List of Jurors for High Court, and summoning Jurors for that Court.

Number of special jurors.

312. The names of not more than four hundred persons shall at any one time be entered in the special jurors' list.

Lists of common and special jurors.

313. (1) The Clerk of the Crown shall, before the first day of April in each year, and subject to such rules as the High Court from time to time prescribes, prepare—

(a) a list of all persons liable to serve as common jurors; and

(b) a list of persons liable to serve as special jurors only.

(2) Regard shall be had, in the preparation of the latter list, to the property, character and education of the persons whose names are entered therein.

(3) No person shall be entitled to have his name entered in the special jurors' list merely because he may have been entered in the special jurors' list for a previous year.

(4) The Governor General in Council in the case of the High Court at Fort William in Bengal, and, in the case of other High Courts, the Local Government, may exempt any salaried officer of Government from serving as a juror.

Discretion of officer preparing lists.

(5) The Clerk of the Crown shall, subject to such rules as aforesaid, have full discretion to prepare the said lists as seems to him to be proper, and there shall be no appeal from, or review of, his decision.

Publication of lists, preliminary and revised.

314. (1) Preliminary lists of persons liable to serve as common jurors and as special jurors, respectively, signed by the Clerk of the Crown, shall be published once in the local official Gazette before the fifteenth day of April next after their preparation.

(2) Revised lists of persons liable to serve as common jurors and special jurors, respectively, signed as aforesaid, shall be published once in the local official Gazette before the first day of May next after their preparation.

(3) Copies of the said lists shall be affixed to some conspicuous part of the court-house.

Number of jurors to be summoned in presidency-towns.

315. (1) Out of the persons named in the revised lists aforesaid, there shall be summoned for each sessions in each presidency-town at least twenty-seven of those who are liable to serve on special juries, and fifty-four of those who are liable to serve on common juries.

(2) No person shall be so summoned more than once in six months unless the number cannot be made up without him.

Supplementary summons.

(3) If, during the continuance of any sessions it appears that the number of persons so summoned is not sufficient, such number as may be necessary of other persons liable to serve as aforesaid shall be summoned for such sessions.

Summoning jurors outside the presidency-towns.

316. Whenever a High Court has given notice of its intention to hold sittings at any place outside the presidency-towns for the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, the Court of Session at such place shall, subject to any direction which may be given by the High Court, summon a sufficient number of jurors from its own list, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for summoning jurors to the Court of Session.

Military jurors.

317. (1) In addition to the persons so summoned as jurors, the said Court of Session shall, if it thinks needful, after communication with the commanding officer, cause to be summoned such number of commissioned and non-commissioned officers in Her Majesty's Army resident within ten miles of its place of sitting as the Court considers to be necessary to make up the juries required for the trial of persons charged with offences before the High Court as aforesaid.

(2) All officers so summoned shall be liable to serve on such juries notwithstanding anything contained in this Code; but no such officer shall be summoned whom his commanding officer desires to have excused on the ground of urgent military duty, or for any other special military reason.

Failure of jurors to attend.

318. Any person summoned under section 315, section 316 or section 317, who, without lawful excuse, fails to attend as required by the summons, or who, having attended, departs without having obtained the permission of the Judge, or fails to attend after an adjournment of the Court after being ordered to attend, shall be deemed guilty of a contempt and be liable, by order of the Judge, to such fine as he thinks fit; and, in default of payment of such fine, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months in the civil jail until the fine is paid:

Provided that the Court may in its discretion remit any fine or imprisonment so imposed.

K.—List of Jurors and Assessors for Court of Session, and summoning Jurors and Assessors for that Court.

Liability to serve as jurors or assessors.

319. All male persons between the ages of twenty-one and sixty shall, except as next hereinafter mentioned, be liable to serve as jurors or assessors at any trial held within the district in which they reside, or, if the Local Government, on consideration of local circumstances, has fixed any smaller area in this behalf, within the area so fixed.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 320-325.)

Exemptions.

320. The following persons are exempt from liability to serve as jurors or assessors, namely:—

(a) officers in civil employ superior in rank to a District Magistrate;

(b) salaried Judges;

(c) Commissioners and Collectors of Revenue or Customs;

(d) police-officers and persons engaged in the Preventive Service in the Customs Department;

(e) persons engaged in the collection of the revenue whom the Collector thinks fit to exempt on the ground of official duty;

(f) persons actually officiating as priests or ministers of their respective religions;

(g) persons in Her Majesty's Army, except when, by any law in force for the time being, they are specially made liable to serve as jurors or assessors;

(h) surgeons and others who openly and constantly practise the medical profession;

(i) legal practitioners (as defined by the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879,) in actual practice; XVIII of 1879.

(j) persons employed in the Post-office and Telegraph Departments;

(k) persons exempted from personal appearance in Court under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, sections 640 and 641; XIV of 1882.

(l) other persons exempted by the Local Government from liability to serve as jurors or assessors.

List of jurors and assessors.

321. (1) The Sessions Judge, and the Collector of the district or such other officer as the Local Government appoints in this behalf, shall prepare and make out in alphabetical order a list of persons liable to serve as jurors or assessors and qualified in the judgment of the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid to serve as such, and not likely to be successfully objected to under section 278, clauses (b) to (h), both inclusive.

(2) The list shall contain the name, place of abode and quality or business of every such person; and, if the person is an European or an American, the list shall mention the race to which he belongs.

Publication of list.

322. Copies of such list shall be stuck up in the office of the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, and in the court-houses of the District Magistrate and of the District Court, and extracts therefrom in some conspicuous place in the town or towns in or near which the persons named in the extract reside.

Objections to list.

323. To every such copy or extract shall be subjoined a notice stating that objections to the list will be heard and determined by the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid, at the sessions court-house, and at a time to be mentioned in the notice.

Revision of list.

324. (1) For the hearing of such objections the Sessions Judge shall sit with the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, and shall, at the time and place mentioned in the notice, revise the list and hear the objections (if any) of persons interested in the amendment thereof, and shall strike out the name of any person not suitable in their judgment to serve as a juror or as an assessor, or who may establish his right to any exemption from service given by section 320, and insert the name of any person omitted from the list whom they deem qualified for such service.

(2) In the event of a difference of opinion between the Sessions Judge and the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, the name of the proposed juror or assessor shall be omitted from the list.

(3) A copy of the revised list shall be signed by the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid and sent to the Court of Session.

(4) Any order of the Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid in preparing and revising the list shall be final.

(5) Any exemption not claimed under this section shall be deemed to be waived until the list is next revised.

Annual revision of list.

(6) The list so prepared and revised shall be again revised once in every year.

(7) The list so revised shall be deemed a new list, and shall be subject to all the rules hereinbefore contained as to the list originally prepared.

Preparation of list of special jurors.

325. In the case of any district for which the Local Government has declared that the trial of certain offences shall, if the Judge so direct, be by special jury, the Sessions Judge and the Collector of such district or other officer as aforesaid shall prepare, in addition to the revised list hereinbefore prescribed, a special list containing the names of such jurors as are borne on the revised list and are, in the opinion of such Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid, by reason of their possessing superior qualifications in respect of property, character or education, fit persons to serve as special jurors: Provided always that the inclusion of the name of any person in such special list shall not involve the removal of his name from the revised list nor relieve him of his liability to serve as an ordinary juror in cases not tried by special jury.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 326-333.)

District Magistrate to summon jurors and assessors.

326. (1) The Sessions Judge shall ordinarily seven days at least before the day which he may from time to time fix for holding the sessions, send a letter to the District Magistrate requesting him to summon as many persons named in the said revised list or the said special list as seem to the Sessions Judge to be needed for trials by jury and trials with the aid of assessors at the said sessions, the number to be summoned not being less than double the number required for any such trial.

(2) The names of the persons to be summoned shall be drawn by lot in open Court, excluding those who have served within six months unless the number cannot be made up without them; and the names so drawn shall be specified in the said letter.

Power to summon another set of jurors or assessors.

327. The Court of Session may direct jurors or assessors to be summoned at other periods than the period specified in section 326, when the number of trials before the Court renders the attendance of one set of jurors or assessors for a whole session oppressive, or whenever for other reasons such direction is found to be necessary.

Form and contents of summons.

328. Every summons to a juror or assessor shall be in writing, and shall require his attendance as a juror or assessor, as the case may be, at a time and place to be therein specified.

When Government or Railway servant may be excused

329. When any person summoned to serve as a juror or assessor is in the service of Government or of a Railway Company, the Court to serve in which he is so summoned may excuse his attendance if it appears on the representation of the head of the office in which he is employed that he cannot serve as a juror or assessor, as the case may be, without inconvenience to the public.

Court may excuse attendance of juror or assessor.

330. (1) The Court of Session may, for reasonable cause, excuse any juror or assessor from attendance at any particular session.

Court may relieve special jurors from liability to serve again as jurors for twelve months.

(2) The Court of Session may, if it shall think fit, at the conclusion of any trial by special jury, direct that the jurors who have served on such jury shall not be summoned to serve again as jurors for a period of twelve months.

List of jurors and assessors attending.

331. (1) At each session the said Court shall cause to be made a list of the names of those who have attended as jurors and assessors at such session.

(2) Such list shall be kept with the list of the jurors and assessors as revised under section 324.

(3) A reference shall be made in the margin of the said revised list to each of the names which are mentioned in the list prepared under this section.

Penalty for non-attendance of juror or assessor

332. (1) Any person summoned to attend as a juror or as an assessor who, without lawful excuse, fails to attend as required by the summons, or who, having attended, departs without having obtained the permission of the Court, or fails to attend after an adjournment of the Court after being ordered to attend, shall be liable by order of the Court of Session to a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees.

(2) Such fine shall be levied by the District Magistrate by attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to such juror or assessor within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court making the order.

(3) For good cause shewn, the Court may remit or reduce any fine so imposed.

(4) In default of recovery of the fine by attachment and sale, such juror or assessor may, by order of the Court of Session, be imprisoned in the civil jail for the term of fifteen days, unless such fine is paid before the end of the said term.

L.—Special Provisions for High Courts.

Power of Advocate General to stay prosecution

333. At any stage of any trial before a High Court under this Code, before the return of the verdict, the Advocate General may, if he thinks fit, inform the Court on behalf of Her Majesty that he will not further prosecute the defendant upon the charge; and thereupon all proceedings on such charge against the defendant shall be stayed, and he shall be discharged of and from the same. But such discharge shall not amount to an acquittal unless the presiding Judge otherwise directs.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

Time of holding sittings.

334. For the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, every High Court shall hold sittings on such days and at such convenient intervals as the Chief Justice of such Court from time to time appoints.

Place of holding sittings.

335. (1) The High Court shall hold its sittings at the place at which it now holds them, or at such other place (if any) as the Governor General in Council in the case of the High Court at Fort William, or the Local Government in the case of the other High Courts, may direct.

(2) But it may, from timeto t ime, in the case of the High Court at Fort William with the consent of the Governor General in Council, and in all other cases with the consent of the Local Government, hold sittings at such other places within the local limits of its appellate jurisdiction as the High Court appoints.

Notice of sittings.

(3) Such officer as the Chief Justice directs shall give notice beforehand in the local official Gazette of all sittings intended to be held for the exercise of the original criminal jurisdiction of the High Court.

Place of trial of European British subjects.

336. The High Court may direct that all European British subjects and persons liable to be tried by it under section 214, who have been committed for trial by it within certain specified districts or during certain specified periods of the year, shall be tried at the ordinary place of sitting of the Court, or direct that they shall be tried at a particular place named.

CHAPTER XXIV.

GENERAL PROVISIONS AS TO INQUIRIES AND TRIALS.

Tender of pardon to accomplice.

337. (1) In the case of any offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session or High Court, the District Magistrate, a Presidency Magistrate, any Magistrate of the first class inquiring into the offence, or, with the sanction of the District Magistrate, any other Magistrate, may, with the view of obtaining the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in, or privy to, the offence under inquiry, tender a pardon to such person on condition of his making a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to such offence, and to every other person concerned, whether as principal or abettor, in the commission thereof.

(2) Every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the case.

(3) Such person, if not on bail, shall be detained in custody until the termination of the trial by the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

(4) Every Magistrate, other than a Presidency Magistrate, who tenders a pardon under this section, shall record his reasons for so doing; and, when any Magistrate has made such tender and examined the person to whom it has been made, he shall not try the case himself, although the offence which the accused appears to have committed may be triable by such Magistrate.

Power to direct tender of pardon.

338. At any time after commitment, but before judgment is passed, the Court to which the commitment is made may, with the view of obtaining on the trial the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in, or privy to, any such offence, tender, or order the committing Magistrate or the District Magistrate to tender, a pardon on the same condition to such person.

Commitment of person to whom pardon has been tendered.

339. (1) Where a pardon has been tendered under section 337 or section 338, and any person who has accepted such tender has, either by wilfully concealing anything essential or by giving false evidence, not complied with the condition on which the tender was made, he may be tried for the offence in respect of which the pardon was so tendered, or for any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter.

(2) The statement made by a person who has accepted a tender of pardon may be given in evidence against him when the pardon has been forfeited under this section.

(3) No prosecution for the offence of giving false evidence in respect of such statement shall be entertained without the sanction of the High Court.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIV.—General Provisions as to Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 340-345.)

Right of accused to be defended.

340. Every person accused before any Criminal Court may of right be defended by a pleader.

Procedure where accused does not understand proceedings.

341. If the accused, though not insane, cannot be made to understand the proceedings, the Court may proceed with the inquiry or trial; and, in the case of a Court other than a High Court, if such inquiry results in a commitment, or if such trial results in a conviction, the proceedings shall be forwarded to the High Court with a report of the circumstances of the case, and the High Court shall pass thereon such order as it thinks fit.

Power to examine the accused.

342. (1) For the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, the Court may, at any stage of any inquiry or trial, without previously warning the accused, put such questions to him as the Court considers necessary, and shall, for the purpose aforesaid, question him generally on the case after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined, and before he is called on for his defence.

(2) The accused shall not render himself liable to punishment by refusing to answer such questions, or by giving false answers to them; but the Court and the jury (if any) may draw such inference from such refusal or answers as it thinks just.

(3) The answers given by the accused may be taken into consideration in such inquiry or trial, and put in evidence for or against him in any other inquiry into, or trial for, any other offence which such answers may tend to show he has committed.

(4) No oath shall be administered to the accused.

No influence to be used to induce disclosures.

343. Except as provided in sections 337 and 338, no influence, by means of any promise or threat or otherwise, shall be used to an accused person to induce him to disclose or withhold any matter within his knowledge.

Power to postpone or adjourn proceedings.

344. (1) If, from the absence of a witness, or any other reasonable cause, it becomes necessary or advisable to postpone the commencement of, or adjourn, any inquiry or trial, the Court may, if it thinks fit, by order in writing, stating the reasons therefor, from time to time, postpone or adjourn the same on such terms as it thinks fit, for such time as it considers reasonable, and may by a warrant remand the accused if in custody:

Remand.

Provided that no Magistrate shall remand an accused person to custody under this section for a term exceeding fifteen days at a time.

(2) Every order made under this section by a Court other than a High Court shall be in writing signed by the presiding Judge or Magistrate.

Reasonable cause for remand.

Explanation.—If sufficient evidence has been obtained to raise a suspicion that the accused may have committed an offence, and it appears likely that further evidence may be obtained by a remand, this is a reasonable cause for a remand.

Compounding offences.

345. (1) The offences punishable under the sections of the Indian Penal Code described in the first two columns of the table next following may be compounded by the persons mentioned in the third column of that table:— XLV of 1860.

Offence.	Sections of Indian Penal Code applicable.	Person by whom offence may be compounded.
Uttering words, etc., with deliberate intent to wound the religious feelings of any person.	298	The person whose religious feelings are intended to be wounded.
Causing hurt . .	323, 334	The person to whom the hurt is caused.
Wrongfully restraining or confining any person.	341, 342	The person restrained or confined.
Assault or use of criminal force.	352, 355, 358	The person assaulted or to whom criminal force is used.
Unlawful compulsory labour.	374	The person compelled to labour.
Mischief, when the only loss or damage caused is loss or damage to a private person.	426, 427	The person to whom the loss or damage is caused.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIV.—General Provisions as to Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 345-346.)

Offence.	Sections of Indian Penal Code applicable.	Person by whom offence may be compounded.
Criminal trespass	447	The person in possession of the property trespassed upon.
House-trespass	448
Criminal breach of contract of service.	490, 491, 492	The person with whom the offender has contracted.
Adultery	497	The husband of the woman.
Enticing or taking away or detaining with a criminal intent a married woman.	498
Defamation	500	The person defamed.
Printing or engraving matter knowing it to be defamatory.	501
Sale of printed or engraved substance containing defamatory matter, knowing it to contain such matter.	502
Insult intended to provoke a breach of the peace.	504	The person insulted.
Criminal intimidation, except when the offence is punishable with imprisonment for seven years.	506	The person intimidated.

(2) The offences of causing hurt and grievous hurt, punishable under section 324, section 325, section 335, section 337, or section 338 of the Indian Penal Code, may, with the permission of the Court before which any prosecution for such offence is pending, be compounded by the person to whom the hurt has been caused. XLV of 1860.

(3) When any offence is compoundable under this section, the abetment of such offence or an attempt to commit such offence (when such attempt is itself an offence) may be compounded in like manner.

(4) When the person who would otherwise be competent to compound an offence under this section is a minor, an idiot or a lunatic, any person competent to contract on his behalf may compound such offence

(5) When the accused has been committed for trial or when he has been convicted and an appeal is pending, no composition for the offence shall be allowed without the leave of the Court to which he is committed, or, as the case may be, before which the appeal is to be heard.

(6) The composition of an offence under this section shall have the effect of an acquittal of the accused.

(7) No offence shall be compounded except as provided by this section.

Procedure of Provincial Magistrate in cases which he cannot dispose of.

346. (1) If, in the course of an inquiry or a trial before a Magistrate in any district outside the presidency-towns, the evidence appears to him to warrant a presumption that the case is one which should be tried or committed for trial by some other Magistrate in such district, he shall stay proceedings and submit the case, with a brief report explaining its nature, to any Magistrate to whom he is subordinate or to such other Magistrate, having jurisdiction, as the District Magistrate directs.

(2) The Magistrate to whom the case is submitted may, if so empowered, either try the case himself, or refer it to any Magistrate subordinate to him having jurisdiction, or commit the accused for trial.

Procedure when, after commencement of inquiry or trial, Magistrate finds case should be committed.

347. (1) If in any inquiry before a Magistrate, or in any trial before a Magistrate before signing judgment, it appears to him at any stage of the proceedings that the case is one which ought to be tried by the Court of Session or High Court, and if he is empowered to commit for trial, he shall stop further proceedings and commit the accused under the provisions hereinbefore contained.

(2) If such Magistrate is not empowered to commit for trial, he shall proceed under section 346.

Trial of persons previously convicted of offences against coinage, stamp-law or property.

348. Whoever, having been convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards, is again accused of any offence punishable under either of those Chapters with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards, shall be committed to the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be, unless the Magistrate before whom the proceedings are pending is of opinion that he can himself pass an adequate sentence if the accused is convicted; XLV of 1860.

Provided that, if the District Magistrate has been invested with powers under section 30, the case may be transferred to him instead of being committed to the Court of Session.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXIV.—General Provisions as to Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 349-352. Chapter XXV.—Of the Mode of taking and recording Evidence in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 353-355.)

Procedure when Magistrate cannot pass sentence sufficiently severe.

349. (1) Whenever a Magistrate of the second or third class, having jurisdiction, is of opinion, after hearing the evidence for the prosecution and the accused, that the accused is guilty, and that he ought to receive a punishment different in kind from, or more severe than, that which such Magistrate is empowered to inflict, or that he ought to be required to execute a bond under section 106, he may record the opinion and submit his proceedings, and forward the accused, to the District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate to whom he is subordinate.

(2) The Magistrate to whom the proceedings are submitted may, if he thinks fit, examine the parties and recall and examine any witness who has already given evidence in the case, and may call for and take any further evidence, and shall pass such judgment, sentence or order in the case as he thinks fit, and as is according to law:

Provided that he shall not inflict a punishment more severe than he is empowered to inflict under sections 32 and 33.

Conviction or commitment on evidence partly recorded by one Magistrate and partly by another.

350. (1) Whenever any Magistrate, after having heard and recorded the whole or any part of the evidence in an inquiry or a trial, ceases to exercise jurisdiction therein, and is succeeded by another Magistrate who has and who exercises such jurisdiction, the Magistrate so succeeding may act on the evidence so recorded by his predecessor, or partly recorded by his predecessor and partly recorded by himself; or he may re-summon the witnesses and re-commence the inquiry or trial:

Provided as follows:—

(a) in any trial the accused may, when the second Magistrate commences his proceedings, demand that the witnesses or any of them be re-summoned and re-heard;

(b) the High Court or, in cases tried by Magistrates subordinate to the District Magistrate, the District Magistrate may, whether there be an appeal or not, set aside any conviction passed on evidence not wholly recorded by the Magistrate before whom the conviction was held, if such Court or District Magistrate is of opinion that the accused has been materially prejudiced thereby, and may order a new inquiry or trial.

(2) Nothing in this section applies to cases in which proceedings have been stayed under section 346.

Detention of offenders attending Court.

351. (1) Any person attending a Criminal Court, although not under arrest or upon a summons, may be detained by such Court for the purpose of inquiry into or trial of any offence of which such Court can take cognizance and which, from the evidence, may appear to have been committed, and may be proceeded against as though he had been arrested or summoned.

(2) When the detention takes place in the course of an inquiry under Chapter XVIII, or after a trial has been begun, the proceedings in respect of such person shall be commenced afresh, and the witnesses re-heard.

Courts to be open.

352. The place in which any Criminal Court is held for the purpose of inquiring into or trying any offence shall be deemed an open Court, to which the public generally may have access, so far as the same can conveniently contain them:

Provided that the presiding Judge or Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, order at any stage of any inquiry into, or trial of, any particular case that the public generally, or any particular person, shall not have access to, or be or remain in, the room or building used by the Court.

CHAPTER XXV.

OF THE MODE OF TAKING AND RECORDING EVIDENCE IN INQUIRIES AND TRIALS.

Evidence to be taken in presence of accused.

353. Except as otherwise expressly provided all evidence taken under Chapters XVIII, XX, XXI, XXII and XXIII shall be taken in the presence of the accused, or, when his personal attendance is dispensed with, in presence of his pleader.

Manner of recording evidence outside presidency-towns.

354. In inquiries and trials (other than summary trials) under this Code by or before a Magistrate (other than a Presidency Magistrate) or Sessions Judge, the evidence of the witnesses shall be recorded in the following manner.

Record in summons-cases and in trials of certain offences by first and second-class Magistrates.

355. (1) In summons-cases tried before a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate, and in cases of the offences mentioned in sub-section (1) of section 260, clauses (b) to (m), both inclusive, when tried by a Magistrate of the first or second class, and in all proceedings under section 514 (if not in the course of a trial), the Magistrate shall make a memorandum of the substance of the evidence of each witness as the examination of the witness proceeds.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXV.—Of the Mode of taking and recording Evidence in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 356-361.)

(2) Such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

(3) If the Magistrate is prevented from making a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of his inability to do so, and shall cause such memorandum to be made in writing from his dictation in open Court, and shall sign the same; and such memorandum shall form part of the record.

Record in other cases outside presidency-towns.

356. (1) In all other trials before Courts of Session and Magistrates (other than Presidency Magistrates) and in all inquiries under Chapters XII and XVIII, the evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing in the language of the Court, by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge, or in his presence and hearing and under his personal direction and superintendence, and shall be signed by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge.

Evidence given in English.

(2) When the evidence of such witness is given in English, the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may take it down in that language with his own hand, and, unless the accused is familiar with English, or the language of the Court is English, an authenticated translation of such evidence in the language of the Court shall form part of the record.

Memorandum when evidence not taken down by the Magistrate or Judge himself.

(3) In cases in which the evidence is not taken down in writing by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge, he shall, as the examination of each witness proceeds, make a memorandum of the substance of what such witness deposes; and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

(4) If the Magistrate or Sessions Judge is prevented from making a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of his inability to make it.

Language of record of evidence.

357. (1) The Local Government may direct that in any district or part of a district, or in proceedings before any Court of Session, or before any Magistrate or class of Magistrates, the evidence of each witness shall, in the cases referred to in section 356, be taken down by the Sessions Judge or Magistrate with his own hand and in his mother-tongue, unless he is prevented by any sufficient reason from taking down the evidence of any witness, in which case he shall record the reason of his inability to do so, and shall cause the evidence to be taken down in writing from his dictation in open Court.

(2) The evidence so taken down shall be signed by the Sessions Judge or Magistrate, and shall form part of the record:

Provided that the Local Government may direct the Sessions Judge or Magistrate to take down the evidence in the English language, or in the language of the Court, although such language is not his mother-tongue.

Option to Magistrate in cases under section 355.

358. In cases of the kind mentioned in section 355, the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, take down the evidence of any witness in the manner provided in section 356, or, if within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Magistrate the Local Government has made the order referred to in section 357, in the manner provided in the same section.

Mode of recording evidence under section 356 or section 357.

359. (1) Evidence taken under section 356 or section 357 shall not ordinarily be taken down in the form of question and answer, but in the form of a narrative.

(2) The Magistrate or Sessions Judge may, in his discretion, take down, or cause to be taken down, any particular question and answer.

Procedure in regard to such evidence when completed.

360. (1) As the evidence of each witness taken under section 356 or section 357 is completed, it shall be read over to him in the presence of the accused, if in attendance, or of his pleader, if he appears by pleader, and shall, if necessary, be corrected.

(2) If the witness denies the correctness of any part of the evidence when the same is read over to him, the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may, instead of correcting the evidence, make a memorandum thereon of the objection made to it by the witness, and shall add such remarks as he thinks necessary.

(3) If the evidence is taken down in a language different from that in which it has been given, and the witness does not understand the language in which it is taken down, the evidence so taken down shall be interpreted to him in the language in which it was given, or in a language which he understands.

Interpretation of evidence to accused or his pleader.

361. (1) Whenever any evidence is given in a language not understood by the accused, and he is present in person, it shall be interpreted to him in open Court in a language understood by him.

(2) If he appears by pleader and the evidence is given in a language other than the language of the Court, and not understood by the pleader, it shall be interpreted to such pleader in that language.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXV.—Of the Mode of taking and recording Evidence in Inquiries and Trials.—Sections 362-365. Chapter XXVI.—Of the Judgment.—Section 366.)

(3) When documents are put in for the purpose of formal proof, it shall be in the discretion of the Court to interpret as much thereof as appears necessary.

Record of evidence in Presidency Magistrates' Courts.

362. (1) In every case in which a Presidency Magistrate imposes a fine exceeding two hundred rupees, or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months, he shall either take down the evidence of the witnesses with his own hand, or cause it to be taken down in writing from his dictation in open Court. All evidence so taken down shall be signed by the Magistrate and shall form part of the record.

(2) Evidence so taken down shall ordinarily be recorded in the form of a narrative, but the Magistrate may, in his discretion, take down, or cause to be taken down, any particular question or answer.

(3) Sentences passed under section 35 on the same occasion shall, for the purposes of this section, be considered as one sentence.

Remarks respecting demeanour of witness.

363. When a Sessions Judge or Magistrate has recorded the evidence of a witness he shall also record such remarks (if any) as he thinks material respecting the demeanour of such witness whilst under examination.

Examination of accused how recorded.

364. (1) Whenever the accused is examined by any Magistrate, or by any Court other than a High Court established by Royal Charter or the Chief Court of the Punjab, the whole of such examination, including every question put to him and every answer given by him, shall be recorded in full, in the language in which he is examined, or, if that is not practicable, in the language of the Court or in English: and such record shall be shown or read to him, or, if he does not understand the language in which it is written, shall be interpreted to him in a language which he understands, and he shall be at liberty to explain or add to his answers.

(2) When the whole is made conformable to what he declares is the truth, the record shall be signed by the accused and the Magistrate or Judge of such Court, and such Magistrate or Judge shall certify under his own hand that the examination was taken in his presence and hearing, and that the record contains a full and true account of the statement made by the accused.

(3) In cases in which the examination of the accused is not recorded by the Magistrate or Judge himself, he shall be bound, unless he is a Presidency Magistrate, as the examination proceeds, to make a memorandum thereof in the language of the Court, or in English, if he is sufficiently acquainted with the latter language; and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate or Judge with his own hand, and shall be annexed to the record. If the Magistrate or Judge is unable to make a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of such inability.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to the examination of an accused person under section 263.

Record of evidence in High Court.

365. Every High Court established by Royal Charter and the Chief Court of the Punjab may, from time to time, by general rule, prescribe the manner in which evidence shall be taken down in cases coming before the Court, and the Judges of such Court shall take down the evidence or the substance thereof in accordance with the rule (if any) so prescribed.

CHAPTER XXVI.

OF THE JUDGMENT.

Mode of delivering judgment.

366. (1) The judgment in every trial in any Criminal Court of original jurisdiction shall be pronounced, or the substance of such judgment shall be explained,—

(a) in open Court either immediately after the termination of the trial or at some subsequent time of which notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders, and

(b) in the language of the Court, or in some other language which the accused or his pleader understands:

Provided that the whole judgment shall be read out by the presiding Judge, if he is requested so to do either by the prosecution or the defence.

(2) The accused shall, if in custody, be brought up, or, if not in custody, be required by the Court to attend, to hear judgment delivered, except where his personal attendance during the trial has been dispensed with and the sentence is one of fine only or he is acquitted, in either of which cases it may be delivered in the presence of his pleader.

(3) No judgment delivered by any Criminal Court shall be deemed to be invalid by reason only of the absence of any party or his pleader on the day or from the place notified for the delivery thereof, or of any omission to serve, or defect in serving, on the parties or their pleaders, or any of them, the notice of such day and place.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXVI.—Of the Judgment.—Sections 367-373.)

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit in any way the extent of the provisions of section 537.

Language of judgment. Contents of judgment.

367. (1) Every such judgment shall, except as otherwise expressly provided by this Code, be written by the presiding officer of the Court in the language of the Court, or in English; and shall contain the point or points for determination, the decision thereon and the reasons for the decision; and shall be dated and signed by the presiding officer in open Court at the time of pronouncing it.

XLV of 1860. (2) It shall specify the offence (if any) of which, and the section of the Indian Penal Code or other law under which, the accused is convicted, and the punishment to which he is sentenced.

XLV of 1860. Judgment in alternative.

(3) When the conviction is under the Indian Penal Code, and it is doubtful under which of two sections, or under which of two parts of the same section, of that Code the offence falls, the Court shall distinctly express the same, and pass judgment in the alternative.

(4) If it be a judgment of acquittal, it shall state the offence of which the accused is acquitted and direct that he be set at liberty.

(5) If the accused is convicted of an offence punishable with death, and the Court sentences him to any punishment other than death, the Court shall in its judgment state the reason why sentence of death was not passed:

Provided that, in trials by jury, the Court need not write a judgment, but the Court of Session shall record the heads of the charge to the jury.

Sentence of death.

368. (1) When any person is sentenced to death, the sentence shall direct that he be hanged by the neck till he is dead.

Sentence of transportation.

(2) No sentence of transportation shall specify the place to which the person sentenced is to be transported.

Court not to alter judgment.

369. No Court, other than a High Court, when it has signed its judgment, shall alter or review the same, except as provided in sections 395 and 484 or to correct a clerical error.

Presidency Magistrate's judgment.

370. Instead of recording a judgment in manner hereinbefore provided, a Presidency Magistrate shall record the following particulars:—

(a) the serial number of the case;

(b) the date of the commission of the offence;

(c) the name of the complainant (if any);

(d) the name of the accused person, and (except in the case of an European British subject) his parentage and residence;

(e) the offence complained of or proved;

(f) the plea of the accused and his examination (if any);

(g) the final order;

(h) the date of such order; and

(i) in all cases in which the Magistrate inflicts imprisonment, or fine exceeding two hundred rupees, or both, a brief statement of the reasons for the conviction.

Judgment to be explained and copy given to accused.

371. (1) On the application of the accused a copy of the judgment, or, when he so desires, a translation in his own language, if practicable, or in the language of the Court, shall be given to him without delay. Such copy shall, in any case other than a summons-case, be given free of cost.

(2) In trials by jury in a Court of Session, a copy of the heads of the charge to the jury shall, on the application of the accused, be given to him without delay and free of cost.

Case of person sentenced to death.

(3) When the accused is sentenced to death by a Sessions Judge, such Judge shall further inform him of the period within which, if he wishes to appeal, his appeal should be preferred.

Judgment when to be translated.

372. The original judgment shall be filed with the record of proceedings, and, where the original is recorded in a different language from that of the Court, and the accused so requires, a translation thereof into the language of the Court shall be added to such record.

Court of Session to send copy of finding and sentence to District Magistrate.

373. In cases tried by the Court of Session, the Court shall forward a copy of its finding and sentence (if any) to the District Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the trial was held.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXVII.—Of the Submission of Sentences for Confirmation.—Sections 374-380. Chapter XXVIII.—Of Execution.—Sections 381-383.)

CHAPTER XXVII.

OF THE SUBMISSION OF SENTENCES FOR CONFIRMATION.

Sentence of death to be submitted by Court of Session.

374. When the Court of Session passes sentence of death, the proceedings shall be submitted to the High Court and the sentence shall not be executed unless it is confirmed by the High Court.

Power to direct further inquiry to be made or additional evidence to be taken.

375. (1) If when such proceedings are submitted the High Court thinks that a further inquiry should be made into, or additional evidence taken upon, any point bearing upon the guilt or innocence of the convicted person, it may make such inquiry or take such evidence itself, or direct it to be made or taken by the Court of Session.

(2) Such inquiry shall not be made nor shall such evidence be taken in the presence of jurors or assessors, and, unless the High Court otherwise directs, the presence of the convicted person may be dispensed with when the same is made or taken.

(3) When the inquiry and the evidence (if any) are not made and taken by the High Court, the result of such inquiry and the evidence shall be certified to such Court.

Power of High Court to confirm sentence or annul conviction.

376. In any case submitted under section 374, whether tried with the aid of assessors or by jury, the High Court—

(a) may confirm the sentence, or pass any other sentence warranted by law, or

(b) may annul the conviction, and convict the accused of any offence of which the Sessions Court might have convicted him, or order a new trial on the same or an amended charge, or

(c) may acquit the accused person:

Provided that no order of confirmation shall be made under this section until the period allowed for preferring an appeal has expired, or, if an appeal is presented within such period, until such appeal is disposed of.

Confirmation or new sentence to be signed by two Judges.

377. In every case so submitted, the confirmation of the sentence, or any new sentence or order passed by the High Court, shall, when such Court consists of two or more Judges, be made, passed and signed by at least two of them.

Procedure in case of difference of opinion.

378. When any such case is heard before a Bench of Judges and such Judges are equally divided in opinion, the case, with their opinions thereon, shall be laid before another Judge, and such Judge, after such hearing as he thinks fit, shall deliver his opinion, and the judgment or order shall follow such opinion.

Procedure in cases submitted to High Court for confirmation.

379. In cases submitted by the Court of Session to the High Court for the confirmation of a sentence of death, the proper officer of the High Court shall, without delay, after the order of confirmation or other order has been made by the High Court, send a copy of the order, under the seal of the High Court and attested with his official signature, to the Court of Session.

Procedure in cases submitted by Magistrate not empowered to act under section 562.

380. Where proceedings are submitted to a Magistrate of the first class or a Subdivisional Magistrate as provided by section 562, such Magistrate may thereupon pass such sentence or make such order as he might have passed or made if the case had originally been heard by him, and, if he thinks further inquiry or additional evidence on any point to be necessary, he may make such inquiry or take such evidence himself or direct such inquiry or evidence to be made or taken.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

OF EXECUTION

Execution of order passed under section 376.

381. When a sentence of death passed by a Court of Session is submitted to the High Court for confirmation, such Court of Session shall, on receiving the order of confirmation or other order of the High Court thereon, cause such order to be carried into effect by issuing a warrant or taking such other steps as may be necessary.

Postponement of capital sentence on pregnant woman.

382. If a woman sentenced to death is found to be pregnant, the High Court shall order the execution of the sentence to be postponed, and may, if it thinks fit, commute the sentence to transportation for life.

Execution of sentences of transportation or imprisonment in other cases.

383. Where the accused is sentenced to transportation or imprisonment in cases other than those provided for by section 381, the Court passing the sentence shall forthwith forward a warrant to the jail in which he is, or is to be, confined, and, unless the accused is already confined in such jail, shall forward him to such jail, with the warrant.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXVIII.—Of Execution.—Sections 384-393.)

Direction of warrant for execution.

384. Every warrant for the execution of a sentence of imprisonment shall be directed to the officer in charge of the jail or other place in which the prisoner is, or is to be, confined.

Warrant with whom to be lodged.

385. When the prisoner is to be confined in a jail, the warrant shall be lodged with the jailor.

Warrant for levy of fine.

386. Whenever an offender is sentenced to pay a fine, the Court passing the sentence may, in its discretion, issue a warrant for the levy of the amount by distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to the offender, although the sentence directs that, in default of payment of the fine, the offender shall be imprisoned.

Effect of such warrant.

387. Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Court, and it shall authorise the distress and sale of any such property without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found.

Suspension of execution of sentence of imprisonment.

388. (1) When an offender has been sentenced to fine only and to imprisonment in default of payment of the fine, and the Court issues a warrant under section 386, it may suspend the execution of the sentence of imprisonment and may release the offender on his executing a bond, with or without sureties, as the Court thinks fit, conditioned for his appearance before such Court on the day appointed for the return to such warrant, such day not being more than fifteen days from the time of executing the bond; and in the event of the fine not having been realized the Court may direct the sentence of imprisonment to be carried into execution at once.

(2) In any case in which an order for the payment of money has been made, on non-recovery of which imprisonment may be awarded, and the money is not paid forthwith, the Court may require the person ordered to make such payment to enter into a bond as prescribed in sub-section (1), and in default of his so doing may at once pass sentence of imprisonment as if the money had not been recovered.

Who may issue warrant.

389. Every warrant for the execution of any sentence may be issued either by the Judge or Magistrate who passed the sentence, or by his successor in office.

Execution of sentence of whipping only.

390. When the accused is sentenced to whipping only, the sentence shall be executed at such place and time as the Court may direct.

Execution of sentence of whipping, in addition to imprisonment.

391. (1) When the accused is sentenced to whipping in addition to imprisonment in a case which is subject to appeal, the whipping shall not be inflicted until fifteen days from the date of the sentence, or, if an appeal is made within that time, until the sentence is confirmed by the Appellate Court; but the whipping shall be inflicted as soon as practicable after the expiry of the fifteen days, or, in case of an appeal, as soon as practicable after the receipt of the order of the Appellate Court confirming the sentence.

(2) The whipping shall be inflicted in the presence of the officer in charge of the jail, unless the Judge or Magistrate orders it to be inflicted in his own presence.

(3) No accused person shall be sentenced to whipping in addition to imprisonment when the term of imprisonment to which he is sentenced, is less than three months.

Mode of inflicting punishment.

392. (1) In the case of a person of or over sixteen years of age, whipping shall be inflicted with a light ratan not less than half an inch in diameter, in such mode, and on such part of the person, as the Local Government directs; and, in the case of a person under sixteen years of age, it shall be inflicted in such mode, and on such part of the person, and with such instrument, as the Local Government directs.

Limit of number of stripes.

(2) In no case shall such punishment exceed thirty stripes.

Not to be executed by instalments.

Exemptions.

393. No sentence of whipping shall be executed by instalments: and none of the following persons shall be punishable with whipping (namely):—

(a) females;

(b) males sentenced to death, or to transportation, or to penal servitude, or to imprisonment for more than five years;

(c) males whom the Court considers to be more than forty-five years of age.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions. Chapter XXVIII.—Of Execution.—Sections 394-399).

394. (1) The punishment of whipping shall not be inflicted unless a medical officer, if present, certifies, or, if there is not a medical officer present, unless it appears to the Magistrate or officer present, that the offender is in a fit state of health to undergo such punishment.

Whipping not to be inflicted if offender not in fit state of health.

(2) If, during the execution of a sentence of whipping, a medical officer certifies, or it appears to the Magistrate or officer present, that the offender is not in a fit state of health to undergo the remainder of the sentence, the whipping shall be finally stopped.

Stay of execution.

395. (1) In any case in which, under section 394, a sentence of whipping is, wholly or partially, prevented from being executed, the offender shall be kept in custody till the Court which passed the sentence, can revise it; and the said Court may, at its discretion, either remit such sentence, or sentence the offender in lieu of whipping, or in lieu of so much of the sentence of whipping as was not executed, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding twelve months, which may be in addition to any other punishment to which he may have been sentenced for the same offence.

Procedure if punishment cannot be inflicted under section 394.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise any Court to inflict imprisonment for a term exceeding that to which the accused is liable by law, or that which the said Court is competent to inflict.

396. (1) When sentence is passed under this Code on an escaped convict, such sentence, if of death, fine or whipping, shall, subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, take effect immediately, and, if of imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, shall take effect according to the following rules, that is to say:—

Execution of sentences on escaped convicts.

(2) If the new sentence is severer in its kind than the sentence which such convict was undergoing when he escaped, the new sentence shall take effect immediately.

(3) When the new sentence is not severer in its kind than the sentence the convict was undergoing when he escaped, the new sentence shall take effect after he has suffered imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, as the case may be, for a further period equal to that which, at the time of his escape, remained unexpired of his former sentence.

EXPLANATION.—For the purposes of this section—

(a) a sentence of transportation or penal servitude shall be deemed severer than a sentence of imprisonment;

(b) a sentence of imprisonment with solitary confinement shall be deemed severer than a sentence of the same description of imprisonment without solitary confinement; and

(c) a sentence of rigorous imprisonment shall be deemed severer than a sentence of simple imprisonment with or without solitary confinement.

397. When a person already undergoing a sentence of imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation is sentenced to imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, such imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation shall commence at the expiration of the imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation to which he has been previously sentenced:

Sentence on offender already sentenced for another offence.

Provided that if he is undergoing a sentence of imprisonment, and the sentence on such subsequent conviction is one of transportation, the Court may, in its discretion, direct that the latter sentence shall commence immediately, or at the expiration of the imprisonment to which he has been previously sentenced.

398. (1) Nothing in section 396 or section 397 shall be held to excuse any person from any part of the punishment to which he is liable upon his former or subsequent conviction.

Saving as to sections 396 and 397.

(2) When an award of imprisonment in default of payment of a fine is annexed to a substantive sentence of imprisonment, or to a sentence of transportation or penal servitude for an offence punishable with imprisonment, and the person undergoing the sentence is after its execution to undergo a further substantive sentence, or further substantive sentences, of imprisonment, transportation or penal servitude, effect shall not be given to the award of imprisonment in default of payment of the fine until the person has undergone the further sentence or sentences.

399. (1) When any person under the age of fifteen years is sentenced by any Criminal Court to imprisonment for any offence, the Court may direct that such person, instead of being imprisoned in a criminal jail, shall be confined in any reformatory established by the Local Government as a fit place for confinement, in which there are means of suitable discipline and of training in some branch of useful industry or which is kept by a person willing to obey such rules as the Local Government prescribes with regard to the discipline and training of persons confined therein.

(2) All persons confined under this section shall be subject to the rules so prescribed.

(3) This section shall not apply to any place in which the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, is for the time being in force. VII of 1897.

400. When a sentence has been fully executed, the officer executing it shall return the warrant to the Court from which it issued, with an endorsement under his hand certifying the manner in which the sentence has been executed.

Return of warrant on execution of sentence.

CHAPTER XXIX.

OF SUSPENSIONS, REMISSIONS AND COMMUTATIONS OF SENTENCES.

401. (1) When any person has been sentenced to punishment for an offence, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may at any time, without conditions or upon any conditions which the person sentenced accepts, suspend the execution of his sentence or remit the whole or any part of the punishment to which he has been sentenced.

Power to suspend or remit sentences.

(2) Whenever an application is made to the Governor General in Council or the Local Government for the suspension or remission of a sentence, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government, as the case may be, may require the presiding Judge of the Court before or by which the conviction was had or confirmed to state his opinion as to whether the application should be granted or refused, together with his reasons for such opinion.

(3) If any condition on which a sentence has been suspended or remitted, is, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council or of the Local Government, as the case may be, not fulfilled, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may cancel the suspension or remission, and thereupon the person in whose favour the sentence has been suspended or remitted, may, if at large, be arrested by any police-officer without warrant and remanded to undergo the unexpired portion of the sentence.

(4) The condition on which a sentence is suspended or remitted under this section, may be one to be fulfilled by the person in whose favour the sentence is suspended or remitted, or one independent of his will.

(5) Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to interfere with the right of Her Majesty to grant pardons, reprieves, respites or remissions of punishment.

(6) The Governor General in Council and the Local Government may, by general rules or special orders, give directions as to the suspension of sentences and the conditions on which petitions should be presented and dealt with.

402. The Governor General in Council or the Local Government may, without the consent of the person sentenced, commute any one of the following sentences for any other mentioned after it :—

Power to commute punishment.

death, transportation, penal servitude, rigorous imprisonment for a term not exceeding that to which he might have been sentenced, simple imprisonment for a like term, fine.

CHAPTER XXX.

OF PREVIOUS ACQUITTALS OR CONVICTIONS.

403. (1) A person who has once been tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction for an offence and convicted or acquitted of such offence, shall, while such conviction or acquittal remains in force, not be liable to be tried again for the same offence, nor on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under section 236, or for which he might have been convicted under section 237.

Person once convicted or acquitted not to be tried for same offence.

(2) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence may be afterwards tried forany distinct offence for which a separate charge might have been made against him on the former trial under section 235, sub-section (1).

(3) A person convicted of any offence constituted by any act causing consequences which, together with such act, constituted a different offence from that of which he was convicted, may be afterwards tried for such last-mentioned offence, if the consequences had not happened, or were not known to the Court to have happened, at the time when he was convicted.

(4) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence constituted by any acts may, notwithstanding such acquittal or conviction, be subsequently charged with, and tried for, any other offence constituted by the same acts which he may have committed, if the Court by which he was first tried, was not competent to try the offence with which he is subsequently charged.

(5) Nothing in this section shall affect the provisions of section 26 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, or of section 188 of this Code. X of 1897.

EXPLANATION.— The dismissal of a complaint, the stopping of proceedings under section 249, the discharge of the accused or any entry made upon a charge under section 273, is not an acquittal for the purposes of this section.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tried upon a charge of theft as a servant and acquitted. He cannot afterwards, while the acquittal remains in force, be charged with theft as a servant, or, upon the same facts, with theft simply, or with criminal breach of trust.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VII.—Of Appeal, Reference and Revision. Chapter XXXI.—Of Appeals.—Sections 404-413.)

(b) A is tried upon a charge of murder and acquitted. There is no charge of robbery; but it appears from the facts that A committed robbery at the time when the murder was committed; he may afterwards be charged with, and tried for, robbery.

(c) A is tried for causing grievous hurt and convicted. The person injured afterwards dies. A may be tried again for culpable homicide.

(d) A is charged before the Court of Session and convicted of the culpable homicide of B. A may not afterwards be tried on the same facts for the murder of B.

(e) A is charged by a Magistrate of the first class with, and convicted by him of, voluntarily causing hurt to B. A may not afterwards be tried for voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B on the same facts, unless the case comes within paragraph 3 of the section.

(f) A is charged by a Magistrate of the second class with, and convicted by him of, theft of property from the person of B. A may be subsequently charged with, and tried for, robbery on the same facts.

(g) A, B and C are charged by a Magistrate of the first class with, and convicted by him of, robbing D. A, B and C may afterwards be charged with, and tried for, dacoity on the same facts.

PART VII.

OF APPEAL, REFERENCE AND REVISION.

CHAPTER XXXI.

OF APPEALS.

Unless otherwise provided, no appeal to lie.

404. No appeal shall lie from any judgment or order of a Criminal Court except as provided for by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force.

Appeal from order rejecting application for restoration of attached property.

405. Any person whose application under section 89 for the delivery of property or the proceeds of the sale thereof has been rejected by any Court, may appeal to the Court to which appeals ordinarily lie from the sentences of the former Court.

Appeal from order requiring security for good behaviour.

406. Any person ordered by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate, to give security for good behaviour under section 118 may appeal to the District Magistrate.

Appeal from sentence of Magistrate of the second or third class.

407. (1) Any person convicted on a trial held by any Magistrate of the second or third class, or any person sentenced under section 349 by a Subdivisional Magistrate of the second class, may appeal to the District Magistrate.

Transfer of appeals to first class Magistrate.

(2) The District Magistrate may direct that any appeal under this section, or any class of such appeals, shall be heard by any Magistrate of the first class subordinate to him and empowered by the Local Government to hear such appeals, and thereupon such appeal or class of appeals may be presented to such subordinate Magistrate, or, if already presented to the District Magistrate, may be transferred to such subordinate Magistrate. The District Magistrate may withdraw from such Magistrate any appeal or class of appeals so presented or transferred.

Appeal from sentence of Assistant Sessions Judge or Magistrate of the first class.

408. Any person convicted on a trial held by an Assistant Sessions Judge, a District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class, or any person sentenced under section 349 by a Magistrate of the first class, may appeal to the Court of Session:

Provided as follows:—

(a) any European British subject so convicted may, at his option, appeal either to the High Court or the Court of Session;

(b) when in any case an Assistant Sessions Judge or a Magistrate specially empowered under section 30 passes any sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding four years, or any sentence of transportation, the appeal shall lie to the High Court;

(c) when any person is convicted by a Magistrate of an offence under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, the appeal shall lie to the High Court. XLV of 1860.

Appeals to Court of Session how heard.

409. An appeal to the Court of Session or Sessions Judge shall be heard by the Sessions Judge or by an Additional Sessions Judge.

Appeal from sentence of Court of Session.

410. Any person convicted on a trial held by a Sessions Judge, or an Additional Sessions Judge, may appeal to the High Court.

Appeal from sentence of Presidency Magistrate.

411. Any person convicted on a trial held by a Presidency Magistrate may appeal to the High Court, if the Magistrate has sentenced him to imprisonment for a term exceeding six months or to fine exceeding two hundred rupees.

No appeal in certain cases when accused pleads guilty.

412. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, where an accused person has pleaded guilty and has been convicted by a Court of Session or any Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class on such plea, there shall be no appeal except as to the extent or legality of the sentence.

No appeal in petty cases.

413. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, there shall be no appeal by a convicted

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VII.—Of Appeal, Reference and Revision. Chapter XXXI.—Of Appeals.—Sections 414-423.)

person in cases in which a Court of Session or the District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class passes a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding one month only, or of fine not exceeding fifty rupees only, or of whipping only.

Explanation.—There is no appeal from a sentence of imprisonment passed by such Court or Magistrate in default of payment of fine when no substantive sentence of imprisonment has also been passed.

No appeal from certain summary convictions.

414. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, there shall be no appeal by a convicted person in any case tried summarily in which a Magistrate empowered to act under section 260 passes a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding three months only, or of fine not exceeding two hundred rupees only, or of whipping only.

Proviso to sections 413 and 414.

415. An appeal may be brought against any sentence referred to in section 413 or section 414 by which any two or more of the punishments therein mentioned are combined, but no sentence which would not otherwise be liable to appeal, shall be appealable merely on the ground that the person convicted is ordered to find security to keep the peace.

Explanation.—A sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine is not a sentence by which two or more punishments are combined within the meaning of this section.

Saving of sentences on European British subjects.

416. Nothing in sections 413 and 414 applies to appeals from sentences passed under Chapter XXXIII on European British subjects.

Appeal on behalf of Government in case of acquittal.

417. The Local Government may direct the Public Prosecutor to present an appeal to the High Court from an original or appellate order of acquittal passed by any Court other than a High Court.

Appeal on what matters admissible.

418 An appeal may lie on a matter of fact as well as a matter of law, except where the trial was by jury, in which case the appeal shall lie on a matter of law only.

Explanation.—The alleged severity of a sentence shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a matter of law.

Petition of appeal.

419. Every appeal shall be made in the form of a petition in writing presented by the appellant or his pleader, and every such petition shall (unless the Court to which it is presented otherwise directs) be accompanied by a copy of the judgment or order appealed against, and, in cases tried by a jury, a copy of the heads of the charge recorded under section 367.

Procedure when appellant in jail.

420. If the appellant is in jail, he may present his petition of appeal and the copies accompanying the same to the officer in charge of the jail, who shall thereupon forward such petition and copies to the proper Appellate Court.

Summary dismissal of appeal.

421. (1) On receiving the petition and copy under section 419 or section 420, the Appellate Court shall peruse the same, and, if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for interfering, it may dismiss the appeal summarily:

Provided that no appeal presented under section 419 shall be dismissed unless the appellant or his pleader has had a reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of the same.

(2) Before dismissing an appeal under this section, the Court may call for the record of the case, but shall not be bound to do so.

Notice of appeal.

422. If the Appellate Court does not dismiss the appeal summarily, it shall cause notice to be given to the appellant or his pleader, and to such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf, of the time and place at which such appeal will be heard, and shall, on the application of such officer, furnish him with a copy of the grounds of appeal; and, in cases of appeals under section 417 the Appellate Court shall cause a like notice to be given to the accused.

Powers of Appellate Court in disposing of appeal.

423. (1) The Appellate Court shall then send for the record of the case, if such record is not already in Court. After perusing such record, and hearing the appellant or his pleader, if he appears, and the Public Prosecutor, if he appears, and, in case of an appeal under section 417, the accused, if he appears, the Court may, if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for interfering, dismiss the appeal, or may—

(a) in an appeal from an order of acquittal, reverse such order and direct that further inquiry be made, or that the accused be retried or committed for trial, as the case may be, or find him guilty and pass sentence on him according to law;

(b) in an appeal from a conviction, (1) reverse the finding and sentence, and acquit or discharge the accused, or order him to be retried by a Court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to such Appellate Court or committed for trial, or

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VII.—Of Appeal, Reference and Revision. Chapter XXXI.—Of Appeals.— Sections 424-431. Chapter XXXII.—Of Reference and Revision.— Section 432.)

(2) alter the finding, maintaining the sentence, or, with or without altering the finding, reduce the sentence, or, (3) with or without such reduction and with or without altering the finding, alter the nature, of the sentence but, subject to the provisions of section 106, sub-section (3), not so as to enhance the same;

(c) in an appeal from any other order, alter or reverse such order;

(d) make any amendment or any consequential or incidental order that may be just or proper.

(2) Nothing herein contained shall authorise the Court to alter or reverse the verdict of a jury, unless it is of opinion that such verdict is erroneous owing to a misdirection by the Judge, or to a misunderstanding on the part of the jury of the law as laid down by him.

Judgments of subordinate Appellate Courts

424. The rules contained in Chapter XXVI as to the judgment of a Criminal Court of original jurisdiction shall apply, so far as may be practicable, to the judgment of any Appellate Court other than a High Court:

Provided that, unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused shall not be brought up, or required to attend, to hear judgment delivered.

Order by High Court on appeal to be certified to lower Court.

425. (1) Whenever a case is decided on appeal by the High Court under this Chapter, it shall certify its judgment or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence or order appealed against was recorded or passed. If the finding, sentence or order was recorded or passed by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate, the certificate shall be sent through the District Magistrate.

(2) The Court to which the High Court certifies its judgment or order shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the judgment or order of the High Court, and, if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith.

Suspension of sentence pending appeal Release of appellant on bail.

426. (1) Pending any appeal by a convicted person, the Appellate Court may, for reasons to be recorded by it in writing, order that the execution of the sentence or order appealed against be suspended and, also, if he is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his own bond.

(2) The power conferred by this section on an Appellate Court may be exercised also by the High Court in the case of any appeal by a convicted person to a Court subordinate thereto.

(3) When the appellant is ultimately sentenced to imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, the time during which he is so released shall be excluded in computing the term for which he is so sentenced.

Arrest of accused in appeal from acquittal.

427. When an appeal is presented under section 417, the High Court may issue a warrant directing that the accused be arrested and brought before it or any subordinate Court, and the Court before which he is brought may commit him to prison pending the disposal of the appeal, or admit him to bail.

Appellate Court may take further evidence or direct it to be taken.

428. (1) In dealing with any appeal under this Chapter, the Appellate Court, if it thinks additional evidence to be necessary, shall record its reasons, and may either take such evidence itself, or direct it to be taken by a Magistrate, or, when the Appellate Court is a High Court, by a Court of Session or a Magistrate.

(2) When the additional evidence is taken by the Court of Session or the Magistrate, it or he shall certify such evidence to the Appellate Court, and such Court shall thereupon proceed to dispose of the appeal.

(3) Unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused or his pleader shall be present when the additional evidence is taken; but such evidence shall not be taken in the presence of jurors or assessors.

(4) The taking of evidence under this section shall be subject to the provisions of Chapter XXV, as if it were an inquiry.

Procedure where Judges of Court of Appeal are equally divided.

429. When the Judges composing the Court of Appeal are equally divided in opinion, the case, with their opinions thereon, shall be laid before another Judge of the same Court, and such Judge, after such hearing (if any) as he thinks fit shall deliver his opinion, and the judgment or order shall follow such opinion.

Finality of orders on appeal.

430 Judgments and orders passed by an Appellate Court upon appeal shall be final, except in the cases provided for in section 417 and Chapter XXXII.

Abatement of appeals

431. Every appeal under section 417 shall finally abate on the death of the accused, and every other appeal under this Chapter (except an appeal from a sentence of fine) shall finally abate on the death of the appellant.

CHAPTER XXXII.

OF REFERENCE AND REVISION.

Reference by Presidency Magistrate to High Court.

432. A Presidency Magistrate may, if he thinks fit refer for the opinion of the High Court any question of law which

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VII.—Of Appeal, Reference and Revision. Chapter XXXII.—Of Reference and Revision.—Sections 433-439.)

arises in the hearing of any case pending before him, or may give judgment in any such case subject to the decision of the High Court on such reference and, pending such decision, may either commit the accused to jail, or release him on bail to appear for judgment when called upon.

Disposal of case according to decision of High Court.

433. (1) When a question has been so referred, the High Court shall pass such order thereon as it thinks fit, and shall cause a copy of such order to be sent to the Magistrate by whom the reference was made, who shall dispose of the case conformably to the said order.

Direction as to costs.

(2) The High Court may direct by whom the costs of such reference shall be paid.

Power to reserve questions arising in original jurisdiction of High Court.

434. (1) When any person has, in a trial before a Judge of a High Court consisting of more Judges than one and acting in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, been convicted of an offence, the Judge, if he thinks fit, may reserve and refer for the decision of a Court consisting of two or more Judges of such Court any question of law which has arisen in the course of the trial of such person, and the determination of which would affect the event of the trial.

Procedure when question reserved.

(2) If the Judge reserves any such question, the person convicted shall, pending the decision thereon, be remanded to jail, or, if the Judge thinks fit, be admitted to bail; and the High Court shall have power to review the case, or such part of it as may be necessary, and finally determine such question, and thereupon to alter the sentence passed by the Court of original jurisdiction, and to pass such judgment or order as the High Court thinks fit.

Power to call for records of inferior Courts.

435. (1) The High Court or any Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, or any Subdivisional Magistrate empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, may call for and examine the record of any proceeding before any inferior Criminal Court situate within the local limits of its or his jurisdiction for the purpose of satisfying itself or himself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding, sentence or order recorded or passed, and as to the regularity of any proceedings of such inferior Court.

(2) If any Subdivisional Magistrate acting under sub-section (1) considers that any such finding, sentence or order is illegal or improper, or that any such proceedings are irregular, he shall forward the record, with such remarks thereon as he thinks fit, to the District Magistrate.

(3) Orders made under sections 143 and 144 and proceedings under Chapter XII and section 176 are not proceedings within the meaning of this section.

(4) If an application under this section has been made either to the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, no further application shall be entertained by the other of them.

Power to order commitment.

436. When, on examining the record of any case under section 435 or otherwise, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate considers that such case is triable exclusively by the Court of Session and that an accused person has been improperly discharged by the inferior Court, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate may cause him to be arrested, and may thereupon instead of directing a fresh inquiry, order him to be committed for trial upon the matter of which he has been, in the opinion of the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, improperly discharged:

Provided as follows:—

(a) that the accused has had an opportunity of showing cause to such Judge or Magistrate why the commitment should not be made;

(b) that, if such Judge or Magistrate thinks that the evidence shows that some other offence has been committed by the accused, such Judge or Magistrate may direct the inferior Court to inquire into such offence.

Power to order inquiry.

437. On examining any record under section 435 or otherwise, the High Court or the Sessions Judge may direct the District Magistrate by himself or by any of the Magistrates subordinate to him to make, and the District Magistrate may himself make, or direct any subordinate Magistrate to make, further inquiry into any complaint which has been dismissed under section 203 or sub-section (3) of section 204, or into the case of any accused person who has been discharged.

Report to High Court.

438. (1) The Sessions Judge or District Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, on examining under section 435 or otherwise the record of any proceeding, report for the orders of the High Court the result of such examination, and, when such report contains a recommendation that a sentence be reversed or altered, may order that the execution of such sentence be suspended, and, if the accused is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his own bond.

(2) An Additional Sessions Judge shall have and may exercise all the powers of a Sessions Judge under this Chapter in respect of any case which may be transferred to him by the Sessions Judge.

High Court's powers of revision.

439. (1) In the case of any proceeding the record of which has been called for by itself or

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VII.—Of Appeal, Reference and Revision. Chapter XXXII.—Of Reference and Revision.—Sections 440-442. Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXIII.—Criminal Proceedings against Europeans and Americans.—Sections 443-446.)

which has been reported for orders, or which otherwise comes to its knowledge, the High Court may, in its discretion, exercise any of the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by sections 195, 423, 426, 427 and 428, or on a Court by section 338, and may enhance the sentence; and, when the Judges composing the Court of Revision are equally divided in opinion, the case shall be disposed of in manner provided by section 429.

(2) No order under this section shall be made to the prejudice of the accused unless he has had an opportunity of being heard either personally or by pleader in his own defence.

(3) Where the sentence dealt with under this section has been passed by a Magistrate acting otherwise than under section 34, the Court shall not inflict a greater punishment for the offence which, in the opinion of such Court, the accused has committed, than might have been inflicted for such offence by a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class.

(4) Nothing in this section applies to an entry made under section 273, or shall be deemed to authorise a High Court to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction.

(5) Where under this Code an appeal lies and no appeal is brought, no proceedings by way of revision shall be entertained at the instance of the party who could have appealed.

Optional with Court to hear parties.

440. No party has any right to be heard either personally or by pleader before any Court when exercising its powers of revision:

Provided that the Court may, if it thinks fit, when exercising such powers, hear any party either personally or by pleader, and that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect section 439, sub-section (2).

Statement by Presidency Magistrate of grounds of his decision to be considered by High Court.

441. When the record of any proceeding of any Presidency Magistrate is called for by the High Court under section 435, the Magistrate may submit with the record a statement setting forth the grounds of his decision or order and any facts which he thinks material to the issue; and the Court shall consider such statement before over-ruling or setting aside the said decision or order.

High Court's order to be certified to lower Court or Magistrate.

442. When a case is revised under this Chapter by the High Court, it shall, in manner hereinbefore provided by section 425, certify its decision or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence or order revised was recorded or passed, and the Court or Magistrate to which the decision or order is so certified shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the decision so certified; and, if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith.

PART VIII.

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS AGAINST EUROPEANS AND AMERICANS.

Magistrates who may inquire into and try charges against European British subjects.

443. No Magistrate, unless he is a Justice of the Peace, and (except in the case of a District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate) unless he is a Magistrate of the first class and an European British subject, shall inquire into or try any charge against an European British subject.

Sessions Judge to be an European British subject.

Assistant Sessions Judge to have held office for three years and to be specially empowered.

444. No Judge presiding in a Court of Session, except the Sessions Judge, shall exercise jurisdiction over an European British subject unless he himself is an European British subject; and if he is an Assistant Sessions Judge, unless he has held the office of Assistant Sessions Judge for at least three years, and has been specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government.

Cognizance of offence committed by European British subject.

445. Nothing in section 443 or section 444 shall prevent any Magistrate from taking cognisance of an offence committed by any European British subject in any case in which he could take cognizance of a like offence if committed by another person:

Provided that, if he issues any process for the purpose of compelling the appearance of an European British subject accused of an offence, such process shall be made returnable before a Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try the case.

Sentences which may be passed by provincial Magistrates.

446. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 32 or section 34, no Magistrate other than a District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate shall pass any sentence on an European British subject other than imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months, or fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or both, and a District Magistrate shall not pass any such sentence other than imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or fine which may extend to two thousand rupees, or both.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXIII.—Criminal Proceedings against Europeans and Americans.—Sections 447-451.)

When commitment is to be to Court of Session and when to High Court.

447. (1) When an European British subject is accused of an offence before a Magistrate, and such offence cannot, in the opinion of such Magistrate, be adequately punished by him, and is not punishable with death or with transportation for life, such Magistrate shall, if he thinks that the accused ought to be committed, commit him to the Court of Session, or, in the case of a Presidency Magistrate, to the High Court.

(2) When the offence which appears to have been committed is punishable with death or with transportation for life, the commitment shall be to the High Court.

Trial of offences of which one is, and the others are not, punishable with death or transportation for life.

448. Where any person committed to the High Court under section 447 is charged with several offences of which one is punishable with death or transportation for life and the others with a less punishment, and the High Court considers that he should not be tried for the offence punishable with death or transportation, the High Court may nevertheless try him for the other offences.

Sentences which may be passed by Court of Session.

449. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 31, no Court of Session shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than a sentence of imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or fine, or both.

Procedure when Sessions Judge finds his powers inadequate.

(2) If, at any time after the commitment and before signing judgment, the presiding Judge thinks that the offence which appears to be proved, cannot be adequately punished by such a sentence, he shall record his opinion to that effect and transfer the case to the High Court. Such Judge may either himself bind over, or direct the committing Magistrate to bind over, the complainant and witnesses to appear before the High Court.

Jury or assessors before High Court or Court of Session.

450. (1) In trials of European British subjects before a High Court or Court of Session, if, before the first juror is called and accepted, or the first assessor is appointed as the case may be, any such subject requires to be tried by a mixed jury, the trial shall be by a jury of which not less than half the number shall be Europeans or Americans or both Europeans and Americans.

(2) When any such trial before a Court of Session would in the ordinary course be with the aid of assessors, the European British subject accused, or, where there are several European British subjects accused, all of them jointly, may, instead of claiming to be tried by a mixed jury under sub-section (1), require that not less than half the number of the assessors shall be Europeans or Americans or both Europeans and Americans.

Right of European British subject to claim jury before District Magistrate.

451. (1) In trials of European British subjects before a District Magistrate for any offence, any such subject may, in a summons-case before he is heard in his defence under section 244, or in a warrant-case before he enters on his defence under section 256, claim that the trial shall be by a jury composed in manner prescribed by section 450.

(2) If a claim is made under sub-section (1) in a summons-case at the time when the Magistrate proceeds under section 244 to hear the accused, or in a warrant-case at the time when the Magistrate calls upon the accused under section 256 to enter upon the defence, the Magistrate shall forthwith issue the necessary orders for the trial by a jury as aforesaid

(3) If such a claim is made at an earlier stage of the proceedings, the Magistrate shall issue such orders whenever it appears to him from the evidence recorded that there will be a sufficient case to go before a jury.

(4) In every such case the Magistrate shall, notwithstanding anything contained in section 242, before issuing any orders as aforesaid, frame a formal charge.

(5) The provisions of sections 211, 216, 217, 219 and 220 shall, so far as may be, apply for the purpose of securing the attendance of the complainant, the accused and the witnesses at every trial to be held under this section.

(6) The provisions of this Code relating to the procedure in a trial by jury before a Court of Session shall, as nearly as may be, apply to every trial under this section as if the District Magistrate were a Sessions Judge and the accused had been committed to his Court for trial.

(7) All Courts may construe any of the provisions referred to in sub-section (5) or sub-section (6), in so far as they are made applicable by those sub-sections, with such verbal alterations not affecting the substance as may be necessary or proper to adapt the same to the matter before them.

(8) Nothing in this section shall affect the power of the Magistrate to commit an accused person for trial under section 347 or section 447.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXIII.—Criminal Proceedings against Europeans and Americans.—Sections 452-457.)

(9) If an accused person claims to be tried by jury under this section and in the opinion of the District Magistrate there is reason to believe that a jury composed in manner prescribed by section 450 cannot be constituted for the trial before himself, or cannot be so constituted without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which under the circumstances of the case would be unreasonable, he may, instead of issuing orders for the trial before himself under this section, transfer the case for trial to such other District Magistrate or to such Sessions Judge as the High Court may, from time to time, by rules made by it in this behalf and approved by the Local Government, or by special order, direct.

Transfer to another Court in certain cases.

(10) When a case is transferred under this section to a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, he shall with all convenient speed try it with the same powers (including the power of commitment) and according to the same procedure as if he were a District Magistrate acting under this section.

Trial of European British subject and Native jointly accused.

452. In any case in which an European British subject is accused jointly with a person not being an European British subject, and such European British subject is committed for trial before a High Court or Court of Session, such subject and person may be tried together, and the procedure on the trial shall be the same as it would have been had the European British subject been tried separately:

When Native may claim separate trial.

Provided that, if the European British subject requires under section 450 to be tried by a mixed jury, or by a mixed set of assessors, and the person not being an European British subject requires that he shall be tried separately, the latter person shall be tried separately in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XXIII.

Procedure on claim of person to be dealt with as European British subject.

453. (1) When any person claims to be dealt with as an European British subject, he shall state the grounds of such claim to the Magistrate before whom he is brought for the purposes of the inquiry or trial; and such Magistrate shall inquire into the truth of such statement, and allow the person making it a reasonable time within which to prove that it is true, and shall then decide whether he is or is not an European British subject, and shall deal with him accordingly. If any such person is convicted by such Magistrate and appeals from such conviction, the burden of proving that the Magistrate's said decision was wrong shall lie upon him.

(2) When any such person is committed by the Magistrate for trial before the Court of Session, and such person before such Court claims to be dealt with as an European British subject, such Court shall, after such further enquiry, if any, as it thinks fit, decide whether he is or is not an European British subject, and shall deal with him accordingly. If he is convicted by such Court and appeals from such conviction, the burden of proving that the Court's said decision was wrong shall lie upon him.

(3) When the Court before which any person is tried, decides that he is not an European British subject, such decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such trial.

Failure to plead status a waiver.

454. (1) If an European British subject does not claim to be dealt with as such by the Magistrate before whom he is tried or by whom he is committed, or if, when such claim has been made before, and disallowed by, the committing Magistrate, it is not again made before the Court to which such subject is committed, he shall be held to have relinquished his right to be dealt with as such European British subject and shall not assert it in any subsequent stage of the same case.

(2) Unless the Magistrate has reason to believe that any person brought before him is not an European British subject, the Magistrate shall ask such person whether he is such a subject or not.

Trial under this chapter of person not an European British subject.

455. Where a person who is not an European British subject is dealt with as such under this Chapter and does not object, the inquiry, commitment, trial or sentence (as the case may be) shall not, by reason of such dealing, be invalid.

Right of European British subject unlawfully detained to apply for order to be brought before High Court.

456. When any European British subject is unlawfully detained in custody by any person, such European British subject or any person on his behalf may apply to the High Court which would have jurisdiction over such European British subject in respect of any offence committed by him at the place where he is detained or to which he would be entitled to appeal from any conviction for any such offence, for an order directing the person detaining him to bring him before the High Court to abide such further order as it may pass.

Procedure on such application.

457. The High Court, if it thinks fit, may, before issuing such order, inquire, on affidavit or otherwise, into the grounds on which it is applied for, and grant or refuse such application; or

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXIII.—Criminal Proceedings against Europeans and Americans.—Sections 458-463. Chapter XXXIV.—Lunatics.—Section 464.)

it may issue the order in the first instance, and, when the person applying for it is brought before it, it may make such further order in the case as it thinks fit, after such inquiry (if any) as it thinks necessary.

Territories throughout which High Court may issue such orders.

458. The High Court may issue such orders throughout the territories within the local limits of its appellate criminal jurisdiction, and such other territories as the Governor General in Council may direct.

Application of Acts conferring jurisdiction on Magistrates or Courts of Session.

459. (1) Unless there is something repugnant in the context, all enactments heretofore or hereafter made by the Governor General in Council, which confer on Magistrates or on the Court of Session jurisdiction over offences, shall be deemed to apply to European British subjects, although such persons are not expressly referred to therein.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise any Court to exceed the limits prescribed by this Chapter as to the amount of punishment which it may inflict on an European British subject, or to confer jurisdiction on any Magistrate or any Judge presiding in a Court of Session, not being a Justice of the Peace.

Jury for trial of Europeans or Americans.

460. In every case triable by jury or with the aid of assessors, in which an European (not being an European British subject) or an American is the accused person, or one of the accused persons, not less than half the number of jurors or assessors shall, if practicable and if such European or American so claims, be Europeans or Americans.

Jury when European or American charged jointly with one of another race.

461. Whenever an European or American is charged before the Court of Session jointly with a person not an European or American and in compliance with a claim made under section 460 is tried by a jury, or with the aid of a set of assessors, of which at least one-half consists of Europeans and Americans, the latter person shall, if he so claims, be tried separately.

Summoning and empanelling jurors under section 450, 451 or 460.

462. (1) When a trial is to be held before the Court of Session in which the accused person, or one of the accused persons, is entitled to be tried by a jury constituted under the provisions of section 450 or, section 460, or before the Court of a District Magistrate or Sessions Judge proceeding under section 451, the Court shall, three days at least before the day fixed for holding such trial, cause to be summoned, in the manner hereinbefore prescribed, as many European and American jurors as are required for the trial.

(2) The Court shall also, at the same time, in like manner, cause to be summoned the same number of other persons named in the revised list, unless such number of such other persons has been already summoned for trials by jury at that session.

(3) From the whole number of persons returned the jurors who are to constitute the jury shall be chosen by lot in the manner prescribed in section 276, until a jury containing the proper number of Europeans or Americans, or a number approaching thereto as nearly as practicable, has been obtained:

Provided that, in any case in which the proper number of Europeans and Americans cannot otherwise be obtained, the Court may, in its discretion, for the purpose of constituting the jury, summon any person excluded from the list on the ground of his being exempted under section 320.

Conduct of criminal proceedings against European British subjects, etc.

463. Criminal proceedings against European British subjects, Europeans not being European British subjects, and Americans, before the Court of Session and High Court, shall, except as otherwise expressly provided, be conducted according to the provisions of this Code.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

LUNATICS.

Procedure in case of accused being lunatic.

464. (1) When a Magistrate holding an inquiry or a trial has reason to believe that the accused is of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate shall inquire into the fact of such unsoundness, and shall cause such person to be examined by the Civil Surgeon of the district or such other medical officer as the Local Government directs, and thereupon shall examine such Surgeon or other officer as a witness, and shall reduce the examination to writing.

(2) If such Magistrate is of opinion that the accused is of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, he shall postpone further proceedings in the case.

Procedure in case of person committed before Court of Session or High Court being lunatic.

465. (1) If any person committed for trial before a Court of Session or a High Court appears to the Court at his trial to be of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, the jury, or the Court with the aid of assessors, shall, in the first instance, try the fact of such unsoundness and incapacity, and, if satisfied of the fact, shall pass judgment accordingly, and thereupon the trial shall be postponed.

(2) The trial of the fact of the unsoundness of mind and incapacity of the accused shall be deemed to be part of his trial before the Court.

Release of lunatic pending investigation or trial.

466. (1) Whenever an accused person is found to be of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, if the case is one in which bail may be taken, may release him on sufficient security being given that he shall be properly taken care of and shall be prevented from doing injury to himself or to any other person, and for his appearance when required before the Magistrate or Court or such officer as the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf.

Custody of lunatic.

(2) If the case is one in which bail may not be taken, or if sufficient security is not given, the Magistrate or Court shall report the case to the Local Government, remanding the accused to custody pending orders, and the Local Government may order the accused to be confined in a lunatic asylum, jail or other suitable place of safe custody, and the Magistrate or Court shall give effect to such order.

Resumption of inquiry or trial.

467. (1) Whenever an inquiry or a trial is postponed under section 464 or section 465, the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, may at any time resume the inquiry or trial, and require the accused to appear or be brought before such Magistrate or Court.

(2) When the accused has been released under section 466, and the sureties for his appearance produce him to the officer whom the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf, the certificate of such officer that the accused is capable of making his defence shall be receivable in evidence.

Procedure on accused appearing before Magistrate or Court.

468. (1) If, when the accused appears or is again brought before the Magistrate or the Court, as the case may be, the Magistrate or Court considers him capable of making his defence, the inquiry or trial shall proceed.

(2) If the Magistrate or Court considers the accused person to be still incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate or Court shall again act according to the provisions of section 464 or section 465, as the case may be.

When accused appears to have been insane.

469. When the accused appears to be of sound mind at the time of inquiry or trial, and the Magistrate is satisfied from the evidence given before him that there is reason to believe that the accused committed an act which, if he had been of sound mind, would have been an offence, and that he was, at the time when the act was committed, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that it was wrong or contrary to law, the Magistrate shall proceed with the case, and, if the accused ought to be committed to the Court of Session or High Court, send him for trial before the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

Judgment of acquittal on ground of lunacy.

470. Whenever any person is acquitted upon the ground that, at the time at which he is alleged to have committed an offence, he was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act alleged as constituting the offence, or that it was wrong or contrary to law, the finding shall state specifically whether he committed the act or not.

Person acquitted on such ground to be kept in safe custody.

471. (1) Whenever such judgment states that the accused person committed the act alleged, the Magistrate or Court before whom or which the trial has been held, shall, if such act would, but for the incapacity found, have constituted an offence, order such person to be kept in safe custody in such place and manner as the Magistrate or Court thinks fit, and shall report the case for the orders of the Local Government.

(2) The Local Government may order such person to be confined in a lunatic asylum, jail or other suitable place of safe custody.

Power of Governor General in Council to order criminal lunatics confined by order of Local Government to be removed from one province to another.

(3) The Governor General in Council may, by general or special order, direct that any person whom the Local Government has ordered under this Chapter to be confined in a lunatic asylum, jail or other place of safe custody shall be removed from the place where he is confined, to any lunatic asylum, jail or other place of safe custody in British India.

Power of Local Government to relieve Inspector General of certain functions.

(4) The Local Government may empower the officer in charge of the jail in which a person is confined under the provisions of section 466 or this section, to discharge all or any of the functions of the Inspector General of Prisons under section 472, section 473 or section 474.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXIV.—Lunatics.—Sections 472-475.)
Chapter XXXV —Proceedings in case of certain Officers affecting the Administration of Justice.—Sections 476-478.)

Lunatic prisoners to be visited by Inspector General.

472. When any person is confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471, the Inspector General of Prisons, if such person is confined in a jail, or the visitors of the lunatic asylum, or any two of them, if he is confined in a lunatic asylum, may visit him in order to ascertain his state of mind; and he shall be visited once at least in every six months by such Inspector General or by two of such visitors as aforesaid; and such Inspector General or visitors shall make a special report to the Local Government as to the state of mind of such person.

Procedure where lunatic prisoner is reported capable of making his defence.

473. If such person is confined under the provisions of section 466, and such Inspector General or visitors shall certify that, in his or their opinion, such person is capable of making his defence, he shall be taken before the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, at such time as the Magistrate or Court appoints, and the Magistrate or Court shall deal with such person under the provisions of section 468; and the certificate of such Inspector General or visitors as aforesaid shall be receivable as evidence.

Procedure where lunatic confined under section 466 or 471 is declared fit to be discharged.

474. (1) If such person is confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471, and such Inspector General or visitors shall certify that, in his or their judgment, he may be discharged without danger of his doing injury to himself or to any other person, the Local Government may thereupon order him to be discharged, or to be detained in custody, or to be transferred to a public lunatic asylum if he has not been already sent to such an asylum; and, in case it orders him to be transferred to an asylum, may appoint a Commission, consisting of a judicial and two medical officers.

(2) Such Commission shall make formal inquiry into the state of mind of such person, taking such evidence as is necessary, and shall report to the Local Government, which may order his discharge or detention as it thinks fit.

Delivery of lunatic to care of relative.

475. (1) Whenever any relative or friend of any person confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471 desires that he shall be delivered over to his care and custody, the Local Government, upon the application of such relative or friend, and, on his giving security to the satisfaction of such Government that the person delivered shall be properly taken care of and shall be prevented from doing injury to himself or to any other person, may order such person to be delivered to such relative or friend.

(2) Whenever such person is so delivered, it shall be upon condition that he shall be produced for the inspection of such officer and at such times as the Local Government directs.

(3) The provisions of sections 472 and 474 shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to persons delivered under the provisions of this section; and the certificate of the inspecting officer appointed under this section shall be receivable as evidence.

CHAPTER XXXV.

PROCEEDINGS IN CASE OF CERTAIN OFFENCES AFFECTING THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

Procedure in cases mentioned in section 195.

476. (1) When any Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court is of opinion that there is ground for inquiring into any offence referred to in section 195, and committed before it or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, such Court, after making any preliminary inquiry that may be necessary, may send the case for inquiry or trial to the nearest Magistrate of the first class, and may send the accused in custody, or take sufficient security for his appearance, before such Magistrate; and may bind over any person to appear and give evidence on such inquiry or trial.

(2) Such Magistrate shall thereupon proceed according to law, and as if upon complaint made and recorded under section 200, and may, if he is authorised under section 192 to transfer cases, transfer the inquiry or trial to some other competent Magistrate.

Power of Court of Session as to such offences committed before itself.

477. (1) Subject to the provisions of section 444, a Court of Session may charge a person for any offence referred to in section 195 and committed before it, or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, and may commit, or admit to bail and try, such person upon its own charge.

(2) Such Court may direct the Magistrate to cause the attendance of any witnesses for the purposes of the trial.

Power of Civil and Revenue Courts to complete inquiry and commit to High Court or Court of Session.

478. (1) When any such offence is committed before any Civil or Revenue Court, or brought under the notice of any Civil or Revenue Court in the course of a judicial proceeding, and the case is triable exclusively by the High Court or Court of Session, or such Civil or Revenue Court thinks that it ought to be tried by the High Court or Court of Session, such Civil or Revenue Court may, instead of sending the case under section 476 to a Magistrate for inquiry, itself complete the inquiry, and commit or hold to bail the accused person to take his trial before the High Court or Court of Session, as the case may be.

(2) For the purposes of an inquiry under this section the Civil or Revenue Court may, subject to the provisions of section 443, exercise all the powers of a Magistrate; and its proceedings in such inquiry shall be conducted as nearly as may be in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XVIII, and shall be deemed to have been held by a Magistrate.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXV.—Proceedings in case of certain Offences affecting the Administration of Justice.—Sections 479-486.)

Procedure of Civil or Revenue Court in such cases.

479. When any such commitment is made by a Civil or Revenue Court, the Court shall send the charge with the order of commitment and the record of the case to the Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or other Magistrate authorised to commit for trial, and such Magistrate shall bring the case before the High Court or Court of Session, as the case may be, together with the witnesses for the prosecution and defence.

Procedure in certain cases of contempt

480. (1) When any such offence as is described in section 175, section 178, section 179, section 180
XLV of 1860 or section 228 of the Indian Penal Code is committed in the view or presence of any Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court, the Court may cause the offender, whether he is an European British subject or not, to be detained in custody; and at any time before the rising of the Court on the same day may, if it thinks fit, take cognizance of the offence and sentence the offender to fine not exceeding two hundred rupees, and, in default of payment, to simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, unless such fine be sooner paid.

(2) Nothing in section 443 or section 444 shall be deemed to apply to proceedings under this section.

Record in such cases.

481. (1) In every such case the Court shall record the facts constituting the offence, with the statement (if any) made by the offender, as well as the finding and sentence.

XLV of 1860. (2) If the offence is under section 228 of the Indian Penal Code, the record shall show the nature and stage of the judicial proceeding in which the Court interrupted or insulted was sitting, and the nature of the interruption or insult.

Procedure where Court considers that case should not be dealt with under section 480.

482. (1) If the Court in any case considers that a person accused of any of the offences referred to in section 480 and committed in its view or presence should be imprisoned otherwise than in default of payment of fine, or that a fine exceeding two hundred rupees should be imposed upon him, or such Court is for any other reason of opinion that the case should not be disposed of under section 480, such Court, after recording the facts constituting the offence and the statement of the accused as hereinbefore provided, may forward the case to a Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the same, and may require security to be given for the appearance of such accused person before such Magistrate, or, if sufficient security is not given, shall forward such person in custody to such Magistrate.

(2) The Magistrate to whom any case is forwarded under this section, shall proceed to hear the complaint against the accused person in manner hereinbefore provided.

When Registrar or Sub-Registrar to be deemed a Civil Court within sections 480 and 482.

483. When the Local Government so directs, any Registrar or any Sub-Registrar appointed under the Indian Registration Act, 1877, shall be deemed to be a Civil Court within the meaning of sections 480 and 482. III of 1877.

Discharge of offender on submission or apology.

484. When any Court has under section 480 adjudged an offender to punishment for refusing or omitting to do anything which he was lawfully required to do, or for any intentional insult or interruption, the Court may, in its discretion, discharge the offender or remit the punishment on his submission to the order or requisition of such Court, or on apology being made to its satisfaction.

Imprisonment or committal of person refusing to answer or produce document.

485. If any witness or person called to produce a document or thing before a Criminal Court refuses to answer such questions as are put to him or to produce any document or thing in his possession or power which the Court requires him to produce, and does not offer any reasonable excuse for such refusal, such Court may, for reasons to be recorded in writing, sentence him to simple imprisonment, or by warrant under the hand of the presiding Magistrate or Judge commit him to the custody of an officer of the Court, for any term not exceeding seven days, unless in the meantime such person consents to be examined and to answer, or to produce the document or thing. In the event of his persisting in his refusal, he may be dealt with according to the provisions of section 480 or section 482, and, in the case of a Court established by Royal Charter, shall be deemed guilty of a contempt.

Appeals from convictions in contempt-cases.

486. (1) Any person sentenced by any Court under section 480 or section 485 may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, appeal to the Court to which decrees or orders made in such Court are ordinarily appealable.

(2) The provisions of Chapter XXXI shall, so far as they are applicable, apply to appeals under

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings. Chapter XXXV.—Proceedings in case of certain Offences affecting the Administration of Justice.—Section 487. Chapter XXXVI.—Of the Maintenance of Wives and Children.—Sections 488-490.)

this section, and the Appellate Court may alter or reverse the finding, or reduce or reverse the sentence appealed against.

(3) An appeal from such conviction by a Court of Small Causes in a presidency-town shall lie to the High Court, and an appeal from such conviction by any other Court of Small Causes shall lie to the Court of Session for the sessions division within which such Court is situate.

(4) An appeal from such conviction by any officer as Registrar or Sub-Registrar appointed as aforesaid may, when such officer is also Judge of a Civil Court, be made to the Court to which it would, under the preceding portion of this section, be made if such conviction were a decree by such officer in his capacity as such Judge, and in other cases may be made to the District Judge, or, in the presidency-towns, to the High Court.

Certain Judges and Magistrates not to try offences referred to in section 195 when committed before themselves.

487. (1) Except as provided in sections 477, 480 and 485, no Judge of a Criminal Court or Magistrate, other than a Judge of a High Court and the Recorder of Rangoon, shall try any person for any offence referred to in section 195, when such offence is committed before himself or in contempt of his authority, or is brought under his notice as such Judge or Magistrate in the course of a judicial proceeding.

(2) Nothing in section 476 or section 482 shall prevent a Magistrate empowered to commit to the Court of Session or High Court from himself committing any case to such Court.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

OF THE MAINTENANCE OF WIVES AND CHILDREN.

Order for maintenance of wives and children.

488. (1) If any person having sufficient means neglects or refuses to maintain his wife or his legitimate or illegitimate child unable to maintain itself, the District Magistrate, a Presidency Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class may, upon proof of such neglect or refusal, order such person to make a monthly allowance for the maintenance of his wife or such child, at such monthly rate, not exceeding fifty rupees in the whole, as such Magistrate thinks fit, and to pay the same to such person as the Magistrate from time to time directs.

(2) Such allowance shall be payable from the date of the order, or if so ordered from the date of the application for maintenance.

Enforcement of order.

(3) If any person so ordered wilfully neglects to comply with the order, any such Magistrate may, for every breach of the order, issue a warrant for levying the amount due in manner hereinbefore provided for levying fines, and may sentence such person, for the whole or any part of each month's allowance remaining unpaid after the execution of the warrant, to imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month or until payment if sooner made:

Provided that, if such person offers to maintain his wife on condition of her living with him, and she refuses to live with him, such Magistrate may consider any grounds of refusal stated by her, and may make an order under this section notwithstanding such offer, if he is satisfied that there is just ground for so doing.

(4) No wife shall be entitled to receive an allowance from her husband under this section if she is living in adultery, or if, without any sufficient reason, she refuses to live with her husband, or if they are living separately by mutual consent.

(5) On proof that any wife in whose favour an order has been made under this section is living in adultery, or that without sufficient reason she refuses to live with her husband, or that they are living separately by mutual consent, the Magistrate shall cancel the order.

(6) All evidence under this Chapter shall be taken in the presence of the husband or father, as the case may be, or, when his personal attendance is dispensed with, in the presence of his pleader, and shall be recorded in the manner prescribed in the case of summons-cases:

Provided that if the Magistrate is satisfied that he is wilfully avoiding service, or wilfully neglects to attend the Court, the Magistrate may proceed to hear and determine the case ex parte. Any order so made may be set aside for good cause shewn, on application made within three months from the date thereof.

(7) The accused may tender himself as a witness, and in such case shall be examined as such.

(8) The Court in dealing with applications under this section shall have power to make such order as to costs as may be just.

(9) The accused may be proceeded against in any district where he resides or is, or where he last resided with his wife, or, as the case may be, the mother of the illegitimate child.

Alteration in allowance.

489. On proof of a change in the circumstances of any person receiving under section 488 a monthly allowance, or ordered under the same section to pay a monthly allowance to his wife or child, the Magistrate may make such alteration in the allowance as he thinks fit: Provided that if he increases the allowance, the monthly rate of fifty rupees in the whole be not exceeded.

Enforcement of order of maintenance.

490. A copy of the order of maintenance shall be given without payment to the person in whose favour it is made, or to his guardian, if any, or to the person to whom the allowance is to be paid; and such order may be enforced by any Magistrate in any place where the person against whom it is made may be, on such Magistrate being satisfied as to the identity of the parties and the non-payment of the allowance due.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

DIRECTIONS OF THE NATURE OF A HABEAS CORPUS.

Power to issue directions of the nature of a habeas corpus.

491. (1) Any of the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras and Bombay may, whenever it thinks fit, direct—

(a) that a person within the limits of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction be brought up before the Court to be dealt with according to law;

(b) that a person illegally or improperly detained in public or private custody within such limits be set at liberty;

(c) that a prisoner detained in any jail situate within such limits be brought before the Court to be there examined as a witness in any matter pending or to be inquired into in such Court;

(d) that a prisoner detained as aforesaid be brought before a Court-martial or any Commissioners acting under the authority of any commission from the Governor General in Council for trial or to be examined touching any matter pending before such Court-martial or Commissioners respectively;

(e) that a prisoner within such limits be removed from one custody to another for the purpose of trial; and

(f) that the body of a defendant within such limits be brought in on the Sheriff's return of cepi corpus to a writ of attachment.

(2) Each of the said High Courts may, from time to time, frame rules to regulate the procedure in cases under this section.

(3) Nothing in this section applies to persons detained under the Bengal State Prisoners Regulation, 1818, Madras Regulation II of 1819, or Bombay Regulation XXV of 1827, or the State Prisoners Act, 1850, or the State Prisoners Act, 1858.

PART IX.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

OF THE PUBLIC PROSECUTOR.

Power to appoint Public Prosecutors.

492. (1) The Governor General in Council or the Local Government may appoint, generally, or in any case, or for any specified class of cases, in any local area, one or more officers to be called Public Prosecutors.

(2) In any case committed for trial to the Court of Session, the District Magistrate, or, subject to the control of the District Magistrate, the Subdivisional Magistrate, may, in the absence of the Public Prosecutor, or where no Public Prosecutor has been appointed, appoint any other person, not being an officer of police below the rank of Assistant District Superintendent, to be Public Prosecutor for the purpose of such case.

Public Prosecutor may plead in all Courts in cases under his charge. Pleaders privately instructed to be under his direction.

493. The Public Prosecutor may appear and plead without any written authority before any Court in which any case of which he has charge is under inquiry, trial or appeal; and, if any private person instructs a pleader to prosecute in any Court any person in any such case, the Public Prosecutor shall conduct the prosecution, and the pleader so instructed shall act therein under his directions.

Effect of withdrawal from prosecution.

494. Any Public Prosecutor appointed by the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may, with the consent of the Court, in cases tried by jury before the return of the verdict, and in other cases before the judgment is pronounced, withdraw from the prosecution of any person; and, upon such withdrawal,—

(a) if it is made before a charge has been framed, the accused shall be discharged;

(b) if it is made after a charge has been framed, or when under this Code no charge is required, he shall be acquitted.

Permission to conduct prosecution.

495 (1) Any Magistrate inquiring into or trying any case may permit the prosecution to be conducted by any person other than an officer of police below a rank to be prescribed by the Local Government in this behalf with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, but no person, other than the

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XXXIX.—Of Bail.—Sections 496-502.)

Advocate General, Standing Counsel, Government Solicitor, Public Prosecutor or other officer generally or specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf shall be entitled to do so without such permission.

(2) Any such officer shall have the like power of withdrawing from the prosecution as is provided by section 494, and the provisions of that section shall apply to any withdrawal by such officer.

(3) Any person conducting the prosecution may do so personally or by a pleader.

(4) An officer of police shall not be permitted to conduct the prosecution if he has taken any part in the investigation into the offence with respect to which the accused is being prosecuted.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

OF BAIL.

In what cases bail to be taken.

496. When any person other than a person accused of a non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police-station, or appears or is brought before a Court, and is prepared at any time while in the custody of such officer or at any stage of the proceedings before such Court to give bail, such person shall be released on bail:

Provided that such officer or Court, if he or it thinks fit, may, instead of taking bail from such person, discharge him on his executing a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

When bail may be taken in case of non-bailable offence.

497. (1) When any person accused of any non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police-station, or appears or is brought before a Court, he may be released on bail, but he shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of the offence of which he is accused.

(2) If it appears to such officer or Court at any stage of the investigation, inquiry or trial, as the case may be, that there are not reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed such offence, but that there are sufficient grounds for further inquiry into his guilt, the accused shall, pending such inquiry, be released on bail, or, at the discretion of such officer or Court, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

(3) Any Court may, at any subsequent stage of any proceeding under this Code, cause any person who has been released under this section to be arrested, and may commit him to custody.

Power to direct admission to bail or reduction of bail.

498. The amount of every bond executed under this Chapter shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case, and shall not be excessive; and the High Court or Court of Session may, in any case, whether there be an appeal on conviction or not, direct that any person be admitted to bail, or that the bail required by a police-officer or Magistrate be reduced.

Bond of accused and sureties.

499. (1) Before any person is released on bail or released on his own bond, a bond for such sum of money as the police-officer or Court, as the case may be, thinks sufficient shall be executed by such person, and, when he is released on bail, by one or more sufficient sureties conditioned that such person shall attend at the time and place mentioned in the bond, and shall continue so to attend until otherwise directed by the police-officer or Court, as the case may be.

(2) If the case so require, the bond shall also bind the person released on bail to appear when called upon at the High Court, Court of Session or other Court to answer the charge.

Discharge from custody.

500. (1) As soon as the bond has been executed the person for whose appearance it has been executed, shall be released; and, when he is in jail, the Court admitting him to bail shall issue an order of release to the officer in charge of the jail, and such officer on receipt of the order shall release him.

(2) Nothing in this section, section 496 or section 497 shall be deemed to require the release of any person liable to be detained for some matter other than that in respect of which the bond was executed.

Power to order sufficient bail when that first taken is insufficient.

501. If, through mistake, fraud or otherwise, insufficient sureties have been accepted, or if they afterwards become insufficient, the Court may issue a warrant of arrest directing that the person released on bail be brought before it and may order him to find sufficient sureties, and, on his failing so to do, may commit him to jail.

Discharge of sureties.

502. (1) All or any sureties for the attendance and appearance of a person released on bail may at any time apply to a Magistrate to discharge the bond, either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants.

(2) On such application being made, the Magistrate shall issue his warrant of arrest directing that the person so released be brought before him.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XL.—Of Commissions for the Examination of Witnesses.—Sections 503-508. Chapter XLI.—Special Rules of Evidence.—Section 509.)

(3) On the appearance of such person pursuant to the warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Magistrate shall direct the bond to be discharged either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants, and shall call upon such person to find other sufficient sureties, and, if he fails to do so, may commit him to custody.

CHAPTER XL.

OF COMMISSIONS FOR THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

When attendance of witness may be dispensed with.

503. (1) Whenever, in the course of an inquiry, a trial or any other proceeding under this Code, it appears to a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Court of Session or the High Court that the examination of a witness is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate or Court may dispense with such attendance and may issue a commission to any District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such witness resides, to take the evidence of such witness.

Issue of commission, and procedure thereunder.

(2) When the witness resides in the territories of any Prince or Chief in India in which there is an officer representing the British Indian Government, the commission may be issued to such officer.

(3) The Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is issued, or, if he is the District Magistrate, he or such Magistrate of the first class as he appoints in this behalf, shall proceed to the place where the witness is or shall summon the witness before him, and shall take down his evidence in the same manner, and may for this purpose exercise the same powers, as in trials of warrant-cases under this Code.

(4) Where the commission is issued to such officer as is mentioned in sub-section (2), he may delegate his powers and duties under the commission to any officer subordinate to him whose powers are not less than those of a Magistrate of the first class in British India.

Commission in case of witness being within presidency-town.

504. (1) If the witness is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of any Presidency Magistrate, the Magistrate or Court issuing the commission may direct the same to the said Presidency Magistrate, who thereupon may compel the attendance of, and examine, such witness as if he were a witness in a case pending before himself.

39 & 40 Vict., c. 46.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the power of the High Court to issue commissions under the Slave Trade Act, 1876, section 3.

Parties may examine witnesses.

505. The parties to any proceeding under this Code in which a commission is issued, may respectively forward any interrogatories in writing which the Magistrate or Court directing the commission may think relevant to the issue, and the Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is directed, shall examine the witness upon such interrogatories.

(2) Any such party may appear before such Magistrate or officer by pleader, or, if not in custody, in person, and may examine, cross-examine and re-examine (as the case may be) the said witness.

Power of provincial Subordinate Magistrate to apply for issue of commission.

506. Whenever, in the course of an inquiry or a trial or any other proceeding under this Code before any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, it appears that a commission ought to be issued for the examination of a witness whose evidence is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate shall apply to the District Magistrate, stating the reasons for the application; and the District Magistrate may either issue a commission in the manner hereinbefore provided or reject the application.

Return of commission.

507. (1) After any commission issued under section 503 or section 506 has been duly executed, it shall be returned, together with the deposition of the witness examined thereunder, to the Court out of which it issued; and the commission, the return thereto and the deposition shall be open at all reasonable times to inspection of the parties, and may, subject to all just exceptions, be read in evidence in the case by either party, and shall form part of the record.

(2) Any deposition so taken, if it satisfies the conditions prescribed by section 33 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, may also be received in evidence at any subsequent stage of the case before another Court. I of 1872.

Adjournment of inquiry or trial.

508. In every case in which a commission is issued under section 503 or section 506, the inquiry, trial or other proceeding may be adjourned for a specified time reasonably sufficient for the execution and return of the commission.

CHAPTER XLI.

SPECIAL RULES OF EVIDENCE.

Deposition of medical witness.

509. (1) The deposition of a Civil Surgeon or other medical witness, taken and attested by a Magistrate in the presence of the accused, or taken on commission under Chapter XL, may be given in evidence in any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, although the deponent is not called as a witness.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLI.—Special Rules of Evidence.—Sections 510-512. Chapter XLII.—Provisions as to Bonds.—Sections 513-516.)

Power to summon medical witness.

(2) The Court may, if it thinks fit, summon and examine such deponent as to the subject-matter of his deposition.

Report of Chemical Examiner.

510. Any document purporting to be a report under the hand of any Chemical Examiner or Assistant Chemical Examiner to Government, upon any matter or thing duly submitted to him for examination or analysis and report in the course of any proceeding under this Code, may be used as evidence in any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code.

Previous conviction or acquittal how proved.

511. In any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, a previous conviction or acquittal may be proved, in addition to any other mode provided by any law for the time being in force,—

(a) by an extract certified under the hand of the officer having the custody of the records of the Court in which such conviction or acquittal was had to be a copy of the sentence or order; or

(b) in case of a conviction, either by a certificate signed by the officer in charge of the jail in which the punishment or any part thereof was inflicted, or by production of the warrant of commitment under which the punishment was suffered; together with, in each of such cases, evidence as to the identity of the accused person with the person so convicted or acquitted.

Record of evidence in absence of accused.

512. (1) If it is proved that an accused person has absconded, and that there is no immediate prospect of arresting him, the Court competent to try or commit for trial such person for the offence complained of may, in his absence, examine the witnesses (if any) produced on behalf of the prosecution, and record their depositions. Any such deposition may, on the arrest of such person, be given in evidence against him on the inquiry into, or trial for, the offence with which he is charged, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or his attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable.

Record of evidence when offender unknown.

(2) If it appears that an offence punishable with death or transportation has been committed by some person or persons unknown, the High Court may direct that any Magistrate of the first class shall hold an inquiry and examine any witnesses who can give evidence concerning the offence. Any depositions so taken may be given in evidence against any person who is subsequently accused of the offence, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or beyond the limits of British India.

CHAPTER XLII.

PROVISIONS AS TO BONDS.

Deposit instead of recognizance.

513. When any person is required by any Court or officer to execute a bond, with or without sureties, such Court or officer may, except in the case of a bond for good behaviour, permit him to deposit a sum of money or Government promissory notes to such amount as the Court or officer may fix, in lieu of executing such bond.

Procedure on forfeiture of bond.

514. (1) Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by which a bond under this Code has been taken, or of the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, or, when the bond is for appearance before a Court, to the satisfaction of such Court, that such bond has been forfeited, the Court shall record the grounds of such proof, and may call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof, or to show cause why it should not be paid.

(2) If sufficient cause is not shown and the penalty is not paid, the Court may proceed to recover the same by issuing a warrant for the attachment and sale of the moveable property belonging to such person or his estate if he be dead.

(3) Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it; and it shall authorise the distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to such person without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found.

(4) If such penalty is not paid and cannot be recovered by such attachment and sale, the person so bound shall be liable, by order of the Court which issued the warrant, to imprisonment in the civil jail for a term which may extend to six months.

(5) The Court may, at its discretion, remit any portion of the penalty mentioned and enforce payment in part only.

(6) Where a surety to a bond dies before the bond is forfeited, his estate shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the bond, but the party who gave the bond, may be required to find a new surety.

Appeal from, and revision of, orders under section 514.

515. All orders passed under section 514 by any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate shall be appealable to the District Magistrate, or, if not so appealed, may be revised by him.

Power to direct levy of amount due on certain recognizances.

516. The High Court or Court of Session may direct any Magistrate to levy the amount due on a bond to appear and attend at such High Court or Court of Session.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLIII.—Of the Disposal of Property.—Sections 517-523.)

CHAPTER XLIII.

OF THE DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY.

Order for disposal of property regarding which offence committed.

517. (1) When an inquiry or a trial in any Criminal Court is concluded, the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the disposal of any property or document produced before it or in its custody or regarding which any offence appears to have been committed, or which has been used for the commission of any offence.

(2) When a High Court or a Court of Session makes such order and cannot through its own officers conveniently deliver the property to the person entitled thereto, such Court may direct that the order be carried into effect by the District Magistrate.

(3) When an order is made under this section in a case in which an appeal lies, such order shall not (except when the property is live-stock or is subject to speedy and natural decay) be carried out until the period allowed for presenting such appeal has passed, or, when such appeal is presented within such period, until such appeal has been disposed of.

Explanation.—In this section the term "property" includes, in the case of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, not only such property as has been originally in the possession or under the control of any party, but also any property into or for which the same may have been converted or exchanged, and anything acquired by such conversion or exchange, whether immediately or otherwise Order may take form of reference to District or Subdivisional Magistrate.

518. In lieu of itself passing an order under section 517, the Court may direct the property to be delivered to the District Magistrate or to a Subdivisional Magistrate, who shall in such cases deal with it as if it had been seized by the police and the seizure had been reported to him in the manner hereinafter mentioned.

Payment to innocent purchaser of money found on accused.

519. When any person is convicted of any offence which includes, or amounts to, theft or receiving stolen property, and it is proved that any other person has bought the stolen property from him without knowing, or having reason to believe, that the same was stolen, and that any money has on his arrest been taken out of the possession of the convicted person, the Court may, on the application of such purchaser and on the restitution of the stolen property to the person entitled to the possession thereof, order that out of such money a sum not exceeding the price paid by such purchaser be delivered to him.

Stay of order under section 517, 518 or 519.

520. Any Court of appeal, confirmation, reference or revision may direct any order under section 517, section 518 or section 519, passed by a Court subordinate thereto, to be stayed pending consideration by the former Court, and may modify, alter or annul such order and make any further orders that may be just.

Destruction of libellous and other matter.

521. (1) On a conviction under the Indian Penal Code, section 292, section 293, section 501 or section 502, the Court may order the destruction of all the copies of the thing in respect of which the conviction was had, and which are in the custody of the Court or remain in the possession or power of the person convicted. XLV of 1860.

(2) The Court may, in like manner, on a conviction under the Indian Penal Code, section 272, section 273, section 274 or section 275, order the food, drink, drug or medical preparation in respect of which the conviction was had, to be destroyed. XLV of 1860.

Power to restore possession of immoveable property.

522. (1) Whenever a person is convicted of an offence attended by criminal force and it appears to the Court that by such force any person has been dispossessed of any immoveable property, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order such person to be restored to the possession of the same.

(2) No such order shall prejudice any right or interest to or in such immoveable property which any person may be able to establish in a civil suit.

Procedure by police upon seizure of property taken under section 51 or stolen.

523. (1) The seizure by any police-officer of property taken under section 51, or alleged or suspected to have been stolen, or found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any offence, shall be forthwith reported to a Magistrate, who shall make such order as he thinks fit respecting the disposal of such property or the delivery of such property to the person entitled to the possession thereof, or, if such person cannot be ascertained, respecting the custody and production of such property.

Procedure where owner of property seized unknown.

(2) If the person so entitled is known, the Magistrate may order the property to be delivered to him on such conditions (if any) as the Magistrate thinks fit. If such person is unknown, the Magistrate may detain it and shall, in such case, issue a proclamation specifying the articles of which such property consists, and requiring any person who may have a claim thereto, to appear before him and establish his claim within six months from the date of such proclamation.

Procedure where no claimant appears within six months.

524. (1) If no person within such period establishes his claim to such property, and if the person in whose possession such property was found, is unable to show that it was legally acquired by him, such property shall be at the disposal of the Government, and may be sold under the orders of the Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, or of a Magistrate of the first class empowered by the Local Government in this behalf.

(2) In the case of every order passed under this section, an appeal shall lie to the Court to which appeals against sentences of the Court passing such order would lie

Power to sell perishable property.

525. If the person entitled to the possession of such property is unknown or absent and the property is subject to speedy and natural decay, or the Magistrate to whom its seizure is reported, is of opinion that its sale would be for the benefit of the owner, the Magistrate may at any time direct it to be sold; and the provisions of sections 523 and 524 shall, as nearly as may be practicable, apply to the nett proceeds of such sale.

CHAPTER XLIV.

OF THE TRANSFER OF CRIMINAL CASES.

High Court may transfer case or itself try it.

526. (1) Whenever it is made to appear to the High Court—

(a) that a fair and impartial enquiry or trial cannot be had in any Criminal Court subordinate thereto, or

(b) that some question of law of unusual difficulty is likely to arise, or

(c) that a view of the place in or near which any offence has been committed may be required for the satisfactory inquiry into or trial of the same, or

(d) that an order under this section will tend to the general convenience of the parties or witnesses, or

(e) that such an order is expedient for the ends of justice, or is required by any provision of this Code, it may order—

(i) that any offence be inquired into or tried by any Court not empowered under sections 177 to 184 (both inclusive), but in other respects competent to inquire into or try such offence;

(ii) that any particular criminal case or appeal, or class of such cases or appeals, be transferred from a Criminal Court subordinate to its authority to any other such Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction;

(iii) that any particular criminal case or appeal be transferred to and tried before itself; or

(iv) that an accused person be committed for trial to itself or to a Court of Session.

(2) When the High Court withdraws for trial before itself any case from any Court other than the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, it shall, except as provided in section 267, observe in such trial the same procedure which that Court would have observed, if the case had not been so withdrawn.

(3) The High Court may act either on the report of the lower Court, or on the application of a party interested, or on its own initiative.

(4) Every application for the exercise of the power conferred by this section shall be made by motion, which shall, except when the applicant is the Advocate General, be supported by affidavit or affirmation.

(5) When an accused person makes an application under this section, the High Court may direct him to execute a bond, with or without sureties, conditioned that he will, if convicted, pay the costs of the prosecutor.

Notice to Public Prosecutor of application under this section.

(6) Every accused person making any such application shall give to the Public Prosecutor notice in writing of the application, together with a copy of the grounds on which it is made, and no order shall be made on the merits of the application unless at least twenty-four hours have elapsed between the giving of such notice and the hearing of the application.

(7) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect any order made under section 197.

Adjournment on application under this section.

(8) If, in any criminal case or appeal, before the commencement of the hearing, the Public Prosecutor, the complainant or the accused notifies to the Court before which the case or appeal is pending, his intention to make an application under this section in respect of the case, the Court shall exercise the powers of postponement or adjournment given by section 344 in such a manner as will afford a reasonable time for the application being made and an order being obtained thereon, before the accused is called on for his defence, or, in the case of an appeal, before the hearing of the appeal.

Power of Governor General in Council to transfer criminal cases and appeals.

527. (1) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct the transfer of any particular criminal case or appeal

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLIV.—Of the Transfer of Criminal Cases.—Section 528. Chapter XLV.—Of Irregular Proceedings.—Sections 529-531.)

from one High Court to another High Court, or from any Criminal Court subordinate to one High Court to any other Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction subordinate to another High Court, whenever it appears to him that such transfer will promote the ends of justice, or tend to the general convenience of parties or witnesses.

The Court to which such case or appeal is transferred shall deal with the same as if it had been originally instituted in, or presented to, such Court.

District or Subdivisional Magistrate may withdraw or refer cases.

528. (1) Any Chief Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate may withdraw any case from, or recall any case which he has made over to, any Magistrate subordinate to him, and may inquire into or try such case himself, or refer it for inquiry or trial to any other such Magistrate competent to inquire into or try the same.

Power to authorise District Magistrate to withdraw classes of cases.

(2) The Local Government may authorise the District Magistrate to withdraw from any Magistrate subordinate to him either such classes of cases as he thinks proper, or particular classes of cases.

(3) A Magistrate making an order under this section shall record in writing his reasons for making the same.

(4) The head of a village under Madras Regulation IV of 1821 is a Magistrate for the purposes of this section.

CHAPTER XLV.

OF IRREGULAR PROCEEDINGS.

Irregularities which do not vitiate proceedings.

529. If any Magistrate not empowered by law to do any of the following things, namely:—

(a) to issue a search-warrant under section 98;

(b) to order, under section 155, the police to investigate an offence;

(c) to hold an inquest under section 176;

(d) to issue process, under section 186, for the apprehension of a person within the local limits of his jurisdiction who has committed an offence outside such limits;

(e) to take cognizance of an offence under section 190, sub-section (1), clause (a) or clause (b);

(f) to transfer a case under section 192;

(g) to tender a pardon under section 337 or section 338;

(h) to sell property under section 524 or section 525; or

(i) to withdraw a case and try it himself under section 528; erroneously in good faith does that thing, his proceedings shall not be set aside merely on the ground of his not being so empowered.

Irregularities which vitiate proceedings.

530. If any Magistrate, not being empowered by law in this behalf, does any of the following things, namely:—

(a) attaches and sells property under section 88;

(b) issues a search-warrant for a letter, parcel or other thing in the Post-office, or a telegram in the Telegraph Department,

(c) demands security to keep the peace;

(d) demands security for good behaviour;

(e) discharges a person lawfully bound to be of good behaviour;

(f) cancels a bond to keep the peace;

(g) makes an order under section 133, as to a local nuisance,

(h) prohibits, under section 143, the repetition or continuance of a public nuisance;

(i) issues an order under section 144,

(j) makes an order under Chapter XII;

(k) takes cognizance, under section 190, sub-section (1), clause (c), of an offence;

(l) passes a sentence, under section 349, on proceedings recorded by another Magistrate;

(m) calls, under section 435, for proceedings;

(n) makes an order for maintenance;

(o) revises, under section 515, an order passed under section 514;

(p) tries an offender;

(q) tries an offender summarily; or

(r) decides an appeal;

his proceedings shall be void.

Proceedings in wrong place.

531. No finding, sentence or order of any Criminal Court shall be set aside merely on the ground that the inquiry, trial or other proceeding in the course of which it was arrived at or passed, took place in a wrong sessions division, district, subdivision or other local area, unless it appears that such error has in fact occasioned a failure of justice.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLV.—Of Irregular Proceedings.—Sections 532-538. Chapter XLVI.—Miscellaneous.—Sections 539-540.)

When irregular commitments may be validated.

532. (1) If any Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise powers duly conferred, which were not so conferred, commits an accused person for trial before a Court of Session or High Court, the Court to which the commitment is made may, after perusal of the proceedings, accept the commitment if it considers that the accused has not been injured thereby, unless, during the inquiry and before the order of commitment, objection was made on behalf either of the accused or of the prosecution to the jurisdiction of such Magistrate or other authority.

(2) If such Court considers that the accused was injured, or if such objection was so made, it shall quash the commitment and direct a fresh inquiry by a competent Magistrate.

Non-compliance with provisions of section 164 or 364.

533. (1) If any Court before which a confession or other statement of an accused person recorded or purporting to be recorded under section 164 or section 364 is tendered or has been received in evidence, finds that any of the provisions of either of such sections have not been complied with by the Magistrate recording the statement, it shall take evidence that such person duly made the statement recorded; and, notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 91, such statement shall be admitted, if the error has not injured the accused as to his defence on the merits.

(2) The provisions of this section apply to Courts of Appeal, Reference and Revision.

Omission to ask question prescribed by section 454 (2).

534. An omission to ask any person whether he is an European British subject, in a case to which sub-section (2) of section 454 applies, shall not affect the validity of any proceeding.

Effect of omission to prepare charge.

535. (1) No finding or sentence pronounced or passed shall be deemed invalid merely on the ground that no charge was framed, unless, in the opinion of the Court of appeal or revision, a failure of justice has in fact been occasioned thereby.

(2) If the Court of appeal or revision thinks that a failure of justice has been occasioned by an omission to frame a charge, it shall order that a charge be framed, and that the trial be re-commenced from the point immediately after the framing of the charge.

Trial by jury of offence triable with assessors.

536. (1) If an offence triable with the aid of assessors is tried by a jury, the trial shall not on that ground only be invalid.

Trial with assessors of offence triable by jury.

(2) If an offence triable by a jury is tried with the aid of assessors, the trial shall not on that ground only be invalid, unless the objection is taken before the Court records its finding.

Finding or sentence when reversible by reason of error or omission in charge or other proceedings.

537. Subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, no finding, sentence or order passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction shall be reversed or altered under Chapter XXVII or on appeal or revision on account—

(a) of any error, omission or irregularity in the complaint, summons, warrant, charge, proclamation, order, judgment or other proceedings before or during trial or in any inquiry or other proceedings under this Code, or

(b) of the want of or any irregularity in any sanction required by section 195, or any irregularity in proceedings taken under section 476, or

(c) of the omission to revise any list of jurors or assessors in accordance with section 324, or

(d) of any misdirection in any charge to a jury unless such error, omission, irregularity, want or misdirection has in fact occasioned a failure of justice.

Explanation.—In determining whether any error, omission or irregularity in any proceeding under this Code has occasioned a failure of justice, the Court shall have regard to the fact whether the objection could and should have been raised at an earlier stage in the proceedings.

Illustration.

A Magistrate being required by law to sign a document signs it by initials only. This is purely an irregularity, and does not affect the validity of the proceeding.

Distress not illegal nor distrainer a trespasser for defect or want of form in proceedings.

538. No distress made under this Code shall be deemed unlawful, nor shall any person making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the summons, conviction, writ of distress or other proceedings relating thereto.

CHAPTER XLVI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Courts and persons before whom affidavits may be sworn.

539. Affidavits and affirmations to be used before any High Court or any officer of such Court may be sworn and affirmed before such Court or the Clerk of the Crown, or any Commissioner or other person appointed by such Court for that purpose, or any Judge, or any Commissioner for taking affidavits in any Court of Record in British India, or any Commissioner to administer oaths in England or Ireland, or any Magistrate authorised to take affidavits or affirmations in Scotland.

Power to summon material witness, or examine person present.

540. Any Court may, at any stage of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, summon any person as a witness, or examine any person in attendance, though not summoned as a witness, or recall and re-examine any person already examined; and the Court shall summon and examine or

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLVI.—Miscellaneous.—Sections 541-549.)

recall and re-examine any such person if his evidence appears to it essential to the just decision of the case.

541. (1) Unless when otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force, the Local Government may direct in what place any person liable to be imprisoned or committed to custody under this Code shall be confined.

Power to appoint place of imprisonment.

(2) If any person liable to be imprisoned or committed to custody under this Code is in confinement in a civil jail, the Court or Magistrate ordering the imprisonment or committal may direct that the person be removed to a criminal jail.

Removal to criminal jail of accused or convicted persons who are in confinement in civil jail, and their return to the civil jail.

(3) When a person is removed to a criminal jail under sub-section (1), he shall, on being released therefrom, be sent back to the civil jail, unless either—

XIV of 1882.

(b) the Court which ordered his imprisonment in the civil jail has certified to the officer in charge of the criminal jail that he is entitled to be discharged under section 341 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

XIV of 1882.

542. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Prisoners' Testimony Act, 1869, any Presidency Magistrate desirous of examining, as a witness or an accused person, in any case pending before him, any person confined in any jail within the local limits of his jurisdiction, may issue an order to the officer in charge of the said jail requiring him to bring such prisoner in proper custody, at a time to be therein named, to the Magistrate for examination.

Power of Presidency Magistrate to order prisoner in jail to be brought up for examination.

XV of 1869.

(2) The officer so in charge, on receipt of such order, shall act in accordance therewith, and shall provide for the safe custody of the prisoner during his absence from the jail for the purpose aforesaid.

543. When the services of an interpreter are required by any Criminal Court for the interpretation of any evidence or statement, he shall be bound to state the true interpretation of such evidence or statement.

Interpreter to be bound to interpret truthfully.

544. Subject to any rules made by the Local Government with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, any Criminal Court may, if it thinks fit, order payment, on the part of Government, of the reasonable expenses of any complainant or witness attending for the purposes of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding before such Court under this Code.

Expenses of complainants and witnesses.

545. (1) Whenever under any law in force for the time being a Criminal Court imposes a fine or confirms in appeal, revision or otherwise a sentence of fine, or a sentence of which fine forms a part, the Court may, when passing judgment, order the whole or any part of the fine recovered to be applied—

Power of Court to pay expenses or compensation out of fine.

(a) in defraying expenses properly incurred in the prosecution;

(b) in compensation for the injury caused by the offence committed, where substantial compensation is, in the opinion of the Court, recoverable by civil suit.

(2) If the fine is imposed in a case which is subject to appeal, no such payment shall be made before the period allowed for presenting the appeal has elapsed, or, if an appeal be presented, before the decision of the appeal.

546. At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any sum paid or recovered as compensation under section 545.

Payments to be taken into account in subsequent suit.

547. Any money (other than a fine) payable by virtue of any order made under this Code shall be recoverable as if it were a fine.

Moneys ordered to be paid recoverable as fines.

548. If any person affected by a judgment or order passed by a Criminal Court desires to have a copy of the Judge's charge to the jury or of any order or deposition or other part of the record, he shall, on applying for such copy, be furnished therewith:

Copies of proceedings.

Provided that he pays for the same, unless the Court, for some special reason, thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

549. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules, consistent with this Code and the Army Act or any similar law for the time being in force, as to the cases in which persons subject to military law shall be tried by a Court to which this Code applies, or by Court-martial; and when any person is brought before a Magistrate and charged with an offence for which he is liable, under the Army Act, section 41, to be tried by a Court-martial, such Magistrate shall have regard to such rules, and shall in proper cases deliver him, together with a statement of the offence of which he is accused, to the commanding officer of the regiment, corps or detachment to which he belongs, or to the commanding officer of the nearest military station, for the purpose of being tried by Court-martial.

Delivery to military authorities of persons liable to be tried by Court-martial.

44 & 45 Vict., c. 58.

44 & 45 Vict., c. 58.

Apprehension of such persons.

(2) Every Magistrate shall, on receiving a written application for that purpose by the commanding officer of any body of troops stationed or employed at any such place, use his utmost endeavours to apprehend and secure any person accused of such offence.

Powers to police to seize property suspected to be stolen.

550. Any police-officer may seize any property which may be alleged or suspected to have been stolen, or which may be found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any offence. Such police-officer, if subordinate to the officer in charge of a police-station, shall forthwith report the seizure to that officer.

Powers of superior officers of police.

551. Police-officers superior in rank to an officer in charge of a police-station may exercise the same powers, throughout the local area to which they are appointed, as may be exercised by such officer within the limits of his station.

Power to compel restoration of abducted females.

552. Upon complaint made to a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate on oath of the abduction or unlawful detention of a woman, or of a female child under the age of fourteen years, for any unlawful purpose, he may make an order for the immediate restoration of such woman to her liberty, or of such female child to her husband, parent, guardian or other person having the lawful charge of such child, and may compel compliance with such order, using such force as may be necessary.

Compensation to persons groundlessly given in charge in presidency-town.

553. (1) Whenever any person causes a police-officer to arrest another person in a presidency-town, if it appears to the Magistrate by whom the case is heard that there was no sufficient ground for causing such arrest, the Magistrate may award such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, to be paid by the person so causing the arrest to the person so arrested, for his loss of time and expenses in the matter, as the Magistrate thinks fit.

(2) In such cases, if more persons than one are arrested, the Magistrate may, in like manner, award to each of them such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, as such Magistrate thinks fit.

(3) All compensation awarded under this section may be recovered as if it were a fine, and, if it cannot be so recovered, the person by whom it is payable shall be sentenced to simple imprisonment for such term not exceeding thirty days as the Magistrate directs, unless such sum is sooner paid.

Power of chartered High Courts to make rules for inspection of records of subordinate Courts.

554. (1) With the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council the High Court at Fort William, and, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, any other High Court established by Royal Charter, may, from time to time, make rules for the inspection of the records of subordinate Courts.

Power of other High Courts to make rules for other purposes.

(2) Every High Court not established by Royal Charter may, from time to time, and with the previous sanction of the Local Government,—

(a) make rules for keeping all books, entries and accounts to be kept in all Criminal Courts subordinate to it, and for the preparation and transmission of any returns or statements to be prepared and submitted by such Courts;

(b) frame forms for every proceeding in the said Courts for which it thinks that a form should be provided;

(c) make rules for regulating its own practice and proceedings and the practice and proceedings of all Criminal Courts subordinate to it; and

(d) make rules for regulating the execution of warrants issued under this Code for the levy of fines:

Provided that the rules and forms made and framed under this section shall not be inconsistent with this Code or any other law in force for the time being.

(3) All rules made under this section shall be published in the local official Gazette.

Forms.

555. Subject to the power conferred by section 553, and by section 15 of the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, the forms set forth in the fifth schedule, with such variation as the circumstances of each case require, may be used for the respective purposes therein mentioned, and if used shall be sufficient. 24 & 25 V. c. 104.

Case in which Judge or Magistrate is personally interested.

556. No Judge or Magistrate shall, except with the permission of the Court to which an appeal lies from his Court, try or commit for trial any case to or in which he is a party, or personally interested, and no Judge or Magistrate shall hear an appeal from any judgment or order passed or made by himself.

Explanation.—A Judge or Magistrate shall not be deemed to be a party or personally interested, within the meaning of this section, to or in any case by reason only that he is a Municipal Commissioner or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity, or by reason only that he has viewed the place in which an offence is alleged to have been committed, or any other place in which any other transaction material to the case is alleged to have occurred, and made an inquiry in connection with the case.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLVI.—Miscellaneous.—Sections 557-564.)

Illustration.

A, as Collector, upon consideration of information furnished to him, directs the prosecution of B for a breach of the Excise Laws. A is disqualified from trying this case as a Magistrate.

Practising pleader not to sit as Magistrate in certain Courts.

557. No pleader who practises in the Court of any Magistrate in a presidency-town or district, shall sit as a Magistrate in such Court or in any Court within the jurisdiction of such Court.

Power to decide language of Courts.

558. The Local Government may determine what, for the purposes of this Code, shall be deemed to be the language of each Court within the territories administered by such Government, other than the High Courts established by Royal Charter.

Powers of Governor General in Council and Local Government exercisable from time to time.

559. All powers conferred by this Code on the Governor General in Council or on the Local Government may be exercised from time to time as occasion requires.

Officers concerned in sales not to purchase or bid for property.

560. A public servant having any duty to perform in connection with the sale of any property under this Code shall not purchase or bid for the property.

Special provisions with respect to offence of rape by a husband.

561. (1) Notwithstanding anything in this Code, no Magistrate except a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate shall—

(a) take cognizance of the offence of rape where the sexual intercourse was by a man with his wife, or

(b) commit the man for trial for the offence:

(2) And, notwithstanding anything in this Code, if a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate deems it necessary to direct an investigation by a police-officer with respect to such an offence as is referred to in sub-section (1), no police-officer of a rank below that of police inspector shall be employed either to make, or to take part in, the investigation.

First Offenders.

Power to Court to release upon probation of good conduct instead of sentencing to punishment.

562. In any case in which a person is convicted of theft, theft in a building, dishonest misappropriation, cheating, or any other offence under the Indian Penal Code punishable with not more than two years' imprisonment before any Court, and no previous conviction is proved against him, if it appears to the Court before whom he is so convicted, that, regard being had to the youth, character and antecedents of the offender, to the trivial nature of the offence and to any extenuating circumstances under which the offence was committed, it is expedient that the offender be released on probation of good conduct, the Court may, instead of sentencing him at once to any punishment, direct that he be released on his entering into a bond, with or without sureties, and during such period (not exceeding one year) as the Court may direct, to appear and receive sentence when called upon, and in the meantime to keep the peace and be of good behaviour: XLV of 1860.

Provided that, where any first offender is convicted by a Magistrate of the third class, or a Magistrate of the second class not specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, and the Magistrate is of opinion that the powers conferred by this section should be exercised, he shall record his opinion to that effect and submit the proceedings to a Magistrate of the first class or Sub-divisional Magistrate, forwarding the accused to, or taking bail for his appearance before, such Magistrate, who shall dispose of the case in manner provided by section 380.

Provision in case of offender failing to observe conditions of his recognizances.

563. (1) If the Court which convicted the offender, or a Court which could have dealt with the offender in respect of his original offence, is satisfied that the offender has failed to observe any of the conditions of his recognizance, it may issue a warrant for his apprehension.

(2) An offender, when apprehended on any such warrant, shall be brought forthwith before the Court issuing the warrant, and such Court may either remand him in custody until the case is heard or admit him to bail with a sufficient surety conditioned on his appearing for sentence. Such Court may, after hearing the case, pass sentence.

Conditions as to abode of offender.

564. (1) The Court, before directing the release of an offender under section 562, shall be satisfied that the offender or his surety (if any) has a fixed place of abode or regular occupation in the place for which the Court acts or in which the offender is likely

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part IX.—Supplementary Provisions. Chapter XLVI.—Miscellaneous.—Section 565.)

to live during the period named for the observance of the conditions.

(2) Nothing in this section or in sections 562 and 563 shall affect the provisions of section 31 of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897. VIII of 1897.

Previously convicted Offenders.

565. (1) When any person, having been convicted of any offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards, is again convicted of any offence punishable under either of those Chapters with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards by a High Court, Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Subdivisional Magistrate, or any Magistrate of the first class specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, such Court or Magistrate may, if it or he thinks fit, at the time of passing sentence of transportation or imprisonment on such person, also order that his residence and any change of residence after release be notified, as hereinafter provided, for a term not exceeding five years from the date of the expiration of such sentence.

Order for notifying address of previously convicted offender.

XLV of 1860.

(2) If such conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, such order shall become void.

(3) The Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may make rules to carry out the provisions of this section relating to the notification of residence by released convicts.

(4) Any person refusing or neglecting to comply with any rule so made shall be punishable as if he had committed an offence under section 176 of the Indian Penal Code.

The Indian Post Office Act 1898.

(Chapter I.—Preliminary.—Sections 1-3. Chapter II.—Privilege and Protection of the Government.—Section 4.)

An Act to consolidate and amend the Law relating to the Post Office in India.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Post Office in India; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title, extent, application and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Post Office Act, 1898.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, inclusive of Upper Burma, British Baluchistan the Santal Parganas and the Pargana of Spiti; and it applies also to—

(a) all Native Indian subjects of Her Majesty in any place without and beyond British India;

(b) all other British subjects within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India; and (c) all servants of the Queen, whether British subjects or not, within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India.

(3) It shall come into force on the first day of July, 1898.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) the expression "Director General" means the Director General of the Post Office of India.

(b) the expression "inland," used in relation to a postal article, means—

(i) posted in British India and addressed to any place in British India or to any place for which a post office is established by the Governor General in Council beyond the limits of British India; or

(ii) posted at any post office established by the Governor General in Council beyond the limits of British India and addressed to any place for which any such post office is established or to any place in British India:

(c) the expression "mail bag" includes a bag, box, parcel or any other envelope or covering in which postal articles in course of transmission by post are conveyed, whether it does or does not contain any such article:

(d) the expression "mail ship" means a ship employed for carrying mails, pursuant to contract or continuing arrangement, by the Government of India or Her Majesty's Government or the Government of any British possession or foreign country:

(e) the expression "officer of the Post Office" includes any person employed in any business of the Post Office or on behalf of the Post Office:

(f) the expression "postage" means the duty chargeable for the transmission by post of postal articles:

(g) the expression "postage stamp" means any stamp provided by the Governor General in Council for denoting postage or other fees or sums payable in respect of postal articles under this Act, and includes adhesive postage stamps and stamps printed, embossed, impressed or otherwise indicated on any envelope, wrapper, postcard or other article:

(h) the expression "post office" includes every house, building, room, carriage or place used for the purposes of the Post Office, and every letter-box provided by the Post Office for the reception of postal articles:

(i) the expression "postal article" includes a letter, postcard, newspaper, book, pattern or sample packet, parcel and every article or thing transmissible by post:

(j) the expression "Post Master General" includes a Deputy Post Master General or other officer exercising the powers of a Post Master General: and (k) the expression "the Post Office" means the department presided over by the Director General.

Meanings of "in course of transmission by post" and "delivery."

3. For the purposes of this Act,—

(a) a postal article shall be deemed to be in course of transmission by post from the time of its being delivered to a post office to the time of its being delivered to the addressee or of its being returned to the sender or otherwise disposed of under Chapter VII:

(b) the delivery of a postal article of any description to a postman or other person authorized to receive postal articles of that description for the post shall be deemed to be a delivery to a post office. and

(c) the delivery of a postal article at the house or office of the addressee, or to the addressee or his servant or agent or other person considered to be authorized to receive the article according to the usual manner of delivering postal articles to the addressee, shall be deemed to be delivery to the addressee.

CHAPTER II.

PRIVILEGE AND PROTECTION OF THE GOVERNMENT.

Exclusive privilege of conveying letters reserved to the Government.

4. (1) Wherever within British India posts or postal communications are established by the Governor General in Council, the Governor General in Council shall have the exclusive privilege of conveying by post, from one place to another, all letters, except in the following cases, and shall also

The Indian Post Office Act 1898.

(Chapter II.—Privilege and Protection of the Government.—Sections 5-6. Chapter III.—Postage.—Sections 7-9) have the exclusive privilege of performing all the incidental services of receiving, collecting, sending, despatching and delivering all letters, except in the following cases, that is to say:—

(a) letters sent by a private friend in his way, journey or travel, to be delivered by him to the person to whom they are directed, without hire, reward or other profit or advantage for receiving, carrying or delivering them;

(b) letters solely concerning the affairs of the sender or receiver thereof, sent by a messenger on purpose; and

(c) letters solely concerning goods or property, sent either by sea or by land to be delivered with the goods or property which the letters concern, without hire, reward or other profit or advantage for receiving, carrying or delivering them:

Provided that nothing in this section shall authorize any person to make a collection of letters excepted as aforesaid for the purpose of sending them otherwise than by post.

(2) For the purposes of this section and section 5, the expression "letters" includes postcards.

Certain persons expressly forbidden to convey letters.

5. Wherever within British India posts or postal communications are established by the Governor General in Council, the following persons are expressly forbidden to collect, carry, tender or deliver letters, or to receive letters for the purpose of carrying or delivering them, although they obtain no hire, reward or other profit or advantage for so doing, that is to say:—

(a) common carriers of passengers or goods, and their servants or agents, except as regards letters solely concerning goods in their carts or carriages; and

(b) owners and masters of vessels sailing or passing on any river or canal in British India, or between any ports or places in British India, and their servants or agents, except as regards letters solely concerning goods on board, and except as regards postal articles received for conveyance under Chapter VIII.

Exemption from liability for loss, misdelivery, delay or damage.

6. The Secretary of State for India in Council shall not incur any liability by reason of the loss, misdelivery or delay of, or damage to, any postal article in course of transmission by post, except in so far as such liability may in express terms be undertaken by the Governor General in Council as hereinafter provided, and no officer of the Post Office shall incur any liability by reason of any such loss, misdelivery, delay or damage, unless he has caused the same fraudulently or by his wilful act or default.

CHAPTER III.

POSTAGE.

Power to fix rates of inland postage.

7. (1) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, fix the rates of postage and other sums to be charged in respect of postal articles sent by the inland post under this Act, and may make rules as to the scale of weights, terms and conditions subject to which the rates so fixed shall be charged:

Provided that the highest rate of postage, when prepaid, shall not exceed the rate set forth for each class of postal articles in the first schedule

(2) Unless and until such notification as aforesaid is issued, the rates set forth in the said schedule shall be the rates chargeable under this Act

(3) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, declare what packets may be sent by the inland post as book, pattern and sample packets within the meaning of this Act.

Power to make rules as to payment of postage and fees in certain cases

8. The Governor General in Council may, by rule,—

(a) require the prepayment of postage on inland postal articles or any class of inland postal articles, and prescribe the manner in which prepayment shall be made,

(b) prescribe the postage to be charged on inland postal articles when the postage is not prepaid or is insufficiently prepaid;

(c) provide for the redirection of postal articles and the transmission by post of articles so redirected, either free of charge or subject to such further charge as may be specified in the rules, and

(d) prescribe the fees to be charged for the "express delivery" of postal articles, in addition to, or instead of, any other postage chargeable thereon under this Act.

Explanation.—"Express delivery" means delivery by a special messenger or conveyance.

Power to make rules as to registered newspapers.

9. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules providing for the registration of newspapers for transmission by inland post as registered newspapers.

(2) For the purpose of such registration, every publication, consisting wholly or in great part of political or other news, or of articles relating thereto or to other current topics, with or without advertisements, shall be deemed a newspaper, subject to the following conditions, namely.—

(a) that it is published in numbers at intervals of not more than thirty-one days; and

(b) that it has a bonâ fide list of subscribers.

(3) An extra or supplement to a newspaper, bearing the same date as the newspaper and transmitted therewith, shall be deemed to be part of the newspaper:

Provided that no such extra or supplement shall be so deemed unless it consists wholly or in great part of matter like that of the newspaper and has the title and date of publication of the newspaper printed at the top of each page.

Explanation.—Nothing in this section or in the rules thereunder shall be construed to render it compulsory to send newspapers by the inland post.

The Indian Post Office Act 1898.

(Chapter III.—Postage.—Sections 10-15. Chapter IV.—Postage Stamps—Sections 16-17. Chapter V.—Conditions of Transmission of Postal Articles.—Section 18.

Power to declare rates of foreign postage.

10. (1) Where arrangements are in force with the United Kingdom, or with any British possession or foreign country, for the transmission by post of postal articles between British India and the United Kingdom or such possession or country, the Governor General in Council may, in conformity with the provisions of such arrangements, declare what postage rates and other sums shall be charged in respect of such postal articles, and may make rules as to the scale of weight, terms and conditions subject to which the rates so declared shall be charged.

(2) Unless and until such declaration as aforesaid is made, the existing rates and regulations shall continue in force.

Liability for payment of postage.

11. (1) The addressee of a postal article on which postage or any other sum chargeable under this Act is due, shall be bound to pay the postage or sum so chargeable on his accepting delivery of the postal article, unless he forthwith returns it unopened:

Provided that, if any such postal article appears to the satisfaction of the Post Master General to have been maliciously sent for the purpose of annoying the addressee, he may remit the postage.

(2) If any postal article on which postage or any other sum chargeable under this Act is due, is refused or returned as aforesaid, or if the addressee is dead or cannot be found, then the sender shall be bound to pay the postage or sum due thereon under this Act.

Recovery of postage and other sums due in respect of postal articles.

12. If any person refuses to pay any postage or other sum due from him under this Act in respect of any postal article, the sum so due may, on application made by an officer of the Post Office authorized in this behalf by the written order of the Post Master General, be recovered for the use of the Post Office from the person so refusing, as if it were a fine imposed under this Act, by any Magistrate having jurisdiction where that person may for the time being be resident; and the Post Master General may further direct that any other postal article, not being on Her Majesty's service, addressed to that person shall be withheld from him until the sum so due is paid or recovered as aforesaid.

Customs-duty paid by the Post Office to be recoverable as postage.

13. When a postal article, on which any duty of customs is payable, has been received by post from any place beyond the limits of British India, and the duty has been paid by the postal authorities at any customs-port or elsewhere, the amount of the duty shall be recoverable as if it were postage due under this Act.

Post Office marks primâ facie evidence of certain facts denoted.

14. In every proceeding for the recovery of any postage or other sum alleged to be due under this Act in respect of a postal article,—

(a) the production of the postal article, having thereon the official mark of the Post Office denoting that the article has been refused, or that the addressee is dead or cannot be found, shall be primâ facie evidence of the fact so denoted, and

(b) the person from whom the postal article purports to have come, shall, until the contrary is proved, be deemed to be the sender thereof.

Official mark to be evidence of amount of postage.

15. The official mark on a postal article denoting that any postage or other sum is due in respect thereof to the Post Office of British India or to the Post Office of the United Kingdom or of any British possession or foreign country, shall be primâ facie evidence that the sum denoted as aforesaid is so due.

CHAPTER IV.

POSTAGE STAMPS.

Provision of postage stamps and power to make rules as to them.

16. (1) The Governor General in Council shall cause postage stamps to be provided of such kinds and denoting such values as he may think necessary for the purposes of this Act.

(2) The Governor General in Council may make rules as to the supply, sale and use of postage stamps.

(3) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may—

(a) fix the price at which postage stamps shall be sold;

(b) declare the classes of postal articles in respect of which postage stamps shall be used for the payment of postage or other sums chargeable under this Act;

(c) prescribe the conditions with regard to perforation, defacement and all other matters subject to which postage stamps may be accepted or refused in payment of postage or other sums;

(d) regulate the custody, supply and sale of postage stamps;

(e) declare the persons by whom and the terms and conditions subject to which postage stamps may be sold; and (f) prescribe the duties and remuneration of persons selling postage stamps.

Postage stamps to be deemed to be stamps for the purpose of revenue.

17. Postage stamps provided under section 16 shall be deemed to be stamps issued by Government for the purpose of revenue within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code, and, subject to the other provisions of this Act, shall be used for the prepayment of postage or other sums chargeable under this Act in respect of postal articles, except where the Governor General in Council directs that prepayment shall be made in some other way. XLV of 1860.

CHAPTER V.

CONDITIONS OF TRANSMISSION OF POSTAL ARTICLES.

Redelivery to sender of postal article in course of transmission by post.

18. (1) The Governor General in Council may, by rule, provide for the redelivery to the sender, without reference to the consent of the addressee and subject to such conditions (if any) as may be deemed fit, of any postal article in course of transmission by post.

The Indian Post Office Act 1898.

(Chapter V.—Conditions of Transmission of Postal Articles.—Sections 19-25.)

(2) Save as provided by any rules that may be made under sub-section (1), the sender shall not be entitled to recall a postal article in course of transmission by post.

Transmission by post of anything injurious prohibited.

19. (1) Except as otherwise provided by rule and subject to such conditions as may be prescribed thereby, no person shall send by post any explosive, dangerous, filthy, noxious or deleterious substance, any sharp instrument not properly protected, or any living creature which is either noxious or likely to injure postal articles in course of transmission by post or any officer of the Post Office.

(2) No person shall send by post any article or thing which is likely to injure postal articles in course of transmission by post or any officer of the Post Office.

Transmission by post of anything indecent, etc., prohibited.

20. No person shall send by post—

(a) any indecent or obscene printing, painting, photograph, lithograph, engraving, book or card, or any other indecent or obscene article, or

(b) any postal article having thereon, or on the cover thereof, any words, marks or designs of an indecent, obscene, seditious, scurrilous, threatening or grossly offensive character.

Power to make rules as to transmission by post of postal articles.

21. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules as to the transmission by post of postal articles.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may—

(a) provide for the granting receipts for, and the granting and obtaining certificates of posting and delivery of, postal articles, and the sums to be paid, in addition to any other postage, for such receipts and certificates; and

(b) regulate covers, form, dimensions, maximum weight and enclosures, and the use of postal articles, other than letters, for making communications.

(3) Postal articles shall be posted and delivered at such times and in such manner as the Director General may, by order, from time to time appoint.

Power to postpone despatch or delivery of certain postal articles.

22. (1) Where the despatch or delivery from a post office of letters would be delayed by the despatch or delivery therefrom at the same time of book, pattern or sample packets and parcels, or any of them, such packets or parcels, or any of them, may, subject to such rules as the Governor General in Council may make in this behalf, be detained in the Post Office so long as may be necessary.

(2) Where separate parcel posts are established, parcels may be forwarded and conveyed by them, being detained, if necessary, in the Post Office for that purpose.

Power to deal with postal articles posted in contravention of Act.

23. (1) Any postal article sent by post in contravention of any of the provisions of this Act may be detained and either returned to the sender or forwarded to destination, in each case charged with such additional postage (if any) as the Governor General in Council may, by rule, direct.

(2) Any officer in charge of a post office or authorized by the Post Master General in this behalf may open or unfasten any newspaper or any book, pattern or sample packet, in course of transmission by post, which he suspects to have been sent by post in contravention of section 21 or of any of the provisions of this Act relating to postage.

(3) Notwithstanding anything in sub-section (1),—

(a) any postal article sent by post in contravention of the provisions of section 19 may, under the authority of the Post Master General, if necessary, be open and destroyed; and

(b) any postal article sent by post in contravention of the provisions of section 20 may, under the authority of the Post Master General, be destroyed.

Power to deal with postal articles containing goods contraband or liable to duty.

24. Where a postal article, suspected to contain any contraband goods or anything liable to duty, is received for delivery at a post office, the officer in charge of the post office shall send a notice in writing to the addressee inviting him to attend, either in person or by agent, within a specified time at the post office, and shall in the presence of the addressee or his agent, or if the addressee or his agent fails to attend as aforesaid then in his absence, open and examine the postal article:

Provided, first, that, if the Director General so directs in the case of any post office or class of post offices, the officer in charge of the post office shall call in two respectable persons as witnesses before he opens a postal article in the absence of the addressee or his agent:

Provided, secondly, that in all cases a postal article, after being opened under this section, shall be delivered to the addressee, unless it is required for the purpose of any further proceeding under this or any other law or enactment for the time being in force, and that the opening of the postal article and the circumstances connected therewith shall be immediately reported to the Post Master General:

Provided, thirdly, that nothing in this section shall prevent the detention of parcels, received by post from any place beyond the limits of British India, at the customs-port or other place at which they are received, and the opening of parcels so received by the Customs-authorities for the purpose of levying any duty of customs.

Power to intercept notified goods during transmission by post.

25. Where a notification has been published under section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, in respect of any goods of any specified description, any officer of the Post Office empowered VIII of 1878.

The Indian Post Office Act 1898.

(Chapter V.—Conditions of Transmission of Postal Articles.—Sections 26-27.)
(Chapter VI.—Registration, Insurance and Value-payable Post.—Sections 28-30.)

in this behalf by the Governor General in Council may search, or cause search to be made, for any such goods in course of transmission by post, and shall deliver all such goods found to such officer as the Governor General in Council may appoint in this behalf, and such goods may be disposed of in such manner as the Governor General in Council may direct.

Power to intercept postal articles for public good.

26. (1) On the occurrence of any public emergency, or in the interest of the public safety or tranquillity, the Governor General in Council, or a Local Government, or any officer specially authorized in this behalf by the Governor General in Council, may, by order in writing, direct that any postal article or class or description of postal articles in course of transmission by post shall be intercepted or detained, or shall be delivered to the Government or to an officer thereof mentioned in the order, to be disposed of in such manner as the Governor General in Council may direct.

(2) If any doubt arises as to the existence of a public emergency, or as to whether any act done under sub-section (1) was in the interest of the public safety or tranquillity, a certificate signed by a Secretary to the Government of India or to the Local Government shall be conclusive proof on the point.

Power to deal with postal articles from abroad bearing fictitious or previously used stamps.

27. (1) Where a postal article is received by post from any place beyond the limits of British India—

(a) bearing a fictitious postage stamp, that is to say, any fac simile or imitation or representation of a postage stamp; or

(b) purporting to be prepaid with any postage stamp which has been previously used to prepay any other postal article, the officer in charge of the post office at which the postal article is received, shall send a notice to the addressee inviting him to attend, either in person or by agent, within a specified time at the post office to receive delivery of the postal article.

(2) If the addressee or his agent attends at the post office within the time specified in the notice and consents to make known to the officer in charge of the post office the name and address of the sender of the postal article and to redeliver to the officer aforesaid the portion of the postal article which bears the address and the fictitious or previously used postage stamp, or, if the postal article is inseparable from the stamp, the entire postal article, the postal article shall be delivered to the addressee or his agent.

(3) If the addressee or his agent fails to attend at the post office within the time specified in the notice, or, having attended within that time, refuses to make known the name and address of the sender or to redeliver the postal article or portion thereof as required by sub-section (2), the postal article shall not be delivered to him, but shall be disposed of in such manner as the Governor General in Council may direct.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section, the expression "postage stamp" includes any postage stamp for denoting any rate or duty of postage of any part of Her Majesty's dominions or of any Native State or foreign country.

CHAPTER VI.

REGISTRATION, INSURANCE AND VALUE-PAYABLE POST.

Registration of postal articles.

28. The sender of a postal article may, subject to the other provisions of this Act, have the article registered at the post office at which it is posted, and require a receipt therefor; and the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct that, in addition to any postage chargeable under this Act, such further fee as may be fixed by the notification shall be paid on account of the registration of postal articles.

Power to make rules as to registration.

29. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules as to the registration of postal articles.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may—

(a) declare in what cases registration shall be required;

(b) prescribe the manner in which the fees for registration shall be paid; and

(c) direct that twice the fee for registration shall be levied on the delivery of a postal article required to be registered on which the fee for registration has not been prepaid.

(3) Postal articles made over to the Post Office for the purpose of being registered, shall be delivered, when registered, at such times and in such manner as the Director General may, by order, from time to time appoint.

Insurance of postal articles.

30. The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct—

(a) that any postal article may, subject to the other provisions of this Act, be insured at the post office at which it is posted, against the risk of loss or damage in course of transmission by post, and that a receipt therefor shall be granted to the person posting it; and

(b) that, in addition to any postage and fees for registration chargeable under this Act, such further fee as may be fixed by the notification shall be paid on account of the insurance of postal articles.

The Indian Post Office Act 1898.

(Chapter VI.—Registration, Insurance and Value-payable Post.—Sections 31-36.) Chapter VII.—Undelivered Postal Articles.—Section 37.)

Power to require insurance of postal articles.

31. The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, declare in what cases insurance shall be required, and direct that any postal article containing anything required to be insured, which has been posted without being insured, shall be returned to the sender or shall be delivered to the addressee, subject to the payment of such special fee as may be fixed by the notification :

Provided that the levy of such special fee as aforesaid shall not impose any liability upon the Secretary of State for India in Council in respect of the postal article.

Power to make rules as to insurance.

32. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules as to the insurance of postal articles.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may—

(a) declare what classes of postal articles may be insured under section 30 ;

(b) fix the limit of the amount for which postal articles may be insured ; and

(c) prescribe the manner in which the fees for insurance shall be paid.

(3) Postal articles made over to the Post Office for the purpose of being insured, shall be delivered, when insured, at such places and times and in such manner as the Director General may, by order, from time to time appoint.

Liability in respect of postal articles insured.

33. Subject to such conditions and restrictions as the Governor General in Council may, by rule, prescribe, the Secretary of State for India in Council shall be liable to pay compensation, not exceeding the amount for which a postal article has been insured, to the sender thereof for the loss of the postal article or its contents, or for any damage caused to it in course of transmission by post :

Provided that the compensation so payable shall in no case exceed the value of the article lost or the amount of the damage caused.

Transmission by post of value-payable postal articles.

34. The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct that, subject to the other provisions of this Act and to the payment of fees at such rates as may be fixed by the notification, a sum of money specified in writing at the time of posting by the sender of a postal article shall be recoverable on the delivery thereof from the addressee, and that the sum, so recovered, shall be paid to the sender :

Provided that the Secretary of State for India in Council shall not incur any liability in respect of the sum specified for recovery, unless and until that sum has been received from the addressee.

Explanation.— Postal articles sent in accordance with the provisions of this section may be described as "value payable" postal articles.

Power to make rules as to value-payable postal articles.

35. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules as to the transmission by post of value-payable postal articles.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may—

(a) declare what classes of postal articles may be sent as value-payable postal articles ;

(b) direct that no postal article shall be so sent unless the sender declares that it is sent in execution of a bonâ fide order received by him ;

(c) limit the value to be recovered on the delivery of any value-payable postal article ; and

(d) prescribe the form of declaration to be made by the senders of value-payable postal articles, and the time and manner of the payment of fees.

(3) Postal articles shall be made over to the Post Office for the purpose of being sent as "value payable," and shall be delivered, when so sent, at such times and in such manner as the Director General may, by order, from time to time appoint.

Power to give effect to arrangements with other countries.

36. (1) Where arrangements are in force with the United Kingdom, or with any British possession, Native State or foreign country, for the transmission by post of registered, insured or value-payable postal articles between British India and the United Kingdom or such possession, State or country, the Governor General in Council may make rules to give effect to such arrangements.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may prescribe—

(a) the form of declaration to be made by the senders of such postal articles as aforesaid ; and

(b) the fees to be charged in respect thereof.

CHAPTER VII.

UNDELIVERED POSTAL ARTICLES.

Power to make rules as to disposal of undelivered postal articles.

37. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules as to the disposal of postal articles which for any reason cannot be delivered (hereinafter referred to as "undelivered postal articles").

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may—

(a) prescribe the period during which undelivered postal articles at a post office shall remain in that office ; and

(b) provide for the publication of lists of undelivered postal articles, or of any class of undelivered postal articles.

(3) Every undelivered postal article, after being detained at a post office for the period prescribed by rule under the foregoing provisions of this section, shall be either forwarded, free of further charge, to the post office at which it was posted, for return to the sender, or sent to the office of the Post Master General.

The Indian Post Office Act, 1898.

(Chapter VII.—Undelivered Postal Articles.—Sections 38-39. Chapter VIII.—Ship Letters.—Sections 40-42. Chapter IX.—Money Orders.—Sections 43-45.)

Disposal of undelivered postal articles at office of Post Master General.

38. (1) Every postal article received at the office of the Post Master General under sub-section (3) of section 37 shall be dealt with as follows:—

(a) if practicable, it shall be redirected and forwarded by post to the addressee; or,

(b) if it cannot be redirected and forwarded as aforesaid, it shall be opened by some officer, appointed by the Post Master General in this behalf and bound to secrecy, in order to ascertain the name and address of the sender.

(2) If the name and address of the sender are so ascertained, it shall be returned by post to the sender, free of further charge or subject to such further charge as the Governor General in Council may, by rule, direct.

Final disposal of undelivered postal articles.

39. Undelivered postal articles which cannot be disposed of under the foregoing provisions, shall be detained in the office of the Post Master General for such further period (if any), and shall be dealt with in such manner, as the Governor General in Council may, by rule, direct:

Provided that—

(a) letters and postcards shall be destroyed;

(b) money or saleable property, not being of a perishable nature, found in any undelivered postal article, shall be detained for a period of one year in the office of the Post Master General, and, if on the expiration of that period no person has established his right thereto, shall, if money, be credited to the Post Office, and, if saleable property, be sold, the sale-proceeds being credited to the Post Office.

CHAPTER VIII.

SHIP LETTERS.

Duty of master of ship, departing from any port in British India and not being a mail ship, to convey mail bags.

40. The master of a ship, not being a mail ship, about to depart from any port in British India to any port within, or any port or place beyond, British India, shall receive on board any mail bag tendered to him by any officer of the Post Office for conveyance, granting a receipt therefor in such form as the Governor General in Council may, by rule, prescribe, and shall, without delay, deliver the same at the port or place of destination.

Duty of master of ship arriving at any port in British India in respect of postal articles and mail bags on board.

41. (1) The master of a ship arriving at any port in British India shall, without delay, cause every postal article or mail bag on board which is directed to that port and is within the exclusive privilege conferred on the Governor General in Council by section 4, to be delivered either at the post office at that port or to some officer of the Post Office authorized in this behalf by the Post Master General.

(2) If there is on board any postal article or mail bag which is directed to any other place within British India and is within the exclusive privilege aforesaid, the master shall, without delay, report the fact to the officer in charge of the post office at the port of arrival and act according to the directions he may receive from such officer, and the receipt of such officer shall discharge him from all further responsibility in respect of the postal article or mail bag.

Allowance of gratuities for conveyance of postal articles by ships other than mail ships.

42. The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, declare what gratuities shall be allowed to masters of ships, not being mail ships, in respect of postal articles received by them for conveyance on behalf of the Post Office; and the master of a ship, not being a mail ship, about to leave any port in British India as aforesaid shall, if he receives on board a mail bag for conveyance, be entitled to demand and obtain immediately the amount of the gratuity payable under this section in respect of the mail bag and its contents.

CHAPTER IX.

MONEY ORDERS.

Power to maintain money order system and to make rules as to remittances thereby.

43. (1) The Governor General in Council may provide for the remitting of small sums of money through the Post Office by means of money orders, and may make rules as to such money orders.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may prescribe—

(a) the limit of amount for which money orders may be issued;

(b) the period during which money orders shall remain current; and

(c) the rates of commission or the fees to be charged on money orders or in respect thereof.

Power for remitter to recall money order or alter name of payee.

44. (1) Subject to such conditions as the Governor General in Council may, by rules made under section 43, prescribe in respect of the levy of additional rates of commission or fees or any other matters, a person remitting money through the Post Office by means of a money order may require that the amount of the order, if not paid to the payee, be repaid to him, or be paid to such person other than the original payee as he may direct.

(2) If neither the payee nor the remitter of a money order can be found, and if within the period of one year from the date of the issue of the order no claim is made by such payee or remitter, the amount of such order shall not be claimable from the Government.

Power to provide for the issue of postal orders.

45. The Governor General in Council may authorize the issue, in such form as may be suitable, of money orders, to be called postal orders or by such other designation as may be deemed appropriate, for certain fixed amounts, and may make rules as to the rates of commission to be charged thereon and the manner in which, and conditions subject to which, they may be issued, paid and cancelled:

The Indian Post Office Act, 1898.

(Chapter IX.—Money Orders.—Sections 46-48. Chapter X.—Penalties and Pocedure.—Sections 49-53.)

Provided that no such order shall be issued for an amount in excess of ten rupees.

Power to give effect to arrangements with other countries.

46. (1) Where arrangements are in force with the United Kingdom, or with any British possession, Native State or foreign country, for the issue and payment through the Post Office of money orders between British India and the United Kingdom or such possession, State or country, the Governor General in Council may make rules to give effect to such arrangements.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may prescribe—

(a) the manner in which, and the conditions subject to which, such orders may be issued and paid in British India; and

(b) the rates of commission to be charged thereon.

Recovery of money order paid to the wrong person.

47. If any person, without reasonable excuse the burden of proving which shall lie on him, neglects or refuses to refund—

(a) any amount paid to him in respect of a money order by an officer of the Post Office in excess of what ought to have been paid to him in respect thereof, or

(b) the amount of a money order paid by an officer of the Post Office to him instead of to some other person to whom it ought to have been paid, such amount shall be recoverable by an officer of the Post Office authorized by the Post Master General in this behalf from the person so neglecting or refusing as if it were an arrear of land-revenue due from him.

Exemption from liability in respect of money orders.

48. No suit or other legal proceeding shall be instituted against the Secretary of State for India in Council or any officer of the Post Office in respect of—

(a) any thing done under any rules made by the Governor General in Council under this Chapter; or

(b) the wrong payment of a money order caused by incorrect or incomplete information given by the remitter as to the name and address of the payee, provided that, as regards incomplete information, there was reasonable justification for accepting the information as a sufficient description for the purpose of identifying the payee; or

(c) the payment of any money order being refused or delayed by, or on account of, any accidental neglect, omission or mistake, by, or on the part of, an officer of the Post Office, or for any other cause whatsoever, other than the fraud or wilful act or default of such officer; or

(d) any wrong payment of a money order after the expiration of one year from the date of the issue of the order.

CHAPTER X.

PENALTIES AND PROCEDURE.

Offences by Officers of the Post Office.

Penalty for misconduct of person employed to carry or deliver mail bags or postal articles.

49. Whoever, being employed to carry or deliver any mail bag or any postal article in course of transmission by post,—

(a) is in a state of intoxication while so employed, or

(b) is guilty of carelessness or other misconduct, whereby the safety of any such mail bag or postal article as aforesaid is endangered, or

(c) loiters or makes delay in the conveyance or delivery of any such mail bag or postal article as aforesaid, or

(d) does not use due care and diligence safely to convey or deliver any such mail bag or postal article as aforesaid, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

Penalty for voluntary withdrawal from duty, without permission or notice, of person employed to carry or deliver mail bags or postal articles.

50. Whoever, being employed to carry or deliver any mail bag or any postal article in course of transmission by post, voluntarily withdraws from the duties of his office without permission or without having given one month's previous notice in writing, shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to fifty rupees, or with both.

Penalty for making false entry in register kept by person employed to carry or deliver postal articles.

51. Whoever, being employed to carry or deliver any postal article in course of transmission by post and required while so employed to keep any register, makes, or causes or suffers to be made, any false entry in the register with intent to induce the belief that he has visited a place, or delivered a postal article, which he has not visited or delivered, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees, or with both.

Penalty for theft, dishonest misappropriation, secretion, destruction, or throwing away, of postal articles.

52. Whoever, being an officer of the Post Office, commits theft in respect of, or dishonestly misappropriates, or, for any purpose whatsoever, secretes, destroys or throws away, any postal article in course of transmission by post or anything contained therein, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be punishable with fine.

Penalty for opening, detaining or delaying postal articles.

53. Whoever, being an officer of the Post Office, contrary to his duty, opens, or causes or suffers to be opened, any postal article in course of transmission by post, or wilfully detains or delays, or causes or suffers to be detained or delayed, any such postal article, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both:

Provided that nothing in this section shall extend to the opening, detaining or delaying of any postal article under the authority of this Act or in obedience to the order in writing of the Governor General in Council or the direction of a competent Court.

The Indian Post Office Act, 1898.

Chapter X.—Penalties and Procedure.—Sections 54-62.)

Penalty for fraud in connection with official marks and for receipt of excess postage.

54. Whoever, being an officer of the Post Office,—

(a) fraudulently puts any wrong official mark on a postal article, or

(b) fraudulently alters, removes or causes to disappear any official mark which is on a postal article, or,

(c) being entrusted with the delivery of any postal article, knowingly demands or receives any sum of money in respect of the postage thereof which is not chargeable under this Act, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, and shall also be punishable with fine.

Penalty for fraudulently preparing, altering, secreting or destroying Post Office documents.

55. Whoever, being an officer of the Post Office entrusted with the preparing or keeping of any document, fraudulently prepares the document incorrectly, or alters or secretes or destroys the document, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, and shall also be punishable with fine.

Penalty for fraudulently sending unpaid postal articles.

56. Whoever, being an officer of the Post Office, sends by post, or puts into any mail bag, any postal article upon which postage has not been paid or charged in the manner prescribed by this Act, intending thereby to defraud the Government of the postage on such postal article, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, and shall also be punishable with fine.

Punishment of offences committed in India outside British India.

57. (1) Whoever, being an officer of the Post Office employed in any place in India beyond the limits of British India in which posts are established by the Governor General in Council, or being appointed to sell postage stamps in any such place, commits therein an offence punishable under this Act, shall be punishable either in the place where the offence was committed by any Court or officer duly empowered by the Governor General in Council to take cognizance of offences committed in that place, or in any part of British India by any Court of competent jurisdiction as if the offence had been committed in that part.

V of 1898. (2) The provisions of section 188 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, shall not apply to any offence referred to in this section.

Other Offences.

Penalty for contravention of section 4.

58. Whoever—

(a) conveys, otherwise than by post, a letter within the exclusive privilege conferred on the Governor General in Council by section 4, or

(b) performs any service incidental to conveying, otherwise than by post, any letter within the exclusive privilege aforesaid, or

(c) sends, or tenders or delivers in order to be sent, otherwise than by post, a letter within the exclusive privilege aforesaid, or

(d) makes a collection of letters excepted from the exclusive privilege aforesaid for the purpose of sending them otherwise than by post, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to fifty rupees for every such letter.

(2) Whoever, having already been convicted of an offence under this section, is again convicted thereunder, shall, on every such subsequent conviction, be punishable with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

Penalty for contravention of section 5.

59. (1) Whoever, in contravention of the provisions of section 5, carries, receives, tenders or delivers letters, or collects letters, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to fifty rupees for every such letter.

(2) Whoever, having already been convicted of an offence under this section, is again convicted thereunder, shall, on every such subsequent conviction, be punishable with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

Penalty for breach of rules under section 16.

60. Whoever, being appointed to sell postage stamps,—

(a) takes from any purchaser for any postage stamp or quantity of postage stamps a price higher than that fixed by any rule made under section 16, sub-section (3), clause (a), shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both; or

(b) commits a breach of any other rule made under section 16, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

Penalty for contravention of section 19 or 20.

61. (1) Whoever, in contravention of the provisions of section 19 or section 20, sends, or tenders or makes over in order to be sent, by post any postal article or any thing, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

(2) The detention in the Post Office of any postal article on the ground of its having been sent in contravention of the provisions of section 19 or section 20, shall not exempt the sender from any proceedings which might have been taken if the postal article had been delivered in due course of post.

Penalty for defiling or injuring post office letter-boxes.

62. Whoever places in or against any letter-box provided by the Post Office for the reception of postal articles any fire, match or light, any explosive, dangerous, filthy, noxious or deleterious substance, or any fluid, or commits a nuisance in or against any such letter-box or does anything likely to injure any such letter-box or its appurtenances or contents, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

The Indian Post Office Act, 1898.

(Chapter X.—Penalties and Procedure.—Sections 63-72. Chapter XI.—Supplemental.—Section 73.)

Penalty for affixing without authority thing to, or painting, tarring or disfiguring, post office or post office letter-box.

63. Whoever, without due authority, affixes any placard, advertisement, notice, list, document, board or other thing in or on, or paints, tars or in any way disfigures any post office or any letter-box provided by the Post Office for the reception of postal articles, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

Penalty for making false declaration.

64. Whoever, being required by this Act to make a declaration in respect of any postal article to be sent by post or the contents or value thereof, makes in his declaration any statement which he knows, or has reason to believe, to be false, or does not believe to be true, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, and, if the false declaration is made for the purpose of defrauding the Government, with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

Penalty for master of ship failing to comply with the provisions of section 40 or 41.

65. Whoever, being the master of a ship,—

(a) fails to comply with the provisions of section 40, or,

(b) without reasonable excuse, the burden of proving which shall lie on him, fails to deliver any postal article or mail bag or to comply with the directions of the officer in charge of the post office at a port of arrival, as required by section 41, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

Penalty for detention of letters on board vessel arriving in port.

66. (1) Whoever, being either the master of a ship arriving at any port in British India or any one on board, knowingly has in his baggage or in his possession or custody, after the postal articles on board or any of them have been sent to the post office at the port of arrival, any postal article within the exclusive privilege conferred on the Governor General in Council by section 4, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to fifty rupees for every such postal article as aforesaid.

(2) Whoever, being such master or other person as aforesaid, detains any such postal article as aforesaid after demand made for it by an officer of the Post Office, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees for every such postal article.

Penalty for detaining mails or opening mail bag.

67. Whoever, except under the authority of this Act or in obedience to the order in writing of the Governor General in Council or the direction of a competent Court, detains the mails or any postal article in course of transmission by post, or on any pretence opens a mail bag in course of transmission by post, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees :

Provided that nothing in this section shall prevent the detention of an officer of the Post Office carrying the mails or any postal article in course of transmission by post, on a charge of having committed an offence declared to be cognizable by the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, or any other law for the time being in force. V of 1898.

Penalty for retaining postal articles wrongly delivered or mail bags.

68. Whoever fraudulently retains, or wilfully secretes or makes away with, or keeps or detains, or, when required by an officer of the Post Office, neglects or refuses to deliver up, any postal article in course of transmission by post which ought to have been delivered to any other person, or a mail bag containing a postal article, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, and shall also be punishable with fine.

Penalty for unlawfully diverting letters.

69. Whoever, not being an officer of the Post Office, wilfully and maliciously, with intent to injure any person, either opens or causes to be opened any letter which ought to have been delivered, or does any act whereby the due delivery of a letter to any person is prevented or impeded, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both :

Provided that nothing in this section shall apply to a person who does any act to which the section applies, if he is a parent, or in the position of a parent or guardian, of the addressee, and the addressee is a minor or a ward.

General.

Penalty for abetting, or attempting to commit, offences under Act.

70. Whoever abets the commission of any offence punishable under this Act or attempts to commit any offence so punishable, shall be punishable with the punishment provided for that offence.

Property in cases of offences to be laid in the Post Office.

71. In every prosecution for an offence in respect of a mail bag or of any postal article sent by post, it shall be sufficient, for the purpose of the charge, to describe the mail bag or postal article as being the property of the Post Office, and it shall not be necessary to prove that the mail bag or postal article was of any value.

Authority for prosecutions under certain sections of Act.

72. No Court shall take cognizance of an offence punishable under any of the provisions of sections 51, 53, 54, clauses (a) and (b), 55, 56, 58, 59, 61, 64, 65, 66 and 67 of this Act, unless upon complaint made by order of, or under authority from, the Director General or a Post Master General.

CHAPTER XI.

SUPPLEMENTAL.

Zamindari and other district posts.

73. (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules for the management of any zamindari or other district post.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may declare what portions of this Act shall be applicable to zamindari and other district posts and to the persons employed in connection therewith.

The Indian Post Office Act 1898.

Bills introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for making Laws and Regulations, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to render it permissive to the Members of the Memon Community to declare themselves subject to Muhammadan Law was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 21st March, 1898:—

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to render it permissive to the members of the Memon Community to declare themselves subject to Muhammadan Law was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill annexed thereto.

From High Court, Calcutta, No. 791, dated 31st March, 1896 [Paper No. 1].
From Agent to Governor General in Baluchistan, No. 3114, dated 20th April, 1896 [Paper No. 2].
From Chief Commissioner, Assam, No. 72-L. & L.—1371-J., dated 17th April, 1896 [Paper No. 3].
From Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 669, dated 2nd June, 1896 [Paper No. 4].
From Government of Madras, No. 988, dated 10th June, 1896 [Paper No. 5].
From Resident, Hyderabad, No. 189, dated 18th July, 1896, and enclosures [Papers No. 6].
From Chief Commissioner, Burma, No. 481-L.—16, dated 17th July, 1896, and enclosures [Papers No. 7].
From Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 893-VII-804—B., dated 24th July, 1896, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].
From Government, Punjab, No. 883, dated 28th July, 1896, and enclosures [Papers No. 9].
From Government, Bombay, No. 5404, dated 7th August, 1896, and enclosures [Papers No. 10].
From Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, No. 5536, dated 17th August, 1896, and enclosures [Papers No. 11].
From Chief Commissioner, Ajmere-Merwara, No. 993-690, dated 20th August, 1896, and enclosures [Papers No. 12].
From Government, Bengal, No. 4839-J., dated 25th August, 1896, and enclosures [Papers No. 13].
Note by the Hon'ble Pandit Bishambar Nath, dated 17th December, 1896 [Paper No. 14].
Note by the Hon'ble R. M. Sayani, dated 6th January, 1897 [Paper No. 15].
Note by the Hon'ble Nawab Amiruddeen Ahmad Khan, C. I. E., Bahadur, Fakahrud-doulah, Chief of Loharu, dated 8th February, 1897 [Paper No. 16].
From Government of India, Legislative Department, to Government, Bombay, No. 448, dated 26th February, 1897, and enclosures; from Government, Bombay, No. 8465, dated 19th November, 1897, and enclosures [Papers No. 17].
Note by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Pandit Suraj Kaul, C.I.E., dated 12th January, 1898 [Paper No. 18].

2. When this Bill was before us last year, the result of our discussion was a reference to the Government of Bombay to obtain, if possible, further information as to the wishes of the Memon Community at large with regard to the proposed measure. The reply of that Government is contained in its letter No. 8465, dated 19th November, 1897, printed in Papers No. 17, referred to in the margin above. It will be seen from their reply that the inquiry addressed to the Memon Community has elicited from what is understood to be a large majority of the community an opinion adverse to the proposals of the Bill as introduced.

3. Under these circumstances we cannot recommend that the Bill should be proceeded with in its present form. The petitioners suggest that the proposals of the Bill should be reversed and that the Muhammadan law should apply to the whole of the community with the reservation that Memons who do not desire to follow the Muhammadan law of succession should make a declaration to that effect.

4. The Bill, as framed, requires Memons, who do desire to follow the Muhammadan law of succession, to make a declaration to that effect We agree that if the majority of the community are on one side, it is the minority who should except themselves by specific declaration. On the other hand, it would be hardly fair that Memons who wish to abide by their ancient family customs should be obliged to declare themselves not to be orthodox Muhammadans. It seems to us that perhaps legislation on new lines might be preferable and that the Government of Bombay might be further consulted. The proposal we submit for consideration is that the Muhammadan law of intestate succession should be declared applicable to the whole of the Memon Community, but that complete liberty of testamentary disposition should be reserved. This proposal will require careful consideration and elucidation; in the first place as to whether it would in itself be acceptable to the Memons as a solution of the difficulty; in the second place as to the bearing of existing decisions on the customary law of the Memons. We are not sure how far the Courts would be prepared to hold, without definite legislation on the point, that the property held by Memons is held by them on such terms as to be capable of being disposed by will.

5. We regret that there should be further delay in this matter, but we think it is better for the community itself that the law should be clear and unambiguous, so that there may be no further occasion to resort to the Legislature.

The 19th March, 1898.

A Bill to render it permissive to the members of the Memon Community to declare themselves subject to Muhammadan Law.

WHEREAS there is in the Presidency of Bombay and elsewhere a class of persons known as Memons, and questions have from time to time arisen as to the law by which such persons are in certain particulars governed;

And whereas some of such persons consider that they are, or desire that they should be, governed in those particulars by the Muhammadan law as established in the Hanafi School;

And whereas it is expedient to provide a procedure whereby the applicability of that law to such persons in those particulars may be placed beyond dispute;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Memons Act, 1896; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

Muhammadan law to apply to Memons on declaration made by them.

2. (1) When any Memon who has attained his majority has declared, in manner next hereinafter provided, that he desires to be governed by the Muhammadan law as established in the Hanafi School, that law shall thereupon, any custom to the contrary notwithstanding, apply to him, and to his children (if any), being minors at the time of such declaration or born thereafter, and to all property of which he or they shall then be or thereafter become absolutely entitled, in each part of British India, in the same particulars and to the same extent as it applies in the same part of British India to other Muhammadans and their property.

(2) No declaration made as aforesaid shall be capable of being revoked.

Form of declaration.

3. A declaration to take effect under section 2 shall be made by a written instrument signed by the declarant and in the form set forth in the schedule or in a like form, and shall,—

(a) if made in any part of British India in which the Indian Registration Act, 1877, is for the time being in force, be registered under that Act during the lifetime of the declarant; and, III of 1877

(b) if made elsewhere, be executed before, and authenticated by, a notary public or a Court, Judge, Magistrate, British Consul or Vice-Consul or representative of Her Majesty or of the Government of India.

Declarations made by two successive generations of Memons to bind future generations.

4. When declarations under the foregoing provisions have been made by a Memon and by any one of his sons, the Muhammadan law as established in the Hanafi School shall thereupon, any custom to the contrary notwithstanding, apply to all the lineal descendants of such son in the same manner and to the same extent as to other Muhammadans governed by it in the same part of British India

Saving.

5. Nothing in this Act shall be construed—

(1) to prevent any person being or becoming subject to any form of the Muhammadan law in any manner other than that herein provided, or

(2) to affect the rights of any member of a declarant's family other than such children and lineal descendants as are referred to in sections 2 and 4.

SCHEDULE.

FORM OF DECLARATION.

I, A. B., son of C. D., being a Memon and of the age of not less than years, hereby declare that I desire to be governed, to the extent provided by the Memons Act, 1896, by the Muhammadan law as established in the Hanafi School.

J. M. MACPHERSON,
Secretary to the overnment of India.

From Resident, Hyderabad, No. 68, dated 26th February, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 22].

2. Clause 3 (3), "Bill of Exchange payable on demand."—We have omitted the concluding words of clause (b) of this definition as likely to give rise to difficulty in India, and we have provided expressly that a letter of credit is for stamp purposes to be treated as a bill payable on demand.

(10) Conveyance.—We have altered this definition so as to make it include all conveyances inter vivos which are not specifically provided for in Schedule I, and then to meet the difficulty in I. L. R. 7 Cal. 21, where it was held that the instrument in question was neither a "conveyance" nor a "settlement" nor an "instrument of partition", but an "arrangement" for the transfer of property.

We have added a definition of "impressed stamp" so as to make it clear that the term includes both a stamp impressed by the Collector and also a stamp or embossed stamp-paper.

(15) Instrument of partition.—We have extended this definition so as to include an award by an arbitrator directing a partition.

(22) Promissory note.—We have re-drafted this definition in order to make its meaning clearer.

3. Clause 3.—We have added to the general exemption in this clause an exemption of sales, mortgages and other dispositions of registered ships. We consider that the Indian law in this respect should conform to the law of the United Kingdom as stated in section 721 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict., cap. 60), and in the second general exemption at the end of the first schedule of the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict., cap. 39).

4. Clause 12.—We have added some words to sub-section (3) to make it clear that the mode there indicated for cancelling an adhesive stamp is directory only and not intended to exclude other effective modes of cancellation.

5. Clause 24.—We have added a proviso to the explanation making a concession in a case where the mortgagee is himself the purchaser, that is to say, where he already has an interest in the property and is only purchasing the remaining interest of the mortgagor.

6. Clause 26.—We have added a proviso to cover the case where by accident an instrument is insufficiently stamped originally and the proper duty is subsequently paid under sections 41 and 42.

7. Clause 29.—We have omitted the reference to article No. 54 (re-conveyance of mortgaged property) from clause (a) and provided for the payment of duty on re-conveyances, as in the case of conveyances, by the grantee. We have also omitted clause (b) relating to copies of receipts, as we do not propose to levy stamp-duty on such instruments.

We have omitted the proviso and illustration, as a concession of duty in respect to partitions by the amended schedule.

8. Clause 35.—We have provided for the case of contracts which are to be gathered from correspondence when there is no formal instrument to be stamped, by enacting that it is sufficient if any one of the letters forming part of the correspondence bears the proper stamp.

We have also altered sub-section (b) so as to cover all cases in which a receipt is sought to be put in evidence against the person who ought to have stamped it. Lastly, we have added words to sub-section (d) to provide for a possible case of hardship. A Collector acting under section 32 or any other similar provision might certify an amount as being the proper duty which the Court considered less than the proper duty. We think that in such a case the instrument should be admissible in evidence as the party tendering it is not to blame.

9. Clause 37.—We have altered the drafting of this clause to make it clear that the right to have an instrument stamped with a stamp of improper description duly stamped is dependent on rules made by the Governor General in Council.

10. Clause 39.—As the law stands the Collector cannot charge in any case a less penalty than five rupees. When the stamp is very small, e.g., one or two annas, ten times the value of the stamp might be less than five rupees, and we think that in such cases it will be sufficient to recover ten times the amount of the stamp.

11. Clause 40.—As the law at present stands, the Collector may either impose a penalty of five rupees or a penalty of ten times the amount of the proper duty, provided that such amount does not fall short of five rupees. We think that the Collector should have a discretion to take ten times the amount of the proper duty even though that may not amount to five rupees, e. g., if the amount of duty were two annas, he might be allowed to impose a penalty of Re. 1-4.

We have added sub-section (3) as it was represented to us that inconvenience has been caused by requiring the Collector to return the instrument to the person who originally tendered it instead of to the impounding officer.

12. Clause 44.—We have added further words to sub-section (3). If a case comes into Court and the Court does not think fit to include the amount of the duty or penalty in the costs, we think that no other proceedings to recover it should be taken.

13. Clause 45.—We have omitted the new sub-section (1), as it has been represented to us that the power conferred by it is likely to be abused. It would give rise to continual applications for postponement of civil suits and the Controlling Authority would be flooded with fruitless applications for remission.

14. Clause 49.—We have inserted a new sub-section (7) because a doubt has arisen whether the existing sub-section (6) covers the case of a second instrument being executed solely because the stamp on the original instrument was of insufficient value.

15. Clause 54.—Vendors of stamps buy stamps under discount. In the case of a refund, they are of course only entitled to receive the amount actually paid and not the full value of the stamps.

16. Clause 70.—We have provided that where an offence is compounded · reed composition may be recovered as if it were a penalty under section 48.

17. Clause 75.—We have inserted a limit of five hundred rupees fine as the maximum penalty to be imposed for breach of any rule.

18. Schedule I—No. 1. Acknowledgment.—We have reverted to the old duty of one anna for all acknowledgments and have added words to make it clear that the provision relates only to mere acknowledgments and does not include acknowledgments containing in addition any promise or agreement.

No. 6. Agreement to mortgage.—We have amended this article and reverted to the old law by confining it to instruments of equitable mortgage and excluding agreements to execute a future mortgage.

No. 14. Award—We have excluded awards directing partitions, as they are specially provided for as partitions.

No. 24. Copy or Extract.—We have omitted the proposed duty on original or attested copies of receipts.

No. 27. Debentures.—We have added words to the explanation to show that interest coupons attached to debentures are free from tax, and that the amount payable under them is not to be taken into consideration in taxing the debenture.

No. 45. Partition.—We have inserted provisions reducing the duty in the case of partitions. The Bill as originally drawn imposed in the case of a partition a duty calculated on the value of the whole property partitioned, but gave the Revenue-authority or Civil Court power to remit the duty upon such portion as remained undivided. We have altered the duty so as to make it leviable only on the value of the share or shares divided off; and we have further based the levy of the duty on the assumption that at whichever partner's instance a partition takes place, it is the smaller shares that are separated from the larger, and not the larger that is separated from the smaller. It seems to us that the operation is the same whether it is the larger or the smaller shareholder who is the initiator; and the taxation on the transaction should not be different in the two cases.

The following illustrations will show how the alteration in the law proposed by us will operate, if adopted :—

Four equal shareholders, each having a four anna share, agree to partition. The duty is levied on 12 annas of the value of the whole property.

Of three shareholders, having respectively shares of one-half, one-third and one-sixth, two apply to have their shares partitioned off. The duty is levied on half the value of the property.

One shareholder having two-thirds of a property, obtains separation from the remainder who hold jointly one-third, and who desire to continue to hold their share, jointly. The duty is levied on one-third of the value of the property.

No. 47. Policy of Insurance.—We have provided a reduced duty for insurance against accident or sickness which is at present chargeable on the same footing as life insurance.

No. 48. Power-of-Attorney.—We have limited clause (6) of this article to the case of powers authorizing sales of immoveable property.

No. 49. Promissory Note.—We have restored the old law under which promissory notes payable on demand can be stamped with a one-anna stamp.

Nos. 58 and 64.—We have reduced the duty in the case of the reservation of small settlements, also in the case of small trusts and reservations of trust.

A bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Stamps.

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title, extent and commencement.

1 (1). This Act may be called the Indian Stamp Act, 1898.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India inclusive of Upper Burma, British Baluchistan, the Santal Parganas and the Pargana of Spiti; and

(3) It shall come into force on the first day of July, 1898.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context—

"banker:"

(1) "banker" includes a bank and any person acting as a banker:

"bill of exchange:"

(2) "bill of exchange" means a bill of exchange as defined by the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, and includes also a hundi, and any other document entitling or purporting to entitle any person, whether named therein or not, to payment by any other person of, or to draw upon any other person for, any sum of money:

"bill of exchange payable on demand:"

(3) "bill of exchange payable on demand" includes—

(a) an order for the payment of any sum of money by a bill of exchange or promissory note, or for the delivery of any bill of exchange or promissory note in satisfaction of any sum of money, or for the payment of any sum of money out of any particular fund which may or may not be available, or upon any condition or contingency which may or may not be performed or happen; and

(b) an order for the payment of any sum of money weekly, monthly, or at any other stated periods; and

(c) a letter of credit, that is to say, any instrument by which one person authorises another to give credit to the person in whose favour it is drawn:

"bill of lading:"

(4) "bill of lading" includes a "through bill of lading," but does not include a mate's receipt:

"bond:"

(5) "bond" includes—

(b) any instrument attested by a witness and not payable to order or bearer, whereby a person obliges himself to pay money to another; and

(c) any instrument so attested, whereby a person obliges himself to deliver grain or other agricultural produce to another:

"chargeable:"

(6) "chargeable" means, as applied to an instrument executed or first executed after the commencement of this Act chargeable under this Act, and, as applied to any other instrument chargeable under the law in force in British India when such instrument was executed or, where several persons executed the instrument at different times, first executed: [S. 3 (5), Act I of 1879.]

"cheque:"

(7) "cheque" means a bill of exchange drawn on a specified banker and not expressed to be payable otherwise than on demand: [S. 3 (6), Act I of 1879, revised with s. 6, Act XXVI of 1881.]

"Chief Controlling Revenue-authority:"

(8) "Chief Controlling Revenue-authority" means— [S. 3 (7), Act I of 1879.]

(a) in the Presidency of Fort St. George and the territories respectively under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governors of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces and the Chief Commissioner of Oudh—the Board of Revenue;

(b) in the Presidency of Bombay, outside Sindh and the limits of the town of Bombay—a Revenue Commissioner;

(c) in Sindh—the Commissioner;

(d) in the Punjab and Burma, including Upper Burma—the Financial Commissioner; and

(e) elsewhere—the Local Government or such officer as the Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint in this behalf: [By name or in virtue of his office—omitted.]

"Collector:"

(9) "Collector"—

(a) means, within the limits of the towns of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, the Collector of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, respectively, and, without those limits, the Collector of a district, and [S. 3 (8), Act I of 1879.]

(b) includes a Deputy Commissioner and any officer whom the Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint in this behalf: [Ditto.]

"conveyance:"

(10) "conveyance" includes a conveyance on sale and every instrument by which property whether moveable or immoveable is transferred inter vivos and which is not otherwise specifically provided for by Schedule I: [S. 3 (9), Act I of 1879.]

"duly stamped:"

(11) "duly stamped," as applied to an instrument, means that the instrument bears an adhesive or impressed stamp of not less than the proper amount and that such stamp has been affixed or used in accordance with the law for the time being in force in British India: [S. 3 (10), Act I of 1879, revised.]

The Indian Stamp Bill.

Chapter I.—Preliminary.—Section 2.)

[54 & 55 Vict., c. 39, s. 122(1).] "executed" and "execution:" (12) "executed" and "execution" used with reference to instruments mean "signed" and "signature:"

"impressed stamp:" (13) "impressed stamp" includes—

(b) stamps engrossed on stamped paper.

54 & 55 Vict., c. 39, s. 122.] "instrument:" (14) "instrument" includes every document by which any right or liability is or purports to be created, transferred, limited, extended, extinguished or recorded:

[S. 3 (11), Act I of 1879.] "instrument of partition:" (15) "instrument of partition" means any instrument whereby co-owners of any property divide or agree to divide such property in severalty, and includes also a final order for effecting a partition passed by any Revenue-authority or any Civil Court and an award by an arbitrator directing a partition:

[S. 3 (12), Act I of 1879.] "lease:" (16) "lease" means a lease of immoveable property, and includes also—

(a) a pattá;

(b) a kabúliyat or other undertaking in writing, not being a counterpart of a lease, to cultivate, occupy, or pay or deliver rent for, immoveable property;

(c) any instrument by which tolls of any description are let;

(d) any writing on an application for a lease intended to signify that the application is granted:

[S. 3 (13), Act I of 1879.] "mortgage-deed:" (17) "mortgage-deed" includes every instrument whereby, for the purpose of securing money advanced, or to be advanced, by way of loan, or an existing or future debt, or the performance of an engagement, one person transfers, or creates, to or in favour of, another, a right over or in respect of specified property:

[S. 3 (14), Act I of 1879.] "paper:" (18) "paper" includes vellum, parchment or any other material on which an instrument may be written:

[S. 3 (15), Act I of 1879, revised.] "policy of insurance:" (19) "policy of insurance" includes—

(a) any instrument by which one person, in consideration of a premium, engages to indemnify another against loss, damage or liability arising from an unknown or contingent event;

(b) a life-policy, and any policy insuring any person against accident or sickness, and any other personal insurance, and

(c) any writing evidencing the renewal of, for the purpose of keeping in force, a policy of fire-insurance in respect of which, and of the previous renewal whereof (if any), there has not already been paid the stamp-duty which would have been chargeable if the policy had originally been granted for a longer term than six months:

[S. 3 (15), last 2 paras., Act I of 1879.] "policy of sea-insurance" or "sea-policy:" (20) "policy of sea-insurance" or "sea-policy"—

(a) means any insurance made upon any ship or vessel (whether for marine or inland navigation), or upon the machinery, tackle or furniture of any ship or vessel, or upon any goods, merchandise or property of any description whatever on board of any ship or vessel, or upon the freight of, or any other interest which may be lawfully insured in or relating to, any ship or vessel, and

(b) includes any insurance of goods, merchandise or property for any transit which includes, not only a sea risk within the meaning of clause (a), but also any other risk incidental to the transit insured from the commencement of the transit to the ultimate destination covered by the insurance:

Where any person, in consideration of any sum of money paid or to be paid for additional freight or otherwise, agrees to take upon himself any risk attending goods, merchandise or property of any description whatever while on board of any ship or vessel, or engages to indemnify the owner of any such goods, merchandise or property from any risk, loss or damage, such agreement or engagement shall be deemed to be a contract for sea-insurance:

"power-of-attorney:" (21) "power-of-attorney" includes any instrument (not chargeable with a fee under the law relating to court-fees for the time being in force) empowering a specified person to act for and in the name of the person executing it: [S. 3 (16), Act I of 1897.] VII of 1870.

"promissory note:" (22) "promissory note" means a promissory note as defined by the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881; [54 & 55 Vict., c. 39, s. 33.] XXVI of 1881.

it also includes a note promising the payment of any sum of money out of any particular fund which may or may not be available, or upon any condition or contingency which may or may not be performed or happen: [Old sub-sections (18), (20), and (21) —omitted—see Act X of 1897, s. 3.]

"receipt:" (23) "receipt" includes any note, memorandum or writing— [S. 3 (17), Act I of 1879, omitting the word "advertisement" in the 2nd line. Cf. 54 and 55 Vict., c. 39, s. 100.]

(a) whereby any money, or any bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note is acknowledged to have been received, or

(b) whereby any other moveable property is acknowledged to have been received in satisfaction of a debt, or

CHAPTER II.

STAMP-DUTIES.

A.—Of the Liability of Instruments to Duty.

[S. 5, Act I of 1879.]

Instruments chargeable with duty.

3. Subject to the provisions of this Act and the exemptions contained in Schedule I, the following instruments shall be chargeable with duty of the amount indicated in that schedule as the proper duty therefor respectively, that is to say—

(a) every instrument mentioned in that schedule, and which, not having been previously executed by any person, is executed in British India on or after the first day of July, 1898;

(b) every bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note drawn or made out of British India on or after that day and accepted or paid, or presented for acceptance or payment, or endorsed, transferred or otherwise negotiated, in British India; and

(c) every instrument (other than a bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note) mentioned in that schedule, which, not having been previously executed by any person, is executed out of British India on or after that day, relates to any property situate, or to any matter or thing done or to be done, in British India and is received in British India:

Provided that no duty shall be chargeable in respect of—

[Old s. 4, omitted as unnecessary—see Act X of 1897, s. 3 (48).]

(1) any instrument executed by, or on behalf of, or in favour of Government in cases where, but for this exemption, the Government would be liable to pay the duty chargeable in respect of such instrument;

[General exemption, Sch. II, Act I of 1879.]

(2) any instrument for the sale, transfer or other disposition, either absolutely or by way of mortgage or otherwise, of any ship or vessel, or any part, interest, share or property of or in any ship or vessel registered under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict., c. 60), or under Act XIX of 1838, or the Indian Registration of Ships Act, 1841 (X of 1841), as amended by subsequent Acts.

["Lease" omitted.]
[S. 6, Act of 1879.]

Several instruments used in single transaction of sale, mortgage or settlement.

4. (1) Where, in the case of any sale, mortgage or settlement, several instruments are employed for completing the transaction, the principal instrument only shall be chargeable with the duty prescribed in Schedule I, for the conveyance, mortgage or settlement, and each of the other instruments shall be chargeable with a duty of one rupee instead of the duty (if any) prescribed for it in that schedule.

(2) The parties may determine for themselves which of the instruments so employed shall, for the purposes of sub-section (1), be deemed to be the principal instrument:

Provided that the duty chargeable on the instrument so determined shall be the highest duty which would be chargeable in respect of any of the said instruments employed.

Instruments relating to several distinct matters.

5. Any instrument comprising or relating to several distinct matters shall be chargeable with the aggregate amount of the duties with which separate instruments, each comprising or relating to one of such matters, would be chargeable under this Act. [S. 7 (para. 1), Act I of 1879.]

Instruments coming within several descriptions in Schedule I.

6. Subject to the provisions of the last preceding section, an instrument so framed as to come within two or more of the descriptions in Schedule I shall, where the duties chargeable thereunder are different, be chargeable only with the highest of such duties: [S. 7 (para. 2), Act I of 1879.]

Provided that nothing in this Act contained shall render chargeable with duty exceeding one rupee a counterpart or duplicate of any instrument chargeable with duty and in respect of which the proper duty has been paid.

Policies of sea-insurance.

7. (1) No contract for sea-insurance (other than such insurance as is referred to in section 506 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894), shall be valid unless the same is expressed in a sea-policy. [S. 7 A, Act I of 1879.] 57 & 58 Vict., c. 60.

(2) No sea-policy made for time shall be made for any time exceeding twelve months.

(3) No sea-policy shall be valid unless it specifies the particular risk or adventure, or the time for which it is made, the names of the subscribers or underwriters, and the amount or amounts insured.

(4) Where any sea-insurance is made for or upon a voyage and also for time, or to extend to or cover any time beyond thirty days after the ship shall have arrived at her destination and been there moored at anchor, the policy shall be charged with duty as a policy for or upon a voyage, and also with duty as a policy for time.

Bonds, debentures or other securities issued on loans under Act XI, 1879.

8. (1) Notwithstanding anything in this Act, any local authority raising a loan under the provisions of the Local Authorities Loan Act, 1879, or of any other law for the time being in force, by the issue of bonds, debentures or other securities, shall, in respect of such loan, be chargeable with a duty of eight annas per centum on the total amount of the bonds, debentures or other securities issued by it, and such bonds, debentures or other securities need not be stamped and shall not be chargeable with any further duty on renewal, consolidation, sub-division or otherwise. [S. 7 B, Act I of 1879.] XI of 1897.

(2) The provisions of sub-section (1) exempting certain bonds, debentures or other

The Indian Stamp Bill.

(Chapter II.—Stamp-duties.—Sections 9-14.)

securities from being stamped and from being chargeable with certain further duty shall apply to the bonds, debentures or other securities of all outstanding loans of the kind mentioned therein, and all such bonds, debentures or other securities shall be valid, whether the same are stamped or not:

Provided that nothing herein contained shall exempt the local authority which has issued such bonds, debentures or other securities from the duty chargeable in respect thereof prior to the twenty-sixth day of March, 1897, when such duty has not already been paid or remitted by order issued by the Governor General in Council.

[54 & 55 Vict., c. 59, s. 115 (5).] (3) In the case of wilful neglect to pay the duty required by this section, the local authority shall be liable to forfeit to the Government a sum equal to ten per centum upon the amount of duty payable, and a like penalty for every month after the first month during which the neglect continues.

[S. 8, Act I of 1879.]

Power to reduce, remit or compound duties.

9. The Governor General in Council may, by rule or order published in the Gazette of India,—

(a) reduce or remit, whether prospectively or retrospectively, in the whole or any part of British India, the duties with which any instruments or any particular class of instruments, or any of the instruments belonging to such class, or any instruments when executed by or in favour of any particular class of persons, or by or in favour of any members of such class, are chargeable, and

Old cl. (b)—mitted—see Act X of 1897, s. 1.]

(b) provide for the composition or consolidation of duties in the case of issues by any incorporated company or other body corporate of debentures, bonds or other marketable securities.

B.—Of Stamps and the mode of using them.

[S. 9, Act I of 1879.]

Duties how to be paid.

10. (1) Except as otherwise expressly provided in this Act, all duties with which any instruments are chargeable shall be paid, and such payment shall be indicated on such instruments, by means of stamps—

(a) according to the provisions herein contained, or,

(b) when no such provision is applicable thereto—as the Governor General in Council may by rule direct.

(2) The rules made under sub-section (1) may, among other matters, regulate—

(a) in the case of each kind of instrument—the description of stamps which may be used,

(b) in the case of instruments stamped with impressed stamps—the number of stamps which may be used,

(c) in the case of bills of exchange or promissory notes written in any Oriental language—the size of the paper on which they are written.

[S. 10, Act I of 1879.]

Use of adhesive stamps.

11. The following instruments may be stamped with adhesive stamps, namely:—

(a) instruments chargeable with the duty of one anna, except parts of bills of exchange payable otherwise than on demand and drawn in sets;

(b) bills of exchange, cheques and promissory notes drawn or made out of British India;

(c) entry as an advocate, vakil or attorney on the roll of a High Court;

(d) notarial acts; and

(e) transfers by endorsement of shares in any incorporated company or other body corporate.

[S. 11, Act I of 1879.]

Cancellation of adhesive stamps.

12. (1) (a) Whoever affixes any adhesive stamp to any instrument chargeable with duty and which has been executed by any person shall, when affixing such stamp, cancel the same so that it cannot be used again; and

(b) whoever executes any instrument on any paper bearing an adhesive stamp shall, at the time of execution, unless such stamp has been already cancelled in manner aforesaid, cancel the same so that it cannot be used again.

(2) Any instrument bearing an adhesive stamp which has not been cancelled so that it cannot be used again shall, so far as such stamp is concerned, be deemed to be unstamped.

(3) The person required by sub-section (1) to cancel an adhesive stamp may cancel it by writing on or across the stamp his name or initials or the name or initials of his firm with the true date of his so writing, or in any other effectual manner.

[S. 12 Act I of 1879.]

How instruments stamped with impressed stamps are to be written.

13. Every instrument written upon paper stamped with an impressed stamp shall be written in such manner that the stamp may appear on the face of the instrument and cannot be used for or applied to any other instrument.

[S. 13, Act I of 1879.]

Only one instrument to be on same stamp.

14. No second instrument chargeable with duty shall be written upon a piece of stamped paper upon which an instrument chargeable with duty has already been written:

Provided that nothing in this section shall prevent any endorsement which is duly stamped or is not chargeable with duty being made upon any instrument for the purpose of transferring any right created or evidenced thereby, or of acknowledging the receipt of any money or goods the payment or delivery of which is secured thereby.

(Chapter II.—Stamp-duties.—Sections 15-24.)

[S. 14, Act of 1879.]

Instrument written contrary to section 13 or 14 deemed unstamped.

15. Every instrument written in contravention of section 13 or section 14 shall be deemed to be unstamped.

[S. 15, Act I of 1879.]

Denoting duty.

16. Where the duty with which an instrument is chargeable, or its exemption from duty, depends in any manner upon the duty actually paid in respect of another instrument, the payment of such last-mentioned duty shall, if application be made in writing to the Collector for that purpose, and on production of both the instruments, be denoted upon such first-mentioned instrument by endorsement under the hand of the Collector or in such other manner (if any) as the Governor General in Council may by rule prescribe.

C.—Of the time of stamping Instruments.

[S. 16, Act I of 1879.]

Instruments executed in British India.

17. All instruments chargeable with duty and executed by any person in British India shall be stamped before or at the time of execution.

[S. 17, Act I of 1879.]

Instruments other than bills, cheques and notes executed out of British India.

18. (1) Every instrument chargeable with duty executed only out of British India, and not being a bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note, may be stamped within three months after it has been first received in British India.

(2) Where any such instrument cannot, with reference to the description of stamp prescribed therefor, be duly stamped by a private person, it may be taken within the said period of three months to the Collector, who shall stamp the same in such manner as the Governor General in Council may by rule prescribe, with a stamp of such value as the person so taking such instrument may require and pay for.

[S. 18, Act I of 1879.]

Bills, cheques and notes drawn out of British India.

19. The first holder in British India of any bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note drawn or made out of British India shall, before he presents the same for acceptance or payment or endorses, transfers or otherwise negotiates the same in British India, affix thereto the proper stamp and cancel the same:

Provided that—

(a) if, at the time any such bill of exchange, cheque or note comes into the hands of any holder thereof in British India, the proper adhesive stamp is affixed thereto and cancelled in manner prescribed by section 12 and such holder has no reason to believe that such stamp was affixed or cancelled otherwise than by the person and at the time required by this Act, such stamp shall, so far as relates to such holder, be deemed to have been duly affixed and cancelled.

(b) Nothing contained in this proviso shall relieve any person from any penalty incurred by him for omitting to affix or cancel a stamp.

D.—Of Valuations for Duty.

[Old s. 19—Omitted—Cf. cl. 20 (2) of Bill.]

[S. 20, Act I of 1879.]

["Other Foreign or Colonial" in old section.]

Conversion of amount expressed in foreign currencies.

20. (1) Where an instrument is chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of any money expressed in any currency other than that of British India, such duty shall be calculated on the value of such money in the currency of British India according to the current rate of exchange on the day of the date of the instrument.

(2) The Governor-General in Council may from time to time by notification in the Gazette of India, prescribe a rate of exchange for the conversion of British or any foreign currency into the currency of British India for the purposes of calculating stamp duty, and such rate shall be deemed to be the current rate for the purposes of sub-section (1).

[S. 21, Act I of 1879.]

Stock and marketable securities how to be valued.

21. Where an instrument is chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of any stock or of any marketable or other security, such duty shall be calculated on the value of such stock or security according to the average price or the value thereof on the day of the date of the instrument.

[S. 22, Act I of 1879.]

Effect of statement of rate of exchange or average price.

22. Where an instrument contains a statement of current rate of exchange, or average price, as the case may require, and is stamped in accordance with such statement, it shall, so far as regards the subject matter of such statement, be presumed, until the contrary is proved to be duly stamped.

[S. 23, Act I of 1879.]

Instruments reserving interest.

23. Where interest is expressly made payable by the terms of an instrument, such instrument shall not be chargeable with duty higher than that with which it would have been chargeable had no mention of interest been made therein.

[S. 24, Act I of 1879.]

How transfer in consideration of debt, or subject to future payment, etc., to be charged.

24. Where any property is transferred to any person in consideration, wholly or in part, of any debt due to him, or subject either certainly or contingently to the payment or transfer of any money or stock, whether being or constituting a charge or incumbrance upon the property or not, such debt, money or stock is to be deemed the whole or part, as the case may be, of the consideration in respect whereof the transfer is chargeable with ad valorem duty:

[Cl. s. 5, Act VI of 1894.] Provided that nothing in this section shall apply to any such certificate of sale as is mentioned in article 18 of Schedule I.

EXPLANATION.—In the case of a sale of property subject to a mortgage or other incumbrance any unpaid mortgage money or money charged, together with the interest (if any) due on the same, shall be deemed to be part of the consideration for the sale:

Provided that, where property subject to a mortgage is transferred to the mortgagee, he shall be entitled to deduct from the duty payable on the transfer the amount of any duty already paid in respect of the mortgage.

(2) A sells a property to B for Rs. 500 which is subject to a mortgage to C for Rs. 1,000, and unpaid interest Rs. 200. Stamp-duty is payable on Rs. 1,700.

(3) A mortgages a house of the value of Rs. 10,000 to B for Rs. 5,000. B afterwards buys the house from A. Stamp-duty is payable on Rs. 10,000 less the amount of stamp-duty already paid for the mortgage.

[S. 25, Act I of 1879.] 25. Valuation in case of annuity, etc. Where an instrument is executed to secure the payment of an annuity or other sum payable periodically, or where the consideration for a conveyance is an annuity or other sum payable periodically, the amount secured by such instrument, or the consideration for such conveyance (as the case may be), shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be—

(a) where the sum is payable for a definite period so that the total amount to be paid can be previously ascertained—such total amount;

(b) where the sum is payable in perpetuity or for an indefinite time not terminable with any life in being at the date of such instrument or conveyance—the total amount which, according to the terms of such instrument or conveyance, will or may be payable during the period of twenty years calculated from the date on which the first payment becomes due; and ["Next after the date of such instrument or conveyance" in old s. 25.]

(c) where the sum is payable for an indefinite time terminable with any life in being at the date of such instrument or conveyance—the maximum amount which will or may be payable as aforesaid during the period of twelve years calculated from the date on which the first payment becomes due. ["Next after the date of such instrument or conveyance" in old s. 25.]

[S. 26, Act I of 1879.] 26. Stamp where value of subject matter is indeterminate. Where the amount or value of the subject matter of any instrument chargeable with ad valorem duty cannot be, or (in the case of an instrument executed before the commencement of this Act) could not have been, ascertained, at the date of its execution or first execution, nothing shall be claimable under such instrument more than the highest amount or value for which, if stated in an instrument of the same description, the stamp actually used would, at the date of such execution, have been sufficient. (Postponed.)

Provided that in the case of the lease of a mine in which a share of the produce is received as the rent or part of the rent, it shall be sufficient to have estimated such share for the purpose of stamp duty, at Rs. 20,000 a year, and the whole amount of such share, whatever it may be, shall be claimable under such lease:

Provided also that, where proceedings have been taken in respect of an instrument under sections 31 and 41, the amount certified by the Collector shall be deemed to be the stamp actually used at the date of execution.

27. Facts affecting duty to be set forth in instrument. The consideration, if any, and all other facts and circumstances affecting the chargeability of any instrument with duty, or the amount of the duty with which it is chargeable, shall be fully and truly set forth therein. 28. (1) Direction as to duty in case of certain conveyances. Where any property has been contracted to be sold for one consideration for the whole, and is conveyed to the purchaser in separate parts by different instruments, the consideration shall be apportioned in such manner as the parties think fit, provided that a distinct consideration for each separate part is set forth in the conveyance relating thereto, and such conveyance shall be chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of such distinct consideration. [S. 28, Act I of 1879]

(2) Where property contracted to be purchased for one consideration for the whole, by two or more persons jointly, or by any person for himself and others, or wholly for others, is conveyed in parts by separate instruments to the persons by or for whom the same was purchased, for distinct parts of the consideration, the conveyance of each separate part shall be chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of the distinct part of the consideration therein specified.

The Indian Stamp Bill.

(Chapter II.—Stamp-duties.—Sections 29-30.)

(3) Where a person, having contracted for the purchase of any property but not having obtained a conveyance thereof, contracts to sell the same to any other person, and the property is in consequence conveyed immediately to the sub-purchaser, the conveyance shall be chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of the consideration for the sale by the original purchaser to the sub-purchaser.

(4) Where a person having contracted for the purchase of any property, but not having obtained a conveyance thereof, contracts to sell the whole, or any part thereof, to any other person or persons, and the property is in consequence conveyed by the original seller to different persons, in parts, the conveyance of each part sold to a sub-purchaser shall be chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect only of the consideration paid by such sub-purchaser, without regard to the amount or value of the original consideration; and the conveyance of the residue (if any) of such property to the original purchaser shall be chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect only of the excess of the original consideration over the aggregate of the considerations paid by the sub-purchasers:

Provided that the duty on such last-mentioned conveyance shall in no case be less than one rupee.

(5) Where a sub-purchaser takes an actual conveyance of the interest of the person immediately selling to him, which is chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of the consideration paid by him, and is duly stamped accordingly, any conveyance to be afterwards made to him of the same property by the original seller shall be chargeable with a duty equal to that which would be chargeable on a conveyance for the consideration obtained by such original seller, or, where such duty would exceed five rupees, with a duty of five rupees.

E.—Duty by whom payable.

[S. 29, Act I of 1879—Nos. of articles altered and subjects set out.] Duties by whom payable.

29. In the absence of an agreement to the contrary, the expense of providing the proper stamp shall be borne—

(a) in the case of any instrument described in any of the following articles of Schedule I, namely;

No. 2. (Administration Bond),

No. 6. (Agreement to mortgage),

No. 13. (Bill of exchange),

No. 15. (Bond),

No. 16. (Bottomry Bond),

No. 26. (Customs Bond),

No. 27. (Debenture),

No. 32 (Further charge),

No. 34. (Indemnity-Bond),

No. 40. (Mortgage Deed),

No. 49. (Promissory note),

No. 57. (Security Bond or mortgage deed),

No. 58. (Settlement),

No. 62. (a) (Transfer of shares in an incorporated company or other body corporate),

No. 62. (b) Transfer of debentures being marketable securities whether the debenture is liable to duty or not, except debentures provided for by section 8,

(c) Transfer of any interest secured by a bond, mortgage-deed or policy of insurance, by the person drawing, making or executing such instrument:

(b) in the case of a policy of insurance—by the person effecting the insurance :

(c) in the case of a conveyance (including a re-conveyance of mortgaged property)—by the grantee: in the case of a lease or agreement to lease—by the lessee or intended lessee: [Cf. cl. (b).] [Cl. (c).]

(d) in the case of a counterpart of a lease—by the lessor: [Cl. (d).]

(e) in the case of an instrument of exchange—by the parties in equal shares:

(f) in the case of a certificate of sale—by the purchaser of the property to which such certificate relates: and

(g) in the case of an instrument of partition—by the parties thereto in proportion to their respective shares in the whole property partitioned, or, when the partition is made in execution of an order passed by a Revenue-authority, or Civil Court or arbitrator, in such proportion as such Authority, Court or arbitrator directs. [Cl. (e).]

30. Any person receiving any money exceeding twenty rupees in amount, or any bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note for an amount exceeding twenty rupees, or receiving in satisfaction or part satisfaction of a debt any moveable property exceeding twenty rupees in value, shall, on demand by [S. 58, Act I of 1879.]

Obligation to give receipt in certain cases.

The Indian Stamp Bill.

(Chapter III.—Adjudication as to Stamps.—Sections 31-32.) (Chapter IV.—Instruments not duly stamped.—Section 33) the person paying or delivering such money, bill, cheque, note or property, give a duly stamped receipt for the same.

CHAPTER III.

ADJUDICATION AS TO STAMPS.

[S. 30, Act I of 1879.]

Adjudication as to proper stamp.

31. When any instrument, whether executed or not, and whether previously stamped or not, is brought to the Collector, and the person bringing it applies to have the opinion of that officer as to the duty (if any) with which it is chargeable, and pays a fee of such amount (not exceeding five rupees and not less than eight annas) as the Collector may in each case direct, the Collector shall determine the duty (if any) with which, in his judgment, the instrument is chargeable.

(2) For this purpose the Collector may require to be furnished with an abstract of the instrument, and also with such affidavit or other evidence as he may deem necessary to prove that all the facts and circumstances affecting the chargeability of the instrument with duty, or the amount of the duty with which it is chargeable, are fully and truly set forth therein, and may refuse to proceed upon any such application until such abstract and evidence have been furnished accordingly:

Provided that—

(a) no evidence furnished in pursuance of this section shall be used against any person in any civil proceeding, except in an enquiry as to the duty with which the instrument to which it relates is chargeable; and

(b) every person by whom any such evidence is furnished shall, on payment of the full duty with which the instrument to which it relates is chargeable, be relieved from any penalty he may have incurred under this Act by reason of the omission to state truly in such instrument any of the facts or circumstances aforesaid.

[S. 31, Act I of 1879.]

Certificate by Collector.

32. (1) When an instrument brought to the Collector under section 31 is, in his opinion, one of a description chargeable with duty, and

(a) the Collector determines that it is already fully stamped, or

(b) the duty determined by the Collector under section 31 or such a sum as with the duty already paid in respect of the instrument, is equal to the duty so determined, has been paid, the Collector shall certify by endorsement on such instrument that the full duty (stating the amount) with which it is chargeable has been paid.

(2) When such instrument is, in his opinion, not chargeable with duty, the Collector shall certify in manner aforesaid that such instrument is not so chargeable.

(3) Any instrument upon which an endorsement has been made under this section shall be deemed to be duly stamped, or not chargeable with duty, as the case may be; and, if chargeable with duty, shall be receivable in evidence or otherwise, and may be acted upon and registered as if it had been originally duly stamped:

Provided that nothing in this section shall authorize the Collector to endorse—

(a) any instrument executed or first executed in British India and brought to him after the expiration of one month from the date of its execution, or first execution, as the case may be;

(b) any instrument executed or first executed out of British India and brought to him after the expiration of three months after it has been first received in British India; or

(c) any instrument chargeable with the duty of one anna, or any bill of exchange or promissory note, when brought to him after the drawing or execution thereof on paper not duly stamped.

[Old s. 32—omitted as now unnecessary.]

CHAPTER IV.

INSTRUMENTS NOT DULY STAMPED.

[S. 33, Act I of 1879.]

Examination and impounding of instruments.

33. (1) Every person having by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence, and every person in charge of a public office, except an officer of police, before whom any instrument, chargeable, in his opinion, with duty, is produced or comes, in the performance of his functions, shall, if it appears to him that such instrument is not duly stamped, impound the same.

(2) For that purpose every such person shall examine every instrument so chargeable and so produced or coming before him, in order to ascertain whether it is stamped with a stamp of the value and description required by the law in force in British India when such instrument was executed or first executed:

Provided that—

(a) nothing herein contained shall be deemed to require any Magistrate or Judge of a Criminal Court to examine or impound, if he does not think fit so to do, any instrument coming before him in the course of any proceeding other than a proceeding under Chapter XII or Chapter XXXVI of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898:

The Indian Stamp Bill.

(Chapter IV.—Instruments not duly stamped.—Sections 34-40.)

(b) in the case of a Judge of a High Court, the duty of examining and impounding any instrument under this section may be delegated to such officer as the Court appoints in this behalf.

(3) For the purposes of this section, in cases of doubt,—

(a) the Governor General in Council may determine what offices shall be deemed to be public offices, and

(b) the Local Government may determine who shall be deemed to be persons in charge of public offices.

[New.]

Special provision as to unstamped receipts.

34. Where any receipt chargeable with a duty of one anna is tendered to or produced before any officer unstamped in the course of the audit of any public account, such officer may in his discretion instead of impounding the instrument, require a duly stamped receipt to be substituted therefor.

[S. 34, Act I of 1879.]

Instruments not duly stamped inadmissible in evidence, etc.

35. No instrument chargeable with duty shall be admitted in evidence for any purpose by any person having by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence, or shall be acted upon, registered or authenticated by any such person or by any public officer, unless such instrument is duly stamped :

Provided that—

Instruments admissible on payment of duty and penalty ;

(a) any such instrument not being an instrument chargeable with a duty of one anna only, or a bill of exchange or promissory note, shall, subject to all just exceptions, be admitted in evidence on payment of the duty with which the same is chargeable or (in the case of an instrument insufficiently stamped) of the amount required to make up such duty, together with a penalty of five rupees, or, when ten times the amount of the proper duty or deficient portion thereof exceeds five rupees, of a sum equal to ten times such duty or portion ;

(b) where any person from whom a stamped receipt could have been demanded, has given an unstamped receipt and such receipt, if stamped, would be admissible in evidence against him, then such receipt shall be admitted in evidence against him on payment of a penalty of one rupee by the person tendering it ;

(c) where a contract or agreement of any kind is effected by correspondence consisting of two or more letters, and any one of the letters bears the proper stamp, the contracts or agreement shall be deemed to be duly stamped ;

and in certain criminal proceedings ;

(d) nothing herein contained shall prevent the admission of any instrument in evidence in any proceeding in a Criminal Court other than a proceeding under Chapter XII or Chapter XXXVI of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 ; and when executed by or on behalf of Government.

(e) nothing herein contained shall prevent the admission of any instrument in any Court when such instrument has been executed by or on behalf of the Government, or where it bears the certificate of the Collector as provided by section 32 or any other provision of this Act.

Where admission of instrument not to be questioned.

[Clause (2) of proviso to s. 34, Act I of 1879.]

36. Where an instrument has been admitted in evidence, such admission shall not, except as provided in section 61, be called in question at any stage of the same suit or proceeding on the ground that the instrument has not been duly stamped.

[New.]

Admission of improperly stamped instruments.

37. The Governor General in Council may make rules providing that, where an instrument bears a stamp of sufficient amount but of improper description, it may, on payment of the duty with which the same is chargeable, be certified to be duly stamped, and any instrument so certified shall then be deemed to have been duly stamped as from the date of its execution.

[S. 35 Act I of 1879.]

Instruments impounded how dealt with.

38. (1) When the person impounding an instrument under section 33 has by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence and admits such instrument in evidence upon payment of a penalty as provided by section 35 or of duty as provided by section 37, he shall send to the Collector an authenticated copy of such instrument, together with a certificate in writing, stating the amount of the duty and penalty levied in respect thereof, and shall send such amount to the Collector, or to such person as he may appoint in this behalf.

[S. 36, Act I 1879.]

(2) In every other case, the person so impounding an instrument shall send it in original to the Collector.

Collector's power to refund penalty paid under section 38, sub-section (1).

39. (1) When a copy of an instrument is sent to a Collector under section 38, sub-section (1), he may, if he thinks fit, upon application made to him in this behalf or, if no application is made, with the consent of the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority, refund any portion of the penalty in excess of five rupees which has been paid in respect of such instrument ;

(2) when such instrument has been impounded only because it has been written in contravention of section 13 or section 14, he may refund the whole penalty so paid.

[S. 37, Act I of 1879.]

Collector's power to stamp instruments impounded.

40. (1) When the Collector impounds any instrument under section 33, or receives any instrument sent to him under section 38, sub-section (2), (not being an instrument chargeable with a duty of one anna only or a bill of exchange or promissory note) he shall adopt the following procedure:—

(a) If he is of opinion that such instrument is duly stamped, or is not chargeable with duty, he shall certify by endorsement thereon that it is duly stamped, or that it is not so chargeable as the case may be.

(b) If the Collector is of opinion that such instrument is chargeable with duty and is not duly stamped, he shall require the payment of the proper duty or the amount required to make up the same, together with a penalty of five rupees; or, if he thinks fit, ten times the amount of the proper duty or of the deficient portion thereof, whether such amount exceeds or falls short of five rupees:

Provided that, when such instrument has been impounded only because it has been written in contravention of section 13 or section 14, the Collector may, if he thinks fit, remit the whole penalty prescribed by this section.

(2) Every certificate under clause (a) of sub-section (1) shall, for the purposes of this Act, be conclusive evidence of the matters stated therein.

(3) Where an instrument has been sent to the Collector under section 38, sub-section (2), the Collector shall, when he has dealt with it as provided by this section, return it to the impounding officer.

["Which is after "and" omitted.] [S. 38, Act I of 1879.]

Instruments unduly stamped by accident.

41. If any instrument chargeable with duty and not duly stamped (not being an instrument chargeable with a duty of one anna only, or a bill of exchange or promissory note) is produced by any person of his own motion before the Collector within one year from the date of its execution or first execution, and such person brings to the notice of the Collector the fact that such instrument is not duly stamped, and offers to pay to the Collector the amount of the proper duty, or the amount required to make up the same, and the Collector is satisfied that the omission to duly stamp such instrument has been occasioned by accident, mistake or urgent necessity, he may, instead of proceeding under sections 38 and 40, receive such amount and proceed as next hereinafter prescribed.

[S 39, Act I of 1879.]

Endorsement of instruments on which duty has been paid under sections 35, 40 or 41.

42. (1) When the duty and penalty (if any) leviable in respect of any instrument have been paid under section 35, section 40 or section 41, the person admitting such instrument in evidence, or the Collector (as the case may be) shall certify by endorsement thereon that the proper duty or (as the case may be) the proper duty and penalty (stating the amount of each) have been levied in respect thereof, and the name and residence of the person paying them.

(2) Every instrument so endorsed shall thereupon be admissible in evidence, and may be registered and acted upon and authenticated as if it had been duly stamped, and shall be delivered on his application in this behalf to the person from whose possession it came into the hands of the officer impounding it, or as such person may direct:

Provided that—

(a) no instrument which has been admitted in evidence upon payment of duty and a penalty under section 35 shall be so delivered before the expiration of one month from the date of such impounding, or if the Collector has certified that its further detention is necessary, and has not cancelled such certificate:

(b) nothing in this section shall affect the Code of Civil Procedure, section 144, clause 3.

Prosecution for offence against Stamp-law.

43. The taking of proceedings or the payment of a penalty under this chapter in respect of any instrument shall not bar the prosecution of any person who appears to have committed an offence against the Stamp-law in respect of such instrument: [S. 40, Act I of 1879.] XIV of 1882.

Provided that no such prosecution shall be instituted in the case of any instrument in respect of which such a penalty has been paid, unless it appears to the Collector that the offence was committed with an intention of evading payment of the proper duty.

Persons paying duty or penalty may recover same in certain cases.

44. (1) When any duty or penalty has been paid under section 35, section 37, section 40 or section 41, by any person in respect of an instrument, and, by agreement, or under the provisions of section 29 or any other enactment in force at the time such instrument was executed, some other person was bound to bear the expense of providing the proper stamp for such instrument, the first-mentioned person shall be entitled to recover from such other person the amount of the duty or penalty so paid. [S. 41, Act I of 1879.]

(2) For the purpose of such recovery any certificate granted in respect of such instrument under this Act shall be conclusive evidence of the matters therein certified.

(3) Such amount may, if the Court thinks fit, be included in any order as to costs in any suit or proceeding to which such persons are parties and in which such instrument has been tendered in evidence. If the Court does not include the amount in such order, no further proceedings for the recovery of the amount shall be maintainable.

Power to Revenue-authority to refund penalty or excess duty in certain cases.

45. (1) Where any penalty is paid under section 35 or section 40, the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority may, upon application in writing made within one year from the date of the payment, refund such penalty wholly or in part.

(2) Where in the opinion of the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority stamp-duty in excess of that which is legally chargeable has been charged and paid under section 35 or section 40, such authority may, upon application in writing made within three months of the order charging the same, refund the excess.

[S. 43, Act I of 1879.]

Non-liability for loss of instruments sent under section 38.

46. (1) If any instrument sent to a Collector under section 38, sub-section (2), be lost, destroyed or damaged during transmission, the person sending the same shall not be liable for such loss, destruction or damage.

Copy may be made of instruments so sent.

(2) When any instrument is about to be so sent, the person from whose possession it came into the hands of the person impounding the same may require a copy thereof to be made at the expense of such first-mentioned person and authenticated by the person impounding such instrument.

[S. 44, Act I of 1879.] ["Or any cheque" after "anna" omitted.]

Power of payer to stamp bills, promissory notes and cheques received by him unstamped.

47. When any bill of exchange, promissory note or cheque chargeable with the duty of one anna, is presented for payment unstamped, the person to whom it is so presented may affix thereto the necessary adhesive stamp, and, upon cancelling the same in manner hereinbefore provided, may pay the sum payable upon such bill, note or cheque, and may charge the duty against the person who ought to have paid the same, or deduct it from the sum payable as aforesaid, and such bill, note or cheque shall, so far as respects the duty, be deemed good and valid:

[New.]

Provided that nothing herein contain shall relieve any person from any penalty or proceeding to which he may be liable in relation to such bill, note or cheque.

Recovery of duties and penalties.

48. All duties, penalties and other sums required to be paid under this Chapter may be recovered by the Collector by distress and sale of the moveable property of the person from whom the same are due or by any other process for the time being in force for the recovery of arrears of land revenue.

CHAPTER V.

ALLOWANCES FOR STAMPS IN CERTAIN CASES.

Allowance for spoiled stamps.

49. Subject to such rules as may be made by the Governor General in Council as to the evidence to be required, or the enquiry to be made, the Collector may, on application made within the period prescribed in section 50, and if he is satisfied as to the facts, make allowance for impressed stamps spoiled in the cases hereinafter mentioned, namely:— [S. 51, Act I of 1879.]

(a) the stamp on any paper inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled, obliterated or by error in writing or any other means rendered unfit for the purpose intended before any instrument written thereon is executed by any person:

(b) the stamp on any document which is written out wholly or in part, but which is not signed or executed by any party thereto:

(c) in the case of bills of exchange, cheques or promissory notes—

(1) the stamp on any bill of exchange or cheque signed by or on behalf of the drawer which has not been accepted or made use of in any manner whatever or delivered out of his hands for any purpose other than by way of tender for acceptance and provided that the paper on which any such stamp is impressed does not bear any signature intended as or for the acceptance of any bill of exchange or cheque to be afterwards written thereon:

(2) the stamp on any promissory note signed by or in behalf of the maker which has not been made use of in any manner whatever or delivered out of his hands: [Cl. (5), s. 9, 54 & 55 Vict., c. 38.]

(3) the stamp used or intended to be used for any bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note signed by, or on behalf of, the drawer thereof, but which from any omission or error has been spoiled or rendered useless, although the same, being a bill of exchange or cheque, may have been presented, for acceptance or accepted or endorsed, or, being a promissory note, may have been delivered to the payee: provided that another completed and duly stamped bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note is produced identical in every particular, except in the correction of such omission or error as aforesaid, with the spoiled bill, cheque or note: [Cl. (c), s. 51, Act I of 1879.]

(d) the stamp used for an instrument executed by any party thereto which— [Cl. (a), s. 51, Act I of 1879.]

(1) has been afterwards found to be absolutely void in law from the beginning: ["By a competent Court" after "found" omitted.]

V F

The Indian Stamp Bill.

(Chapter V.—Allowances for Stamps in certain cases.—Sections 50-53.)

(2) has been afterwards found unfit, by reason of any error or mistake therein for the purpose originally intended:

(3) by reason of the death of any person, by whom it is necessary that it should be executed, without having executed the same, or of the refusal of any such person to execute the same, cannot be completed so as to effect the intended transaction in the form proposed:

[Cf. italicized words in cl. 5 below omitted here.]

(4) for want of the execution thereof by some material party, and his inability or refusal to sign the same, is in fact incomplete and insufficient for the purpose for which it was intended:

(5) by reason of the refusal of any person to act under the same, or to advance any money intended to be thereby secured, or by the refusal or non-acceptance of any office thereby granted, totally fails of the intended purpose:

[Italicized words from Cl. (d) (3), s. 51, Act I of 1879.]

(6) becomes useless in consequence of the transaction intended to be thereby effected being effected by some other instrument between the same parties and bearing a stamp of not less value:

(7) is deficient in value and the transaction intended to be thereby effected has been effected by some other instrument between the same parties and bearing a stamp of not less value:

(8) is inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled, and in lieu whereof another instrument made between the same parties and for the same purpose is executed and duly stamped:

[Cf. 54 & 58, Vict., C. 3, s. 9, proviso (b) to s. 51, Act I of 1879.]

Provided that in the case of an executed instrument, no legal proceeding has been commenced in which the instrument could or would have been given or offered in evidence and that the instrument is given up to be cancelled.

EXPLANATION.—The certificate by the Collector under section 32 that the full duty with which an instrument is chargeable has been paid is an impressed stamp within the meaning of this section.

[Cf. proviso (b) to s. 1, Act I of 1879.]

50. The application for relief under section 49 must be made within the following periods, that is to say—

When application for relief must be made.

(1) in the cases mentioned in clause (d) (5) within two months of the date of the instrument,

(2) in the case of a stamped paper on which no instrument has been executed by any of the parties thereto within six months after the stamp has been spoiled:

(3) in the case of a stamped paper in which an instrument has been executed by any of the parties thereto within six months after the date of the instrument, or, if it is not dated, within six months after the execution thereof by the person by whom it was first or alone executed.

Provided that—

(a) when the spoiled instrument has been for sufficient reasons sent out of British India, the application may be made within six months after it has been received back in British India:

(b) when from unavoidable circumstances any instrument for which another instrument has been substituted cannot be given up to be cancelled within the aforesaid period, the application may be made within six months after the date of execution of the substituted instrument.

51. The Chief Controlling Revenue-authority may, without limit of time, make allowance for stamped papers used for printed forms of instruments by any incorporated company or other body corporate, if for any sufficient reason such forms have ceased to be required by the said company or body corporate, provided that such authority is satisfied that the duty in respect of such stamped papers has been duly paid. [New.]

Allowance in case of printed forms no longer required by Corporations.

52. (a) When any person has inadvertently used for an instrument chargeable with duty, a stamp of a description other than that prescribed for such instrument by the rules made under this Act, or a stamp of greater value than was necessary, or has inadvertently used any stamp for an instrument not chargeable with any duty, or [S. 52, Act I of 1879.]

Allowance for misused stamps.

(b) when any stamp used for an instrument has been inadvertently rendered useless under section 15, owing to such instrument having been written in contravention of the provisions of section 13, the Collector may, on application made within six months after the date of the instrument, or, if it is not dated, within six months after the execution thereof by the person by whom it was first or alone executed, and upon the instrument, if chargeable with duty, being re-stamped with the proper duty, cancel and allow as spoiled the stamp so misused or rendered useless.

53. In any case in which allowance is made for spoiled or misused stamps, the Collector may give in lieu thereof— [S. 53, Act of 1879.]

Allowance for spoiled or misused stamps how to be made.

(a) other stamps of the same description and value, or

(b) if required and he thinks fit, stamps of any other description to the same amount in value, or,

(c) at his discretion, the same value money, deducting one anna for each rupee fraction of a rupee.

[S. 54, Act I 1879.] Allowance for stamps not required for use. 54. When any person is possessed of a stamp or stamps which have not been spoiled or rendered unfit or useless for the purpose intended, but for which he has no immediate use, the Collector shall repay to such person the value of such stamp or stamps in money, deducting one anna for each rupee or portion of a rupee, upon such person delivering up the same to be cancelled, and proving to the Collector's satisfaction

(a) that such stamp or stamps were purchased by such person with a bonâ fide intention to use them, and

(b) that he has paid the full price thereof, and

(c) that they were so purchased within the period of six months next preceding the date on which they were so delivered:

Provided that where the person is a licensed vendor of stamps the Collector may, if he thinks fit, make the repayment of the sum actually paid by the vendor without any such deduction as aforesaid.

[New.] Allowance on renewal of certain debentures. 55. When any duly stamped debenture is renewed by the issue of a new debenture in the same terms, the Collector shall upon application made within one month repay to the person issuing such debenture, the value of the stamp on the original or on the new debenture whichever shall be less:

Provided that the original debenture be produced before the Collector and be cancelled by him in such manner as the Governor General in Council may direct.

EXPLANATION.—A debenture shall be deemed to be renewed in the same terms within the meaning of this section notwithstanding the following changes:—

(a) the issue of two or more debentures in place of one original debenture, the total amount secured being the same;

(b) the issue of one debenture in place of two or more original debentures, the total amount secured being the same;

(c) the substitution of the name of the holder at the time of renewal for the name of the original holder, and

(d) the alteration of the rate of interest or the dates of payment thereof.

CHAPTER VI.

REFERENCE AND REVISION.

Control of Chief Revenue-authority. 56. (1) The powers exercisable by a Collector under Chapter IV and Chapter V shall in all cases be subject to the control of the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority.

[S. 45, Act I of 1879.] Procedure where Collector feels doubt as to duty chargeable. (2) If any Collector, acting under section 31, section 40 or section 41, feels doubt as to the amount of duty with which any instrument is chargeable, he may draw up a statement of the case, and refer it with his own opinion thereon, for the decision of the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority.

(3) Such Authority shall consider the case and send a copy of its decision to the Collector, who shall proceed to assess and charge the duty (if any) in conformity with such decision.

[S. 46, Act I of 1879.] Reference by Revenue-authority to High Court. 57. (1) The Chief Controlling Revenue-authority may state any case referred to it under section 56, sub-section (2), or otherwise coming to its notice, and refer such case, with its own opinion thereon,

(a) if the case arises in the territories for the time being administered by the Governor of Fort St. George in Council or the Governor of Bombay in Council—to the High Court of Judicature at Madras or Bombay, as the case may be:

(b) if it arises in the North-Western Provinces or Oudh or in Ajmere—to the High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces:

(c) if it arises in the territories for the time being administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab or in British Baluchistan—to the Chief Court of the Punjab:

(d) if it arises in the Central Provinces—to the High Court of Judicature at Bombay: and (e) if it arises in any other part of British India—to the High Court of Judicature at Fort William.

(2) Every such case shall be decided by not less than three Judges of the High Court or Chief Court to which it is referred, and in case of difference the opinion of the majority shall prevail.

[S. 47, Act I of 1879.] Power of Court to call for further particulars. 58. If the High Court or Chief Court is not satisfied that the statements contained in the case are sufficient to enable it to determine the questions raised thereby, the Court may refer the case back to the Revenue-authority by which it was stated, to make such additions thereto or alterations therein as the Court may direct in that behalf.

[S. 48, Act I of 1879.] 59. (1) The High Court or Chief Court, upon the hearing of any such case, shall decide the questions raised thereby, and shall deliver its judgment thereon containing the grounds on which such decision is founded.

Procedure in disposing of reference.

(2) The Court shall send to the Revenue-authority by which the case was stated a copy of such judgment under the seal of the Court and the signature of the Registrar; and the Revenue-authority shall, on receiving such copy, dispose of the case conformably to such judgment.

[S. 49, Act I of 1879.] 60. (1) If any Court other than a Court mentioned in section 57 feels doubt as to the amount of duty to be paid in respect of any instrument under proviso (a) to section 35, the Judge may draw up a statement of the case and refer it, with his own opinion thereon, for the decision of the High Court or Chief Court to which, if he were the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority, he would, under section 57, refer the same.

Reference by other Courts to High Court.

(2) Such Court shall deal with the case as if it had been referred under section 57, and send a copy of its judgment under the seal of the Court and the signature of the Registrar to the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority and another like copy to the Judge making the reference, who shall, on receiving such copy, dispose of the case conformably to such judgment.

(3) References made under sub-section (1) when made by a Court subordinate to a District Court, shall be made through the District Court, and, when made by any subordinate Revenue Court, shall be made through the Court immediately superior.

[S.] 50, Act I of 1879.] 61. (1) When any Court in the exercise of its civil or revenue jurisdiction or any Criminal Court in any proceeding under Chapter XII or Chapter XXXVI of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, makes any order admitting any instrument in evidence as duly stamped or as not requiring a stamp, or upon payment of duty and a penalty under section 35, the Court to which appeals lie from, or references are made by, such first-mentioned Court may, of its own motion or on the application of the Collector, take such order into consideration.

Revision of certain decisions of Courts regarding the sufficiency of stamps.

X of 1882.

(2) If such Court, after such consideration, is of opinion that such instrument should not have been admitted in evidence without the payment of duty and penalty under section 35, or without the payment of a higher duty and penalty than those paid, it may record a declaration to that effect, and determine the amount of duty with which such instrument is chargeable, and may require any person in whose possession or power such instrument then is, to produce the same, and may impound the same when produced.

(3) When any declaration has been recorded under sub-section (2), the Court recording the same shall send a copy thereof to the Collector, and, where the instrument to which it relates has been impounded or is otherwise in the possession of such Court, shall also send him such instrument.

(4) The Collector may thereupon, notwithstanding anything contained in the order admitting such instrument in evidence, or in any certificate granted under section 42, or in section 43, prosecute any person for any offence against the Stamp-law which the Collector considers him to have committed in respect of such instrument:

Provided that—

(a) no such prosecution shall be instituted where the amount (including duty and penalty) which, according to the determination of such Court, was payable in respect of the instrument under section 35 is paid to the Collector unless he thinks that the offence was committed with an intention of evading payment of the proper duty:

(b) except for the purposes of such prosecution, no declaration made under this section shall affect the validity of any order admitting any instrument in evidence, or of any certificate granted under section 42.

CHAPTER VII.

CRIMINAL OFFENCES AND PROCEDURE.

[S. 61, Act I of 1879.]

62. (1) (a) Any person drawing, making, issuing, endorsing or transferring, or signing otherwise than as a witness, or presenting for acceptance or payment, or accepting, paying or receiving payment of, or in any manner negotiating, any bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note without the same being duly stamped,

Penalty for executing, etc., instrument not duly stamped.

(b) any person executing or signing otherwise than as a witness any other instrument chargeable with duty without the same being duly stamped, and shall for every such offence be punish*able* with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees:

Provided that, when any penalty has been paid in respect of any instrument under section 35, section 40 or section 61, the amount of such penalty shall be allowed in reduction of the fine (if any) subsequently imposed under this section in respect of the same instrument upon the person who paid such penalty.

[S. 35 (para. 2), Act VI of 1882.]

(2) If a share-warrant is issued without being duly stamped, the company issuing the same, and also every person who, at the time when it is issued, is the managing director or secretary or other principal officer of the company, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

[S. 62, Act I of 1879.]

Penalty for failure to cancel adhesive stamp.

63. Any person required by section 12 to cancel an adhesive stamp, and failing to cancel such stamp in manner prescribed by that section, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees.

[S. 63, Act I of 1879.] [" of any duty " omitted.]

Penalty for omission to comply with provisions of section 27.

64. Any person who, with intent to defraud the Government,—

(a) executes any instrument in which all the facts and circumstances required by section 27 to be set forth in such instrument are not fully and truly set forth, or,

(b) being employed or concerned in or about the preparation of any instrument, neglects or omits fully and truly to set forth therein all such facts and circumstances, or

(c) does any other act calculated to deprive the Government of any duty or penalty under this Act, shall be punish*able* with fine which may extend to five thousand rupees.

[S. 64, Act I of 1879.]

65. Any person who—

Penalty for refusal to give receipt and for devices to evade duty on receipts.

(a) being required under section 30 to give a receipt, refuses or neglects to give the same, or

(b) with intent to defraud the Government of any duty, upon a payment of money or delivery of property exceeding twenty rupees in amount or value, gives a receipt for an amount or value not exceeding twenty rupees, or separates or divides the money or property paid or delivered, shall be punish*able* with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees.

[S. 65, Act I of 1879.]

66. Every person who—

Penalty for not making out policy or making one not duly stamped.

(a) receives, or takes credit for, any premium or consideration for any contract of insurance, and does not, within one month after receiving, or taking credit for, such premium or consideration, make out and execute a duly stamped policy of such insurance, or

(b) makes, executes or delivers out any policy which is not duly stamped, or pays or allows in account, or agrees to pay or allow in account, any money upon, or in respect of, any such policy, shall be punish*able* with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

[S. 66, Act I of 1879.]

Penalty for not drawing full number of bills or marine policies purporting to be in sets.

67. Any person drawing or executing a bill of exchange or a policy of marine insurance purporting to be drawn or executed in a set of two or more, and not at the same time drawing or executing on paper duly stamped the whole number of bills or policies of which such bill or policy purports the set to consist, shall be punish*able* with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

[S. 67, Act I of 1879.]

Penalty for post-dating bills, etc.

68. (a) Whoever, with intent to defraud the Government of duty, draws, makes or issues any bill of exchange or promissory note bearing a date subsequent to that on which such bill or note is actually drawn or made, and

(b) whoever, knowing that such bill or note has been so post-dated, endorses, transfers, presents for acceptance or payment, or accepts, pays or receives payment of, such bill or note, or in any manner negotiates the same, and for other devises to defraud the revenue.

(c) whoever, with the like intent, practises or is concerned in any act, contrivance or device not specially provided for by this Act or any other law for the time being in force, shall be punish*able* with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

[S. 68, Act I of 1879]

Penalty for breach of rule relating to sale of stamps and for unauthorized sale.

69. (a) Any person appointed to sell stamps who disobeys any rule made under section 74, and

(b) any person not so appointed who sells or offers for sale any stamp (other than a one-anna adhesive stamp),

The following Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to further amend the Petroleum Act, 1886, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 21st March, 1898:—

WE, the undersigned, Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to further amend the Petroleum Act, 1886, was referred, have considered the Bill and the papers noted in the margin, and have now the honour to submit this our Report, with the Bill as amended by us annexed thereto.

From Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, No. 9042, dated 23rd November, 1897 [Paper No. 1].
From High Court, Calcutta, No. 2803, dated 2nd December, 1897 [Paper No. 2].
From Chief Commissioner, Ajmere-Merwara, No. 23-C.—690, dated 13th December, 1897 [Paper No. 3].
From Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 2043, dated 27th December, 1897 [Paper No. 4].
From Messrs. Graham & Co., Calcutta, dated 18th December, 189-, and enclosures [Papers No. 5].
From Agent to Governor General in Baluchistan, No. 8550, dated 28th December, 1897 [Paper No 6].
From Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 4175—VI-682-C., dated 28th December, 1897, and enclosures [Papers No. 7].
From Government, Burma, 147—L.-5, dated 6th January, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 8].
From Resident, Hyderabad, No. 6, dated 5th January, 1898, and enclosure [Papers No. 9].
From Government, Punjab, No. 54, dated 11th January, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 10].
From Government, Bombay, No. 312, dated 14th January, 1898 [Paper No. 11].
From Government, Madras, No. 119, dated 19th January, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 12].
From Chief Commissioner, Assam, No. 16-L. & L.—505-J., dated 14th February, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No 13].
From Government, Bengal, No. 352-Marine, dated 12th February, 1898, and enclosures [Papers No. 14].

2. We have made a verbal alteration in clause (c) of the definition of "petroleum" in accordance with a suggestion of the Bombay Government.

3. We have in clause 3 added a new sub-section (4) to section 4 of the Act so as to provide for the previous publication of notifications altering tests. This will enable any persons affected thereby to make any representations they may wish to the Government before a new or altered test is brought into operation.

4. It was suggested to us that provision should be made for the exemption of certain kinds or qualities of liquid fuel from the operation of the Act, but such a provision is unnecessary, as under section 22 of the Act the Local Government has power to do this by notification when it is satisfied that it can be done with propriety.

No. II.

A Bill to further amend the Petroleum Act, 1886.

XII of 1886. WHEREAS it is expedient to further amend the Petroleum Act, 1886; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement. 1. (1) This Act may be called the Petroleum Act, 1898; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

XII of 1886. Substitution of new definition of "petroleum" in section 3, Act XII, 1886. 2. In section 3 of the Petroleum Act, 1886, for clause (1) the following shall be substituted, namely:—

'(1) "petroleum" includes also—

(a) the liquids commonly known by the names of rock oil, Rangoon oil, Burma oil, kerosine, paraffin oil, mineral oil, petroline, gasoline, benzol, benzoline and benzine;

(b) any inflammable liquid which is made from petroleum, coal, schist, shale, peat or any other bituminous substance, or from any product of petroleum; and

(c) any liquid or viscous mixture having in its composition any of the liquids aforesaid:

but it does not include any oil ordinarily used for lubricating purposes and having its flashing point at or above two hundred degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer:'.

Addition of new sub-sections to section 4, Act XII, 1886. 3. To section 4 of the said Act the following sub-sections shall be added, namely:—

"(3) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the official Gazette, alter or add to the schedule to this Act by prescribing new or varied tests, and directions for preparing and using them; and all references in this Act to the schedule, when altered or added to, shall be construed as referring to the schedule as so altered or added to for the time being.

(4) The provisions of section 23 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, shall apply to notifications under sub-section (3) as if they were rules or orders required to be made after previous publication." X of 1897.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 21st March, 1898:—

No. 3 OF 1898.

A Bill to amend the Indian Contract Act, 1872.

IX of 1872. WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Indian Contract Act, 1872, by better defining the law relating to undue influence; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title, commencement and application.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Contract Act (1872) Amendment Act, 1898.

(2) It shall come into force on the day of 1898; and

(3) It shall apply to every contract in respect of which any suit is instituted after the commencement of this Act.

IX of 1872. Substitution of new sections for section 16, Act IX of 1872.

2. Section 16 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, is hereby repealed, and the following section is substituted therefor, namely:—

'Undue influence' defined.

"16. (1) A contract is said to be induced by 'undue influence' where the parties to the contract do not contract on a footing of equality, but one of the parties is in a position to dominate the other, and uses that position to obtain an unfair advantage over the other or to make him consent to terms to which he would not otherwise have consented.

(2) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing principle, a person is deemed to be in a position to dominate another—

(a) where he holds a real or apparent authority over the other or where there is a fiduciary relation between the parties, or

(b) where he makes a contract with a person who is naturally feeble-minded or whose mental capacity is temporarily or permanently affected by reason of age, illness, mental or bodily distress, or other special circumstances.

(3) Where a person who is in a position to dominate another enters into a contract with him, the burden of proving that such contract is fair and reasonable and was not induced by undue influence shall lie upon such person.

Illustrations.

(a) A having advanced money to his son, B, during his minority, upon B's coming of age obtains, by misuse of parental influence, a bond from B for a greater amount than the sum due in respect of the advance. A employs undue influence.

(b) A, a man enfeebled by disease or age, is induced, by B's influence over him as his medical attendant, to agree to pay B an unreasonable sum for his professional services. B employs undue influence.

(c) A, an agriculturist, borrows of B, the money-lender of his village, or of the family or community to which he belongs, a sum of money and executes a bond therefor. It appears in evidence that A was deeply involved at the time of the transaction, or that he or some of the members of his family had previously thereto had monetary dealings with B, so as to render it difficult for him to have recourse to any other money-lender or to avail himself of the open market. It lies on B to prove that the transaction was a fair and reasonable one, and was not induced by undue influence."

Amendment of section 19 of, and addition of new section to, Act IX of 1872.

3. In section 19 of the said Act the words "undue influence" are hereby repealed, and after the same section the following section is hereby inserted, namely:—

Power to Court to set aside contract induced by undue influence.

"19A. Where a contract is induced by undue influence, it may be set aside either absolutely or upon such terms and conditions as to the Court may seem just.

Illustrations.

(a) A's son has forged B's name to a promissory note. B, under threat of prosecuting A's son, obtains a bond from A for the amount of the forged note. If B sues on this bond, the Court may set the bond aside.

(b) A, a money-lender, advances Rs. 100 to B, an agriculturist, and by undue influence induces B to execute a bond for Rs. 200 with interest at 12 per cent. per month. The Court may set the bond aside, but may order B to repay the Rs. 100 with such interest as may seem just."

Amendment of section 74, Act IX of 1872.

4. (1) Section 74, paragraph one, of the said Act is hereby repealed and the following paragraph is substituted therefor, namely:—

Compensation for breach of contract where penalty stipulated for.

"74. When a contract has been broken, if a sum is named in the contract as the amount to be paid in case of such breach, or if the contract contains any other stipulation by way of penalty, the party complaining of the breach is entitled, whether or not actual damage or loss is proved to have been caused thereby, to receive from the party who has broken the contract reasonable compensation not exceeding the amount so named or the penalty stipulated for."

(2) After illustration (c) to the said section the following illustrations shall be added, namely:—

"(d) A gives B a bond for the repayment of Rs. 1,000 with interest at 12 per cent. at the end of six months, with a stipulation that in case of default interest shall be payable at the rate of 75 per cent. from date of default. This is a stipulation by way of penalty, and B is only entitled to recover from A such compensation as the Court considers reasonable.

(e) A, who owes money to B, a money-lender, undertakes to repay him by delivering to him 10 maunds of grain on a certain date and stipulates that, in the event of his not delivering the stipulated amount by the stipulated date, he shall be liable to deliver 20 maunds. This is a stipulation by way of penalty and B is only entitled to reasonable compensation in case of breach.

(f) A undertakes to repay B a sum of Rs. 1,000 by five equal monthly instalments, with a stipulation that in default of payment of any instalment the whole shall become due. This stipulation is not by way of penalty and the contract may be enforced according to its terms."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE intention of this Act is not to interfere with the freedom of contract where consent is free and parties contract on a footing of equality, but to give the Courts a wider discretion in dealing with certain inequitable contracts where at present their powers appear to be unduly limited.

Notes to Clauses.

Clause 1 (3).—As the proposed Act will not of itself invalidate any contract heretofore made but will merely confer an increased equitable jurisdiction on the Courts, it seems right that it should apply to all suits instituted after the commencement of the Act even though the contract which forms the subject of litigation was entered into before the commencement of the Act.

Clause 2.—The foundation of the existing rules as to undue influence is the fact that the parties do not contract on a footing of equality and therefore that the consent is not free. But the existing definition of "undue influence" in section 16 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, is merely an enumeration of two common classes of cases of undue influence and not a statement of the principle on which those cases depend. The object of sub-section (1) is to state the general principle which governs the law of undue influence without confining it to the cases specifically enumerated.

It is obvious that the person who is in a position to exercise undue influence over another may or may not have exercised it in fact. But it seems right that, where the parties do not contract on a footing of equality, the party who is in a position to dominate the other should be called on to show that he has not taken advantage of his position. This is the object of sub-section (3), which will enable the Court to go behind the letter of the contract and inquire into the substantial fairness of the whole transaction.

Clause 3.—Where the Court finds as a fact that undue influence has been exercised, it is necessary to give it a wide discretion to do justice between the parties. If the contract has not been performed on either side, it will be sufficient for the Court to set it aside absolutely; but, where the contract has been performed partly by either or both of the parties, it is clear that, by merely setting aside the contract, the parties cannot be restored to their original position. It is therefore necessary to arm the Court with powers to impose terms and conditions so as to do complete justice in the case. The new clause 19A which it is proposed to add to the Indian Contract Act, 1872, is intended to effect this object.

Clause 4.—Section 74 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, appears to have been intended to abolish the highly technical distinction of English law between penalty clauses and clauses stipulating for liquidated damages, but, owing to the language employed, divergent views have been taken by the Courts as to the cases covered by the section. It seems desirable that a liberal construction should be placed on the equitable powers intended to be conferred by the section and therefore the language of the section has been amplified so as to make it apply in terms to all stipulations by way of penalty, whether the penalty consists of a sum named or not.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 21st March, 1898 :—

NO. 4 OF 1898.

A Bill to make provision for certain matters connected with Insolvency.

WHEREAS doubts have arisen as to the extent of the power to make rules conferred by sections 15 and 76 of the Indian Insolvency Act, 1848, (11 & 12 Vict., c. 21.) and whereas it is expedient to remove those doubts, and to confirm certain rules which were made by the High Court of Judicature at Bombay on the thirty-first day of July, 1878; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Insolvency Rules Act, 1898; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

Extent of power to make rules under the Indian Insolvency Act, 1848.

2. The power to make rules conferred by sections 15 and 76 of the Indian Insolvency Act, 1848, (11 & 12 Vict., c. 21.) shall be deemed to include, and to have included, a power to make rules for the audit of the accounts of the official assignee, and for paying for the costs of such audit and for paying the reasonable costs and charges of the official assignee, out of the funds in the hands of the official assignee.

Confirmation of rules made on the 31st July, 1878, by the Bombay High Court.

3. The rules made, in exercise of the aforesaid power, by the High Court of Judicature at Bombay on the thirty-first day of July, 1878, are hereby confirmed.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THIS Bill is intended to remove some doubts which have from time to time arisen as to the extent of the powers of a High Court to frame rules under sections 15 and 76 of the Indian Insolvency Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict., c 21), and at the same time to validate and confirm certain rules which were made by the Bombay High Court in 1878 in pursuance of the said provisions.

The debate on the Criminal Procedure Bill was resumed this day.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that in clause 147 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, for the words "(including any right-of-way)" the words

"(including any right-of-way or other easement over the same)" be substituted. He said :—"This suggestion has been made by the Bombay Government at the motion of Mr. Justice Parsons of the Bombay High Court, who states—'I do not consider the terms of the section wide enough: frequent dangerous disputes arise about buildings and easements other than rights-of-way. I would substitute "for right-of-way," "buildings or easements over the same."

"I submit to the Council that, when a High Court Judge himself states that the law is weak and does not deal with cases which ought to be provided for under it, the Council cannot go far wrong in accepting the amendment. The experience of other Hon'ble Members will doubtless recommend the amendment to them. I think I need say no more."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I see no objection to the words proposed by my Hon'ble friend."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that in clause 162, sub-clause (1), of the Bill amended by the Select Committee, all the words after "such writing and", in line 12, be omitted, and that the words and figures "may itself examine the witness thereon, and such writing may then be used in the manner and to the extent provided in section 172 in regard to police-diaries" be inserted. He said :—"My Lord, this clause has, I believe, been very carefully and exhaustively debated by the Select Committee, and I feel that some apology may be needed, if I venture to comment on or attempt to improve their draft, or, if I may call it so, their compromise. But I hope to justify my amendment. I call the clause a compromise because it tries to reconcile two almost irreconcilable principles. One of these, accepted in English Courts and English procedure, is that police papers are absolutely privileged, that the accused is not entitled to see the brief for the Crown, that he must be judged by the evidence given in Court, and by that only, because it is given on oath and in his presence, and that he must trust to his own mother wit, or his counsel's, if he has one, to cross-examine the witnesses and get off if he can. The other principle is an Indian one, viz., that we want the Court to get at the truth, no matter whether counsel appears on either side. A criminal case in India is not, as in England, a duel between two counsel, but the Magistrate or Judge holds himself personally responsible for getting at the facts whether they are in favour or against the accused. Allied to this principle and (though it is the fashion of Native gentlemen and some High Court Judges in Bengal now-a-days to assume that every Lower Court is biassed)—they never dared insinuate such a thing thirty years ago—we want to give the accused every fair chance (as in England). We know that chicanery of every kind, lying, perjury, subornation of false evidence, bribery, permeates all our judicial proceedings in India, and we feel (I am speaking for myself, but I believe every Judge and Magistrate feels it too) that till a witness' evidence, however plausible and apparently straightforward, has been corroborated by something, it is not to be relied upon. We, therefore, in our endeavour to get at the truth, and punish the accused if he is guilty, or let him off if he is the victim of a false accusation, grasp at every scintilla of proof for or against him that we can get hold of. It is in this respect that police depositions become important.

"How came the police depositions to exist? They are meant to be a check on our police, who, though it is the fashion for the Native Press to abuse them, are themselves natives, with the like passions and attributes of other natives, and I should like to say here that there are as good men amongst them as in any department of the State. When a Native policeman goes to investigate a crime that has been reported, we make him keep a diary in which he records all his proceedings from day to day—(otherwise he might stay at home and send up perfectly fictitious accounts),—and, recorded in his diary and forming a portion of it, in some parts of India,—separately from his diary in other parts, he sends up rough statements of what the complainant and other persons who can throw light on the affair have said to him. These police papers are sometimes sent up with the charge-sheet, or chalan, to the Magistrate who first tries the case, and though this may not always be the rule, still the substance of what the witnesses are presumed to be going to say is entered in the charge-sheet. The police (at any rate outside Bengal) are usually illiterate (I find in Sind the greatest difficulty in getting intelligent men of the stamp I want, who can even write). The depositions, or notes, or memoranda of witnesses' evidence which they take, are usually of the roughest kind, recorded under circumstances of great difficulty, and are frequently not written up at all till nightfall, when the policeman (who will however always swear he wrote them up on the spot) has done his day's work. The custom is for him, after his evening meal, to sit down and write out fair, from his notes or from memory, the substance of what the various people have told him. Sometimes, of course, he writes them out in full as the witnesses make their statements (just as a Court does), but this is rare.

"Consequently these depositions can very often have very little reliance placed upon them; and it would be unfair either to convict or acquit a man upon them. They are taken in the most informal manner. Sometimes (for a consideration) they are written so as to tell in the accused's favour, sometimes in order to strengthen the case and gain, if possible, credit for the policeman, they may be improved, so as to tell against the accused. Sometimes —and I believe in by far the largest majority of cases—for the bulk of the police, as like the bulk of other natives, are simple and honest till tempted to be otherwise, and a good policeman takes pride in his profession like other people— the depositions contain, making allowance for the policeman's own illiterateness and for the exaggerations and inaccuracies and lies of the witnesses themselves, a very large substratum of truth—very often they are perfectly accurate records of what the witnesses have said.

"Now a good Magistrate or Judge always looks for any finger posts to guide him through the tangled mass of truth and lies that inaccurate-minded, inobservant and often interested witnesses tell in every case. And, of course, the statements that are first made, whether in India or elsewhere, after a crime or an alleged crime has happened, are, if reliable, the best testimony that can be got, because they are the freshest and cæteris paribus most likely to be true. So these depositions taken by the police, worthless though they very often may be, are frequently referred to by the Court for its own information to find out how the investigation grew, and as a check on what the witnesses and police say in Court. But from the Court using them for this purpose, for its own help and satisfaction only, a system has grown up for the accused or his pleader to be allowed to see them, especially if they tell in the accused's favour, till gradually, under the ægis of the High Court of Bengal principally I believe, (though I am open to correction on this point,) the rough notes made by policemen, whether good, bad or indifferent, have come to be treated as genuine evidence in every case. I will read the Council an extract from a Bengal Magistrate's report (and I desire here to say what very valuable papers on the Code have been sent in by Bengal officers, far and away the best in India) to show to what a pitch this irregular use of papers (written solely for the satisfaction of the policeman's superiors, and also to give the Court a clue in advance of the case) has been allowed to grow in Bengal. This officer approves of the clause as in the original Bill :—

'If it were a case of debarring the accused from the advantage to be derived from the statements of the prosecution witnesses, recorded by a competent and reliable officer immediately after the occurrence, there might be more to be said against the amendment. But statements of witnesses as recorded by the police are anything but reliable, as any one who has witnessed a police-enquiry is well aware. The police-officer usually stands in the middle of a circle, all talking at once and prompting one another; he has no system in asking questions and no compulsion to record the answers as given, or to see that the answers are fully given. With diaries as at present used it practically amounts to this, that the accused is tried on the evidence as recorded by the police, as, if it can be shown that he has said more in Court than contained in the police version in the diary, the Appellate Court will seldom travel beyond the latter. I recollect a riot case of my own where the police reached the spot about 9 P.M. and recorded by the light of a lantern what was supposed to be the full statement of four men, all badly wounded, lying on the roadside near the scene of occurrence. What the men were in a position to state, or what detail it was probable that the police would enquire into under the circumstances can be imagined. Yet on appeal the prosecution was held strictly to the limits of what appeared in the diary entry then made. This misuse of diaries will always be the possible consequence of the law as it stands at present. It is true that Native witnesses are liable to add to cases between their institution and hearing in Court, but the remedy is rather in insisting on prompt and speedy enquiries. It will always be open to the Court, moreover, to examine the diaries.'

"And I am indebted to my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep, who has just shown me a judgment of the Allahabad High Court, so very apposite and graphic, that I must venture to trouble the Council by reading part of that also. It is an authoritative statement of the facts and law as they exist:—

'Still more extraordinary is a permission given before the case came on for trial by which the accused were granted copies of statements recorded by the police during the investigation. Such statements are recorded by police-officers in the most haphazard manner.

'Officers conducting an investigation not unnaturally record what seems in their opinion material and, it may be, of supreme importance as the case develops. Besides that, in most cases they are not experts of what is and what is not evidence. The statements are recorded often hurriedly in the midst of a crowd and confusion, subject to frequent interruption and suggestions from bystanders. Over and above all, they cannot be in any sense termed depositions, for they are not prepared in the way of a deposition, they are not read over to, nor are they signed by, the deponents. There is no guarantee that they do not contain much more or much less than what the witness has said. The law has safeguarded the use of them, and it never can have been the intention of the Legislature that, as in this case, copies of them should have been without question and as a matter of course made over to the accused or their counsel.

'It is obvious that such statements, if used at all, should only be used after proper proof of them and of the circumstances under which they were recorded, and under the direct sanction of the presiding. Judge.'

"The Government of India therefore, I understand, resolved in the first instance to stand upon a judgment of that very sound, strong and able Chief Justice, Sir John Edge, whose departure is a grievous loss to India, viz., that statements of the police are to be considered as part of the police-diary, i.e., open to the Court to see, but to no one else, unless used to contradict the police-officer only, when an extract can be shown to the accused. The Select Committee, however, no doubt from the desire to be fair to the accused, have thought that the depositions (whether forming part of or separate from the diary) should be open to the accused or his pleader if he likes. They are at the same time obliged to recognize this,—that however fair to the accused this may be, it is not fair to the witness, as he is not bound by anything a police-officer chooses to write down and say he said, and that it is not fair to the Crown, which (as representing society at large) is interested in the conviction of true criminals, and does not want its brief used by the opposite side. They therefore have agreed, if I understand the amended Bill rightly, that, to save the witness, he shall not be held responsible for anything the policeman says he has deposed to,—and even though the accused shall have the right to call for all the police-depositions, he shall not use them except for impeaching the credit of the witnesses,—and to save the Crown its brief is not to be used against it, and the police-depositions are not to be used as evidence in the case. But the Council will at once see what an immense advance this is upon the present law as laid down by Sir John Edge. They give the accused the absolute right to call for the deposition of each witness that may have been recorded by the police, the moment he enters the box. Now this is merely legalising the irregular practice of Bengal, and it seems to me wrong in several respects. The brief for the Crown is put into the hands of the adversary—that is the first thing—and the pleader can ask for it and must get it, and whether he uses it or not to impeach the witnesses' credit or not, he has got information he has no right to (unless used against his client), even if it may not be used technically as evidence. And in regard to that particular safeguard I don't see how the Court is to get the police-depositions out of its head, especially if the witnesses' statements, as recorded at one time by the police and the next time in Court, are divergent. It will begin to say 'I believe or disbelieve witness A because the two statements made by B, who was with him, given to the police and in Court, agree or disagree.' In other words, it will, it must, use the police-statements as evidence to a certain extent. Courts may be trained in course of time no doubt to the very restricted use of the depositions contemplated, but think of our thousands of third class Magistrates—how are they to grasp such a refinement? And look on the effects of the measure. If a Court does in ever so small a degree use the statements as evidence, the High Court will instantly quash the proceedings, or the Appellate Court will let a guilty man off because the statements have been used improperly. Think of all the trouble and miscarriage of justice this will cause. Another result will be that the police-authorities will simply tell the police to make the depositions as short and with as little detail in them as possible. Now this will operate to deprive the Courts of what, if I have made myself understood, is really often most helpful to them. It deprives them of materials to get at the truth. I should like to read to Council what a District Judge in Bengal says, who seems a very fair-minded gentleman indeed :

'It may perhaps be desirable to make statements recorded by a police officer part of the diary, and therefore not open to inspection by the accused or his agents. At the same time I cannot help saying that reference to statements made by witnesses before the police often prevents most serious miscarriage of justice. On the other hand, I have met with cases in which the police had apparently deliberately misrecorded statements made to them by witnesses, and subsequently informed the accused or his friends of having done so, thus enabling them to avail themselves of the police officer's misconduct for the purpose of cross-examination. In such cases it is frequently found that the accused or his agents are in possession of copies of the police-diary, which have been given to them for the purpose above mentioned, doubtless for a handsome consideration.

'All cases in which such copies are found with the defence require most careful attention, and I invariably take serious notice when I find cross-examination being conducted with the help of them.

'The Courts, the inferior ones more especially, do not refer to police-diaries sufficiently often. The result of referring to them is frequently to prevent miscarriage of justice, and I would suggest that if it is intended to deprive the accused or his agents of the right to inspect statements recorded by the police, provision should be made in clause 172 (2) declaring that upon application being made to a Court for that purpose the Court should ordinarily send for the police-diaries of a case under enquiry or trial in such Court and use them to aid it in such enquiry or trial, and that in case of refusing to do so, a Court shall record its reasons for such refusal. I would also suggest that clause 172 (2) should make provision for the Court using a diary, not only for the purpose of contradicting the police-officer who made it, but also for that of contradicting a witness by asking him whether he made any particular statement before the police contradictory of, or inconsistent with, statements made in Court, or by calling the police-officer before whom the statement was made, it being clearly laid down of course that this is to be done on behalf of an accused only, and not for the purpose of making evidence against him. It is very important to take steps to prevent police-papers from being changed or tampered with after they have been submitted to the office of the District Superintendent of Police.'

"The real difficulty which I see, in the clause as it stands, comes, I am sorry to say, from our old friend's 'may' and 'shall,' which the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers could not define the meaning of last year in the General Clauses Act.

"On the application of the accused the Court shall refer to such writing, and may then direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof". The second 'may' means 'shall.' If the Hon'ble Legal Member would allow me to insert the words 'if it thinks fit' after 'may,' that would be a solution of the question. That would leave the Court, as the original Bill intended it should, and as the present law enacts (according to Sir John Edge's judgment, which I think perfectly right), to use depositions at its discretion. Then you would get proper and full depositions from the police, not abbreviated and scamped ones.

"Failing the words 'if it thinks fit,' the effect which I anticipate from my amendment is this: The accused can require the Court to call for the statements, and the Court may, i.e., shall, examine the witness thereon. But, till the Court uses a deposition for contradicting a witness, the accused cannot see it or get a copy.

"Now, how would my amendment work? In cases, like those which the District Judge refers to, where the police-depositions have been fudged beforehand, a wary Sessions-Judge, alive to the possibility of such a conspiracy, will put such depositions on one side. He will examine on the depositions but not impeach the witnesses' credit, and dispose of the case, as they do in England, on the evidence given in the Court, without using the fudged depositions at all, or letting the accused use them. On the other hand, if, as often happens, a witness has been got at by the accused's friends and he retracts what he said before, the police can be cross-examined about it by the Court, and in that case it is fair enough to give the accused's pleader a copy.

"To sum up. According to the Select Committee, the accused can get a copy of every police-deposition—you throw over Sir John Edge's judgment altogether—you place the brief for the Crown into the hands of the accused, you encourage the police either to make fudged depositions for the benefit of the accused, or to make such short ones as will deprive the Court of valuable materials for getting at the truth, and you hamper yourselves in getting guilty parties punished. According to my amendment, you leave it to the Court to judge whether the depositions should be put in or not, and the Court can use its own judgment as to how to examine on them or not.

"Personally, if it were a choice of evils, I think it would be fairest to the Crown and witnesses, and the police and even the accused, to keep these depositions out of Court altogether. I include the accused, because frequently a witness is bribed to contradict what he said to the police and contradicts the evidence of witnesses for the Crown, and by keeping the police-depositions out, such a witness cannot be contradicted, and the accused gains. But you cannot altogether exclude these statements in India: you must not stint your Courts of an atom of material from which they can elicit even one grain of truth. What then is the middle course? I say, let each Court decide for itself in each case. Let it see the brief for the Crown and judge for itself whether to use it or not and whether to give it to the accused or not. You can surely trust your Courts—in fact you must trust them—to be fair. What use are they otherwise? Any other policy simply ignores the whole system on which your administration is built.

"Pleaders no doubt in Bengal will dislike my amendments. They are far more interested in defending than in prosecuting criminal cases, so their opinion on a point of the kind is not disinterested, and deserves, I submit, but little weight. I am bound to say there is one point in the clause as it stands which I have not alluded to and which I dislike very much, that is, the power you put into the hands of pleaders to order the Court to produce the police-record, whether the Court likes it or not, and thinks it desirable or not. Of course, the parties always have a right to copies of the Court's own proceedings, but these are not Courts' proceedings. You will be doing what most of your Courts will dislike extremely and consider a grave mistake, and it will lead to many criminals escaping justice. You practically enlarge the record, and the more you do that the more tampering with it there will be.

"If the Hon'ble Legal Member will accept 'if the Court thinks fit,' I will withdraw the amendment. Otherwise, subject to any correction of my reading of the law as it stands, or as I think it ought to be, which Hon'ble Members who are better interpreters of the law than I can pretend to be may be able to point out, I think it right to press it. It is long since I tried a case myself and my legal knowledge is rusty. It may easily be that I am really tumbling out of the frying-pan into the fire, owing to my having overlooked some point or section in the Evidence or other Act. But I venture to think that the question is of sufficient importance to be thoroughly thought out and discussed before the Bill is passed. It is for that reason only that I have ventured to trouble the Council with my views at such length."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"This certainly is an amendment which I am very glad to have discussed in Council. The question was discussed at great length in the Select Committee, and with considerable difficulty we arrived at what we thought would be a fair rule. But I am glad that the whole matter should be considered and discussed by the Council at large. I should like to call the attention to some of the points involved in the case, and I am very glad that I have the assistance here of my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans, who has practical experience of the Courts from the point of view of the Advocate; and we have others here who can speak from the point of view of the Judge; we want both sides to be represented in a case of this kind. Now this preliminary point I wish to refer to. As we drafted the proviso it runs :—

'When any witness is called for the prosecution whose statement has been taken down in writing as aforesaid, the Court shall, on the request of the accused, refer to such writing, and may then direct that the accused be furnished with a copy thereof; and such statement may be used to impeach the credit of such witness in manner provided by the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.'

"My Hon'ble friend Mr. James says that we have not said what we have said, but that we have said that the Courts shall refer to the document and shall give a copy. It seems to me that the words are as clear as they can be, and that when you put 'shall' and 'may' in juxtaposition, no human being can mistake their meaning. However, my friend Mr. James says we have not made our meaning clear. I do not know in what clearer form we can put it than by saying that the Court may do one thing and shall do another. I should like to know how it strikes my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans. At home no difficulty can arise if you put in juxtaposition shall and may, but as I have said the rules at home observed in construction are not always followed here, and there may be difficulties here which do not arise at home.

"Now, as to the merits of the case, I should like first to point out that no question of evidence arises. It is a question of discovery. When a witness is called you are always entitled to impeach the credit of that witness by showing that on a previous occasion the witness made a statement inconsistent with what he is now saying in the witness-box. That is English law, and I believe it to be Indian law also. There is no question about that, but the point is this. In order to show that the witness on a previous occasion made a statement which was inconsistent with what he is saying now you must have some material to go upon, and there has been on the construction of the old section a conflict between the decisions of the Courts. In the Punjab and in the North-West it has been held that you have no right to look at statements alleged to have been made to the police for the purpose of founding your cross-examination on them. In Bengal the opposite has been held. Well, it is quite clear that the old section is ambiguous. It is quite clear that we have nothing to do with the construction put upon the old section, but that we have to lay down a rule for the future, that we are not concerned with the construction which the Courts may have felt themselves obliged to put upon the old section, but that we are only concerned to lay down for the future what seems to be a fair and proper rule. The difficulty is this, and it is a difficulty which the Committee have felt the whole way through. You have conflicting interests to deal with, and these conflicting interests cannot be entirely reconciled. First of all, you have to consider the interests of the public, which are concerned with the detection and punishment of crime, and it is an universal rule, as far as I know, that in the interests of public justice the names of people who give information to the police and the substance of their information concerning crimes are privileged from disclosure. It is quite clear that the course of justice would be paralysed if this were not so. I do not know what may be the case in India, but as regards England I will take one example. The police get most of their information as to the whereabouts of stolen property from the prostitutes with whom the thieves consort. If the names of those informers, the women who inform, were published, in the first place the women themselves would be murdered, and in the second place, that source of information would be stopped for ever, and very little stolen property would be recovered. Well, naturally in other classes of crimes the police have to employ detectives and to depend on the evidence of detectives to get the first information of the crime. If the names of the detectives and their identity were disclosed that source of information would be at an end for ever. So that it is perfectly clear that informers of that kind must be absolutely protected, but the proviso as framed by the Select Committee does not touch that class of information. The informers that I have spoken of would not be called as witnesses. We have only provided that in certain cases, and subject to the discretion of the Court, copies may be given of the supposed statements of a witness where the witness is himself called. It is clear that, when a witness himself is called, his name, identity and the substance of his information is to be given to the Court, and therefore there is no objection to any previous statement made by that witness being accessible to the accused.

"The next point we had to consider was a very difficult one. It is a point which my friend the Hon'ble Mr. James has enlarged upon and which Sir John Edge in his judgment very clearly pointed out. These statements given by witnesses to the police are not depositions. The policeman goes down to investigate a crime; people who know something about it crowd round him; he takes rough notes as best he can on the spot. He is not taking the depositions of these people; he is asking for information which will enable him to carry further his investigation into the crime which has been committed. He probably asks two or three questions, whereas when the case comes on for trial the witness will be asked two hundred questions. It is ridiculous to say that what the policeman takes down in his rough notes, and probably some other policeman fairs out, is to be treated as a deposition; and that a man's evidence is to be impeached because what the policeman, perhaps bonâ fide, perhaps carelessly, perhaps mala fide, chooses to jot down at the time, does not agree in every respect with what the witness says when he is examined at length on oath in Court. Well, we felt that difficulty, and of course we had to deal with it as best we could, but we were pressed with another point. Very often in this country, and by no means rarely at home, witnesses do make inconsistent statements at different times. They may make them from folly; they may make them from bad motives; but it is most important to the accused when he is being pressed by the evidence of a witness to be able to show that the story told by the witness in the box is not the story told by the witness when first he was asked about the affair when his memory was fresh and the facts were fresh in his recollection, and when he had no time to think out the consistent story which he afterwards tells. I can recollect several cases at home in which I have been concerned where the inconsistent statements made by witnesses were most material evidence in favour of the accused. I remember one case where a woman was undoubtedly robbed and maltreated; there was no doubt of the fact. She first accused one man, and then she accused another, and I am by no means sure that either of the two persons she accused was the real person who assaulted her. That is only a single instance. There are any number of cases of a similar nature. It is important to know what the witness said at the time when the facts were fresh in his memory, and when he had not had time to piece together a careful story. Well, the conclusion the Committee came to was this, that the right thing was that the Court should always, on the request of the accused, or his counsel, refer to any statements made to the police; that the Court should then have a discretion—but a discretion which I hope will be very freely exercised—of giving copies of these statements to the counsel for the accused to found his cross-examination on. How are those copies to be used? As I have said, they are not depositions, you have no right to assume that what the policeman chooses to take down was the full, fair, unfettered statement of the witness. The right way is to examine the witness—I am speaking of English law, and I assume the Indian law is much the same—the right way, the only way in which you could act in England, would be this. In cross-examining a witness you ask him if he did not make this or that statement to the police. If he admits it, well and good; if he denies it and you want to contradict him, then you must call the policeman. The statement itself cannot be evidence. The witness has not signed it; he has not taken his oath to it. You call the policeman; you put this statement into his hand, and you say 'look at that, did you take down this witness' statement?' And he says 'yes.' Well, then, you have the statement corroborated. The writing itself is not evidence, but it is matter by which the policeman can refresh his memory, and by which he can say, 'looking at this writing I made at the time I can now swear that the witness said so and so.' Then of course the policeman can be cross-examined. You can say to him, 'well, what question did you ask the witness? Did you ask the witness this, and did you ask him that?' In this way the policeman's evidence can be tested as to how far the statement he took down is a complete statement. This is rather an important point, and I must apologise for detaining the Council so long upon it. It is a question which has raised a good deal of feeling and on which it is important to arrive at a fair determination. Supposing a question arose in a Court of law as to what I said at the last meeting of the Council; supposing I am called as a witness in a Court of law and I am asked what I said; well I could give my account of what I said. But supposing the person who asks me, the counsel cross-examining me, was not satisfied with my statement and wished to contradict me. How could he do it? He might produce a newspaper in which there was a report of my speech. He might ask me if I accepted that as correct. But if I said it was incorrect, the newspaper itself, or even the reporter's notes, would not be evidence against me. All he could do would be to call the shorthand reporter and put the notes into his hands and say to him 'were you present in Council on this particular day? Did you take a note of what the witness said? Are you now prepared to swear that, looking at your shorthand notes, they correctly represent what Mr. Chalmers said in Council?' Well, exactly the same principle applies to these police notes. They are not documents that can have any force or effect by themselves, but they are contemporaneous writings which may be used to refresh the memory of the policeman, and from which he can swear, looking at them, that a certain conversation did take place on a certain day. Well, I think that as the Committee framed their proviso we have met as far as we can what we thought would be the justice of the case. I am not sure that my friend's amendment will give the same sense of security to accused persons. I believe in practice it would give some amount of security, but there is always an objection to turning the Court into a counsel for the accused. The Court ought to be holding the balance impartially between the two parties when there are counsel on both sides. Of course, if the accused is not represented, the Court must represent the accused. When the accused is represented, it is better that the Court should stand aside, and that witnesses should be cross-examined by the Crown and by counsel for the accused. On the whole, I think that is the most effective way of getting justice done. Of course the Court supplements cross-examination by putting itself any necessary questions. The best attitude of the Court, however, is to stand aside and let the counsel for the accused put the questions himself. I have no doubt that under what the Hon'ble Mr. James suggests the right questions would be asked, but it is more satisfactory for the accused to have those questions put by his own counsel at the time his own counsel thinks the most convenient. The only question here is, as I have said, what right of discovery will it be advisable to give? I may say at once that in framing this proviso we were influenced to a large extent by an English case. The exact matter itself hardly arises in England. It does not arise with regard to information given to the police, but it was discussed some little while ago with reference to a written statement given to the Public Prosecutor. That was a statement given by the witness himself, it was not taken down by the Public Prosecutor behind the witness' back, but it was given by the witness to the Public Prosecutor. In a subsequent civil action the Public Prosecutor was called and asked to produce that statement. The Public Prosecutor declined and the Court upheld his refusal, but it laid down a rule which we have tried substantially to reproduce here. I will just refer for a moment to the terms in which that rule is stated—

'A prosecution instituted or carried on by the Director of Public Prosecutions is a public prosecution, and the Director of Public Prosecutions, if called as a witness at the trial or during any proceedings arising out of the trial, is entitled to refuse to disclose the names of persons from whom he has received information and the nature of the information received, unless upon the trial of a prisoner the Judge is of opinion that the disclosure of the name of the informant, or of the nature of the information, is necessary or desirable in order to show the prisoner's innocence.'

"Well, that substantially is the rule which we have laid down in this proviso, but I agree that the point is an open one and eminently fitted for the consideration of the Council, and I hope they will carefully consider the arguments pro and con and come to a determination on the amendment which has been moved."

The Hon'ble MR. NICHOLSON said:—"I concur with the amendment, by which these statements will be treated after the fashion of the police-diaries in section 172, and I do so not because the papers are or should be privileged, but because they are not depositions and there is no sanction whatever for their correctness of detail. They are in general merely pencil notes or memoranda taken down by the enquiring constable in more or less loose fashion in very bad note books, and these notes, written in the third person, are then incorporated into the station house crime register and into the daily station house reports While then they are not ordinarily documents of which formal copies can or should be given or which should be demandable as of right, even before an enquiry begins, in the hope that something may be discovered in them, yet they have a certain value in discovery as pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, and they should therefore be accessible to and consulted by the Court, and where useful for materially contradicting a witness should then, and then only, be at the disposal of the accused, but not for any other purpose than material contradiction; for instance, if a witness in the course of a trial identifies an accused, while the police-notes show that this witness had told the police that he could identify no one, the statement should obviously be at the service of the accused. The Hon'ble the Le Member has pointed out that the statement by itself is useless, and that I police-officer who made it should be called to testify upon it; that I think is evidently what the Hon'ble Mr. James proposes, viz., to put the original, not a copy, into the hand of the police-constable as provided in section 172, and that the officer should be examined thereon to contradict the witness. The proviso when amended as proposed by the mover, will prevent the indiscriminate use of so-called statements made to the police, while affording the accused every reasonable facility for contradicting a lying witness. I therefore support the amendment."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS: "Two principles come into conflict—one is that Police information should be secret; the other that the truth should be got at if possible and the innocent should not be convicted. The history of the matter is somewhat peculiar. Originally, in Bengal at least, these statements taken under section 162 were kept separate and not put in the police-diaries. They could always be called for. This was found inconvenient, and an ingenious Police-officer whose name I will not mention gave directions, I believe, to the police to put them all into the diaries so that they might come under section 174 and not be accessible. It was held however that, ingenious as the Police-officer had been in putting statements taken under section 162 into the diary kept under section 172, he had not succeeded in his last object, and the High Court held that, though these statements were in the diary under section 172, they were not part of it; that they were really statements under section 162 and they could not be kept by putting them into the diary under section 172. And so the law remains, and in Bengal free use has been made of it by having the diary called for on the allegation that there has been in it a statement under section 162. This is the way it has been worked. Then there are, I quite agree, uncertainties with regard to the value of these statements. They are very often taken very roughly. There is a crowd of people, and the policeman only just wants to get some clue. The witnesses are jabbering away and telling long stories, and the policeman says 'I have no time to listen to all this nonsense' and takes down only what he thinks useful. It is very common to use this statement as though it was the whole statement the man had made. It may be all that he made because it was all the police-officer allowed him to make or it may be what the police-officer thought important only. But although there may have been some abuse of the use of these statements, there are certain cases in which they are of enormous value as in the case quoted by the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers where the man was asked on the spot, 'could you identify any of these people' and says 'no, it was too dark, I could not see any of them,' and then comes in at the trial and says 'I was able to see so and so.' Of course in these cases they are exceedingly important, and they are enormous aids to the discovery of the truth. The two conflicting principles have to be reconciled some way or other. The Court has to be entrusted in making a proper use of these things, but we must remember that in a number of these criminal cases it is very difficult to get at any truth at all, that it is unwise to throw away any possible test, anything that is recorded in any sort of way at or about the time. I must remind the Council that there are two different classes of criminal cases altogether. There is the ordinary case with no money or sid on either side. In that class of case no doubt the proceeding is, as the Hon'ble Mr. James says, that you have to have a patriarchal sort of trial and the Magistrate sits there and tries to find out the truth, and he wants to see whether the accused has committed any offence, whether there is enough evidence against him, and in this class of case he can be left to look at the police-diaries or anything else and try to get at the truth as best he can. But there is another class of case altogether. The persons accused and the persons apparently prosecuting may be only servants or chaprassies: they are people of no importance. But behind them there are two rich men, who are having out this battle with these servants as pawns, like in a game of chess. In that case there is a pleader or counsel for the prosecution and pleader or counsel for the defence. And there, as the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers says, it is for the Court to see fair play and keep its eyes open and have the materials laid before it, by these pleaders on either side who know very much more about the cases and value of any particular piece of evidence than the Judge. In these cases if cross-examination has to be done, it must be done by the pleaders and not by the Judge. The only thing the Judge can do is to avoid taking sides for either party; the evidence in this sort of case is only a very small percentage of its truth. In these cases you will understand that the accused and the prosecution generally all have copies of the statements and of any part of the police-diary they wish. They have bought it from the police, and the accused's pleader is not such a fool as to go and ask for the police-diary and the police-statements unless he has got the unauthenticated copy of it or knows what is in it, as it would not do for him to ask for it and find that the statement made by the witness was exactly the same as he made before. But it is difficult even to cross examine on this information without bringing the police who have supplied it into trouble. Then under those circumstances he asks the Court to send for the statement and after having cross-examined on it he is then at liberty to call the police-officer to prove that the witness made this statement. Here again you must remember that this is a perfect game of chess, and that the witness for the prosecution generally knows perfectly well what he is alleged to have said, and therefore directly he is examined he is quite ready with his answer. He says 'I have not the remotest idea what I said' or else he says 'I said so and so,' and adds two or three words to it according to what his instructors think is the best thing for him to say, and so the game goes on. Of course it is very difficult to get at any truth at all with the witnesses going on in this way. I remember coming across an admirable judgment given in 1825 by an old Principal Sadr Amin. He tried a civil case upon documents which gave a history of the property; it was an excellent and luminous judgment upon the past history of the property. He dealt with the witnesses in this way:

'About one hundred witnesses have been called on each sd e. But as both sides are powerful zamindars it is not difficult for them to call any number of witnesses to depose according to their wish. I need, therefore, make no further remark upon the oral evidence.'

(Quotation.)

"But in criminal cases you have nothing but oral evidence to go upon as a rule. The task of discovering the truth, the task of finding out whether it is a bogus case, or whether though there is a real case at the bottom of it, yet innocent men have been dragged in and accused with the guilty is very difficult It is therefore undoubtedly not wise to shut out any source of information. I am prepared to accept the compromise come to by the Select Committee as probably being, on the whole, about the best thing that could be done. It does, no doubt, leave discretion. The words 'shall' and 'may' when they are opposed to each other cannot be the same thing. What fetters the High Court may put upon this discretion it is impossible for me to say, but I think it is enough to leave it as it is now. I do not think that it is possible to shut these things out without causing great dissatisfaction to the public, and dissatisfaction which has good grounds for it; but on the other hand it does not do to let them have a roving Commission to look over the diaries. But the Council will remember that, if any real information is intended to be kept secret, the only way to keep it secret in India is not to put it down on paper, because, as the Council is probably well aware, no Government papers are secret in this country, and as for police-papers being secret, one has only got to pay a few rupees for them. It is true one has to pay a little higher for Government papers, but they also can be procured without any insuperable difficulty."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU:—"I do not wish to add anything to the remarks made by the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans."

The Hon'ble SIR ARTHUR TREVOR:—"I am disposed to support the amendment, for the reason that as far as I can see it would serve all the purposes which the proviso as drafted by the Select Committee is intended to serve and that it tends to emphasize a point which I think needs emphasizing in India more than is, perhaps, the case in England, that is, that it is the business of the Court to ascertain the truth and not to content itself with deciding whether the accused or the prosecution has the best of a game in which they are pitted against each other. The clue to the truth is very often to be found quite outside any evidence that either side may be able or willing to produce. This is more especially the case in big trials in which party feeling is strongly enlisted, such as those referred to by the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans."

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN:—"My Lord, I have followed the discussion upon this point with a great deal of interest, and I am bound to say that the conclusion I have come to after listening to it is very much the same as that of my friend Sir Arthur Trevor. I cannot help thinking when one comes to look at the clause of the proviso as it has been drafted here, that it is not in fact a compromise at all. I think that most of the people who know subordinate Magistrates in India will say with me that the effect of the discretion that is nominally left by the proviso will be that the discretion will not be used at all "The Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers used the expression that he hoped that that the discretion would be freely used by the Magistrates. I do not know exactly what he meant by that: whether he meant that they should not give copies of the papers or that they should freely do so."

The HON'BLE MR. CHALMERS:—"I meant that they should freely do so."

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN continued:—"That is what I understood, and I am quite certain that if the proviso was passed as it stands, the result would be that no Magistrate would ever refuse to give copies of the statements made by the police. Put yourself in the position of a Magistrate. The pleader for the accused demands copies of the statements. The Magistrate does not think it necessary, but his action would be misinterpreted if he refused to give copies of the depositions, and I am myself assured that the result of passing the proviso as it stands would be, as I have said, that the statements would be practically given in all cases. Now this has not been the practice in the greater part of India up to the present time. It has been the practice in Bengal, and we have no better means of coming to a conclusion as to whether it would be expedient or proper that copies of the statements should be freely given to the accused than in the experience of Bengal officers themselves. The Hon'ble Mr. James has quoted some of them, but I myself was particularly 'fetched' with what was said by one of the Judges in Bengal, Mr. Staley, the Judge of Hughli, who has given a very careful and well-considered opinion upon the point and whose experience ought to be of very great value to the Council in coming to a conclusion upon this matter. He says:—

'Such memoranda are often written up at the close of the day from memory or brief pencil notes. The statements recorded have not been read by, or read over to, the witnesses making them, and admitted by them to be correctly recorded. They are not, as a rule, recorded by very careful and well-trained officers, nor are they detailed. I think such memoranda are of small value. But used as they often are, to contradict or support witnesses, they have a value out of all proportion to their real worth in the eyes of juries and assessors.'

"That is his experience, and I daresay, and I think it is probable, that his experience included some of that class of cases to which the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans drew our attention. But I gathered that the conclusion the Judge of Hughli arrived at after his experience of large cases and small cases was that it was not an advantage to the administration of justice that these statements should be brought habitually to the notice of the accused and made the subject of cross-examination in Court. I cannot help myself thinking that legislation which is directed expressly for the cases of big zamindars is legislation directed for the meeting of specific cases such as the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers yesterday very rightly deprecated. But there is another reason I have in my mind for supporting the amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. James which has only been very gently hinted at by the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans, and that is this. If the police find that the depositions they take are to be habitually shown to the accused and to be habitually made a means of cross-examination upon small points of discrepancy, the police will exercise the ingenuity which the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans has described, and they will refrain from making those records which are so useful to the Court at the present time. What they will do will be to make some record which will not be disclosed to anybody and which will be used by the District Superintendent of Police for his own assistance in the conduct and investigation of cases, but it will be kept carefully from the purview of Courts, pleaders and the accused. We know how the village-bania baffles the operations of the income-tax officers by keeping private accounts separate from the public ones, and I have no doubt that if we pass a law of this kind it will result in the preparation of secret records which is very much to be deprecated. The whole of the question is as to whether the view taken by the Allahabad High Court or the view taken by the Calcutta High Court is the best in the interests of justice, and when I find from the Report of the Select Committee themselves that the Governments of Bengal, of the North-Western Provinces, Madras and Burma, and most of the authorities concerned were of the opinion that the line taken by the Allahabad High Court was the proper one to adopt, I think we should be incurring serious responsibility in overriding them and refusing to accept the amendment of Mr. James."

His Honour the LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR :—"After the Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn's speech there is very little left for me to say. There can be no doubt that the great weight of official opinion was in favour of the section as it originally went before the Select Committee, and for my own part I give my cordial support to the Hon'ble Mr. James's amendment and mainly for this reason: I do not accept the theory of a Magistrate's duties as enunciated here by one or two Hon'ble Members to-day. I deny that it is the sole duty of the Magistrate to sit as what Sir George Campbell called a petty Judge and weigh the evidence put before him. That is not the theory which lies at the bottom of our Indian magistracy. It is a Magistrate's duty in all cases, it is his business, to get at the truth, and that is his function, and he is bound to use every means in his power to get at the truth. I would be quite content therefore that these statements should be considered by him as the police-diaries have to be considered, and if he in the exercise of his discretion sees anything in them which tells in favour of the accused or in favour of the prosecution then he should have authority to make use of them. I think it is a perfectly fair adjustment to say that the Court should inspect these diaries and itself cross-examine the witnesses upon them."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES :—"I would only make one remark and that is about the words 'shall' and 'may'. As the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans has pointed out, there are absolutely two interpretations. The Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers pointed out that 'shall' and 'may' are antagonistic, and the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans will not say what a High Court may not do, but he thinks, in fact, that they will read the word 'may' as 'shall.'"

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS—"No, I did not say that the High Court would say 'may' meant 'shall'. I said they might lay down rules as to the proper principle by which the discretion given by the word 'may' should be exercised."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES—"Well, I venture to think, my Lord, that it would be better, if my amendment is less ambiguous than the Select Committee's draft to adopt it.

The Council divided:—

Ayes—10.	Noes—10.
The Hon'ble Allan Arthur.	The Hon'ble J. J. D. LaTouche.
The Hon'ble Gangadhar Rao Madhav Chitnavis.	The Hon'ble Sir G. H. P. Evans.
The Hon'ble Pandit Suraj Kaul.	The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur P. Ananda Charlu.
The Hon'ble F. A. Nicholson.	The Hon'ble Sir H. T. Prinsep.
The Hon'ble H. E. M. James.	The Hon'ble C. C. Stevens.
The Hon'ble Sir A. C. Trevor.	The Hon'ble Joy Gobind Law.
The Hon'ble Major General Sir E. H. H. Collen.	The Hon'ble Pandit Bishambar Nath.
The Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn.	The Hon'ble Rahimtula Muhammad Sayani.
The Hon'ble Sir James Westland.	The Hon'ble M. D. Chalmers.
His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor.	His Excellency the President.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT :—The division is equal. I therefore give my casting vote for the proviso as amended by the Select Committee."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR :—" May I ask that to clear up any ambiguity about the word 'may' the words 'as he may think fit' be inserted in the proviso."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" Or 'may if the Court thinks just'. It is not a question of what the Court thinks exactly fit but what the Court thinks the justice of the case requires. Those are almost the words of the English Case."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES :—" That would certainly meet my position, my Lord."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR :—" How would it do to say 'If the Court thinks it necessary for the ends of justice'?"

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—" I will accept the words that the Court shall on the request of the accused inspect such writings, and may then if the Court thinks it expedient in the interests of justice. "

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT :—" This is an amendment of which no notice has been given, but it can be put by suspending the Rules of the Council."

The amendment was then put on the motion of the Hon'ble MR. JAMES and agreed to.

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH moved that in the proviso to clause 162, sub-clause (1), of the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, the words and figures "in manner provided by the Indian Evidence Act, 1872," be omitted. He said :—" Whether it is a question of discovery or evidence, the sections 162 and 172 have formed a theme for much discussion, and are, as they stand, calculated to deprive the accused of the right, which he now possesses, of calling for and inspecting statements made previously by witnesses to Police-officers, and reduced into writing by them.

" I am aware that generally no previous statement can be used to impeach the credit of a witness subsequently examined, without proving such previous statement in manner provided by the Indian Evidence Act. But the right of an accused person to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution on their previous statements, is one to which he is in fairness entitled, and is essential in the interests of justice. The Calcutta Bar, in their note dated the 24th February last, have, I think, observed rightly that the statements under section 161 ought to be, and, as a matter of fact, are, altogether separately recorded from those under section 172; and no clue is conveyed by them, as the Select Committee would seem to imagine, as to the names of informers or detectives, or the nature of their information. They are nothing more than the statements of witnesses who depose as to their knowledge of the occurrence."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I must oppose this amendment and on very simple grounds. My hon'ble friend proposes to give these statements taken down by the police a weight in evidence which they have not got under the Evidence Act. We do not propose to amend the Evidence Act. I have already stated the reasons why no special weight should be given to these statements taken down by the police behind the witness's back, but my friend now wants to go further than the Evidence Act, and to elevate them into the position of depositions solemnly taken down by a Court of Justice and signed by the deponent."

The Hon'ble MR. LATOUCHE :—"The phrase 'in manner provided by the Indian Evidence Act, 1872,' refers to section 155 (3) of that Act and means that a previous statement must first be proved before it is used to impeach the credit of a witness. The Hon'ble Mover of the amendment wishes to dispense with the necessity of proof, and to use unproved statements to impeach credit. The Evidence Act is not being altered, and if these words be omitted it will be necessary to say 'and such statement when proved may be used to impeach the credit of such witness.'"

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :—"My Lord, I fail to understand the amendment altogether. I do not understand how any statement can be used except as provided in the Evidence Act, which is the only law in India as to evidence, and unless the Hon'ble Member is prepared to move to have the law of evidence amended in order to give additional credibility to these unverified statements, I really do not understand how they can be used, except under the Evidence Act."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU :—"As far as I understand the amendment, it seems to be this. In every criminal case besides what the complainant or his witnesses say to the police, the manner in which the record is prepared by the police is very often to be taken into account in judging of the prosecution as a whole. If it can be shown that the police-officer has been taking down the evidence of four people on a particular day and subsequently dropped those four and had four other people who he says were present at a particular offence, and by-and-by he mentions some other names, such discrepancies in the statement he has taken down would have a value in determining how far the account given by the police has been satisfactory or can be relied on. So far as the accused is concerned he is protected when he is given the right to impeach the credit of the witnesses when they are called, but apart from the purpose of impeaching the credit of the witnesses to impeach the manner in which the police themselves manipulating the case often helps the accused. For this purpose the entire record, apart from the truth or falsehood of the contents must be admissible. To secure this, as I understand, is the meaning of the amendment."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND :—"I entirely agree with my friend the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Ananda Charlu that if such or such a thing can be shown, then certain consequences should result. As I understand the amendment, the proposal is to accept the facts without their being shown at all. Under these circumstances I do not see my way to accept the amendment."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that in clause 167, sub-clause (2), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, for the words "in the whole", in lines 6 and 7, the words "any one time" be substituted. He said :—"When an accused person has been arrested, the police are not allowed to keep him in custody for more than twenty-four hours and the Magistrate can remand him while the police are completing the enquiry, the object being to enable the Magistrate to be informed of what the police are doing, and irregularities may be prevented which the unfettered discretion of the police in keeping accused persons in custody might lead to. The original Bill, as circulated to the Local Governments, proposed that when the Magistrate remands a prisoner he should have the power to remand him for fifteen days at a time. The Select Committee have altered this to fifteen days on the whole. The Bombay Government consider this restriction very undesirable. I am using their own words :—'Since important cases arise in which the police require time for investigation and for the collection of evidence, while such cases would frequently be prejudiced by any such proceedings in Court as are contemplated by section 344 of the Code.'

"In other words, if Magistrates remand an accused for fifteen days you force the Crown to bring some evidence against him after fifteen days. Now of course the Bombay Government's opinion is very much greater than mine, but one can imagine that in many important cases like murder, where dark conspiracies, networks of wickedness have to be unravelled, it may be extremely undesirable to show your hand to the public, I say public, because the public are very much interested in bringing murderers and conspirators to justice, and as the Government of India at one time (judging from the clause in the original Bill) was of the same mind as the Bombay Government, I venture to hope that on reconsideration it will still remain in the same mind and leave it to the magistracy to remand the accused for fifteen days at a time until the prosecution is ready to produce its evidence. Cases will not be very numerous, but those cases which would come under the section are probably extremely important, and, I venture to think, that the idea which the Government of India first had was the right one."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"This is no doubt a matter for the Council to determine. It is a question which was discussed carefully by the Select Committee. The Select Committee have not cut out anything that was in the Bill. We have simply added the words 'in the whole':—

"The Bill merely reproduced the provisions of the Code of 1882. In revising it at Simla we made no alteration whatever in the Code of 1882, but when we got into Select Committee we found that different interpretations had been put on the words of the Code of 1882. We had consequently to put in words to decide as to which of these conflicting interpretations of the High Courts ought to be followed. We found that the High Courts of Madras and Calcutta had both decided that the meaning of the old section was this. A Magistrate may from time to time authorise the detention of the accused for a term not exceeding fifteen days in the whole. You might remand, say for two days, two days, and two days, but the total period was not to exceed fifteen days. On the other hand, in other parts of India it had decided in this way: a Magistrate may remand the accused in police-custody from time to time for periods not exceeding fifteen days at any one time, and the point for consideration in the Select Committee was whether we should say that he was to be remanded from time to time for a term not exceeding fifteen days as a whole or whether we should say that he was to be remanded from time to time for a term not exceeding fifteen days at any one time. After considerable discussion we came to the conclusion that we had better confirm the decisions of the Madras and Calcutta High Courts, but it is a question upon which personally I can form no opinion whatever. It is a matter for people with Indian experience whether that is sufficient. Of course in England a man must be brought up before the Magistrate. The Magistrate can remand him as often as he likes, but if a man is arrested you must give some evidence to justify his arrest. The difficulty in India seems to be this that when he is brought up before the Magistrate and formal evidence is given—in England very often the only evidence given is evidence of the arrest—he cannot be remanded to police-custody, but has to go to the Magistrate's lock-up and not to the police lock-up. As to which is the most desirable course to pursue I cannot say; it is a matter for people with Indian experience."

The Hon'ble MR. NICHOLSON said:—"I oppose this amendment. Section 167 merely provides for the detention of a suspected person in custody of the police during the investigation which precedes the placing of such person before a Magistrate with some statement of the case against him, and for such purpose any Magistrate, whether he has or has not jurisdiction to try the case, may, for reasons duly recorded, authorize such preliminary detention. The Bill as amended by the Select Committee requires that such preliminary detention should not exceed fifteen days in all, at the expiry of which period the suspect must either be released or placed before the Magistrate having jurisdiction, with a report. Such report, however, need not be the final charge sheet and, in fact, is usually an occurrence report, nor is it necessary for the Magistrate to begin enquiry thereon: on the contrary, by section 344 he is expressly empowered to postpone such commencement and to give any reasonable number of remands of fifteen days at a time if reasonable cause is shown, and the explanation to section 344 expressly states, that if there is evidence creating a suspicion that the accused has committed an offence, and that further evidence may be procurable if a remand be granted, that is a 'reasonable cause' for remand. A man arrested, perhaps merely on suspicion, ought not to be detained indefinitely in custody under section 167 while the police are running round hoping to find out something: if they have found out something which casts reasonable suspicion on the person in custody, he may, under section 344, be detained for any reasonable time if there is a reasonable chance of strengthening the suspicion into proof; if they have not found out evidence which gives ground for action under the explanation to section 344, he should be released."

The Hon'ble MR. LATOUCHE:—"I also am opposed to this amendment. The Select Committee which revised the Code of 1882 has left it on record that their intention was that power under section 167 should be exercised up to a maximum of fifteen days in the whole. For other postponements section 344 provides, and a Magistrate having jurisdiction may under that section remand the accused to any custody he thinks fit."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR:—"I am quite satisfied, my Lord, with the provisions of section 344."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH moved that in clause 172, sub-clause (2), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee the words "but to aid it in such inquiry or trial" be omitted. He said:—"In moving this small amendment I may be permitted to refer to the remarks I have made in my note of dissent appended to the Report of the Select Committee. It is to be found at the bottom of page 8 of the Bill as printed here. It runs thus—

'Clause 172 (2).—In this sub-section (2) the words "but to aid it in such inquiry or trial" should be eliminated. It is not just that a document, forming a part of the "brief" for prosecution, should be permitted to be looked into by a Court conducting an enquiry or a trial, in absence, or without the knowledge, of an accused person, when he or his agent can have no access to such a document, it being a "sealed book" to him.'"

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"I must oppose this amendment on this ground. In the first place, if it were carried the section could not be construed at all. My Hon'ble friend has not moved the proper words to carry out his intention. That is one ground; another ground is this. I think this is depriving the accused of a most useful safeguard. The Court is not to use these diaries as evidence. It is to see if they will throw any light on the case which will help to attain the ends of justice. The ends to attain are two in number: one is the protection of the innocent and the other is to find out the guilty."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS:—"I think the amendment is based upon the idea that the Judge is the prosecutor, and that it is unfair to give him any advantage. I cannot accept that at all. I did suggest that where counsel is engaged on both sides the Judge should sit still and keep his eyes open, but I never suggested that he is the prosecutor. This section provides that he is to take these diaries to aid him in the enquiry; it means that he should aid himself for the purposes of justice, and there is no reason to suppose that he will use them for any other purpose."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that sub-clause (3) of clause 195 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee be omitted and that the figures 3, 4, 5, and 6 be substituted for the figures 4, 5, 6 and 7, respectively, at the commencement of the remaining sub-clauses. He said.—"The amendment I have given notice of is the omission of sub-clause (3) of clause 195. Under that section persons committed of giving false evidence in any Court cannot be prosecuted without the permission of that Court. Now apparently for no particular reason but merely with that passionate love of symmetry in code-drafting which actuates the Legislature very often, it is proposed to apply this rule to the abetment of such offences. It sounds symmetrical, but we too often find, I think, my Lord, that an amendment may go farther than we think, and if I might invite attention to a case, a very interesting one at page 122 of the Bengal papers, Your Excellency will see exactly what this amendment might lead to. The Magistrate in this instance points out that the persons who lay false cases and give false evidence in false suits in Court are the puppets, the tools, of some clever scoundrel who keeps in the dark, in the background, just as Sir Griffith Evans remarked just now that when two great zamindars go fighting they put up their servants as the nominal complainants or defendants. So in Bengal at the present moment there are persons who make it a trade to get up false cases, keeping themselves well out of the way, their names not appearing, and the Court which tries the suits knowing nothing about them. In this instance the Magistrate seems to have been energetic; to have been able to put salt on the man's tail and to get him two years' rigorous imprisonment; for the man had been instrumental in fabricating a false suit, a fact of which the Court that tried the issue was absolutely ignorant. I think, my Lord, that when a man goes into Court straight, gives his deposition, and makes claim, it is perfectly right, whether he lies much or whether he lies little, that it should rest with that Court that he should not be prosecuted without that Court's sanction; but the abettor of these offences, the man who stays behind and does not go into Court, he is like a person lurking with intention to commit any other offence; it seems to me that the Magistrate should have the power, especially as in this case, where the abettor hides in a different district and the Court knows nothing about him, to catch him and run him in. Unless any other great principle of which I am unaware is bound up in sub-clause (3), I venture to hope that the Hon'ble the Legal Member will accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I think my hon'ble friend has spoken against the whole section and has missed the point of the particular sub-section he wishes to omit. In dealing with the whole section I am bound to say that the Committee felt the greatest possible difficulty. They drafted it and redrafted it, and eventually—perhaps I may say in despair—they determined to leave it in the form in which it was in 1882. I agree that the whole section is somewhat anomalous. In ordinary cases anybody may prosecute anybody for any offence. But in the case of perjury or forgery the Indian Codes have laid down that the prosecution is not to be commenced without the sanction of the Court before which the perjury was committed, or before which it was attempted to use the forged document. They have further provided that, if the sanction of the Court is not granted, there may be an appeal. There are many advantages and many disadvantages in this, but as long as that rule is kept on the Statute-book and is to be observed I cannot see why, when you require the sanction of the Court to prosecute the principal offender, you should be allowed to prosecute the abettor without sanction. Under my hon'ble friend Mr James's amendment, anybody would be able to prosecute an abettor, but no body excepting with the leave of the Court could prosecute the principal offender. It seems to me that his amendment is illogical as well as unsymmetrical."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :—"I oppose this amendment. As pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, if you keep the section at all this is the proper corollary, because it would be absurd to say that you were not to prosecute the principal and yet might prosecute the accessory. But in order to make out the significance of it, I must draw the attention of the Council to what is the real object of the section. In this country the Criminal Courts are habitually resorted to for private purposes, simply to bring a man into trouble and screw money out of him; to make him give up a claim or something of that sort, and one of the most frequent methods is to charge a man with having perjured himself in Court by making contradictory statements. Well, if they were allowed to go freely before some Magistrate who knew nothing about that case and bring these charges, the poor man would have to be tried. It is not a question of whether he would be acquitted or not, but a trial is an enormous cost to him. It is a very heavy business for him. It is everything for the man who wants to make a move in this game to be able to start. If he can start he does not care very much what comes of it in the end. He can bring enough discredit and cause enough loss to his adversary. The consequence is that it has been thought desirable in regard to offences said to be committed in Court to make the prosecutor get the leave of the Court which tried the case. An alternative charge of perjury is made. In one place he said something happened on Monday, and then at the end of about three hours cross-examination he says it was Tuesday, and then they want to indict him on alternative charges of perjury. The Court that heard his evidence is able to form some judgment whether it was a case of wilful perjury or not, and will refuse sanction if it thinks the charge unfounded, and thus save the accused from shame and expense and the Courts from being made instruments of extortion. It is on account of that that we have section 195, and if we have section 195, it is quite evident that, if the Court is to give sanction before there can be a prosecution for the offence, it would be absolutely absurd to leave the prosecutor free to go at any man as accessory or abettor. Therefore there is no possible ground for this amendment."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP :—" I also agree with what has been said against this amendment. My hon'ble friend who has proposed this amendment relies upon a solitary case, and he cites it as an example of the incapacity of the Civil Courts, or of the insufficiency of the Civil Courts to act in this matter. Now, my Lord, I have read this case very carefully, and my curiosity was excited by the amendment. I ventured to ask my Hon'ble friend if he would tell me what was his object, and he gave me this particular case as reported by the Magistrate of Bogra, who seems to take great credit to himself for having to use an expression which I have heard to day—'run in' the malefactor. Now, if you look at the facts of this case, there is no reason that I can see why the sanction of the Civil Courts should not have been obtained. The case was this: there was a man who brought a bogus pauper suit against an alleged debtor; and there was this Mephistopheles behind him. When the case was tried by the Subordinate Judge the former plaintiff disappeared, and the Subordinate Judge was very much impressed by what had taken place. He said there had been foul play in the case. Well, then, what happened? This Mephistopheles pursued this unfortunate defendant and tried to worry him and extort money. So the Magistrate says. He failed, and the man who was so persecuted and so evilly treated never took the trouble to complain on the subject. He is said to be afraid. Well, I am very sorry that the Magistrate who is so strong did not take compassion upon him, did not take him under his wing, and assist him to get justice. Now comes in the Magistrate, and he says that he heard something about the subject and he took it upon himself to act. He never tried the Civil Court at all. He had that contempt for the Civil Courts which some Magistrates unfortunately have in the mufassal. He says 'it was no use asking the Civil Courts, I will do it myself.' He started the case without any complaint before him and succeeded in convicting the accused. We do not know what the result of the appeal was, but we must take it that justice was done. But if justice was done there was no reason why justice should not have been done if the sanction of the Civil Court had been applied for and obtained, and there is nothing to show that the Civil Court would not have given that sanction. It seems to me, therefore, that this case is not a sample case on which this sub-clause should be destroyed. It seems to me rather that the sub-clause is consistent with the whole frame of this section, and should therefore be retained, and I would especially draw attention to the next sub-clause that enables sanction to be given when an offence has been committed without even knowing the name of the person who may have committed or abetted any of the specified offences, supposing that the Court was satisfied that an offence has primâ facie been committed. The sub-clause says that the Court in giving sanction is not bound even to give the name of the accused. Therefore it seems to me there is no case made out against the law as it stands amended by sub-clause (3)."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS moved that for sub-clause (2) of clause 222 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee the following be substituted, namely:—

"When the accused is charged with criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money, it shall be sufficient to specify the gross sum in respect of which the offence is alleged to have been committed and the dates between which the offence is alleged to have been committed, without specifying particular items or exact dates, and the charge so framed shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence within the meaning of section 234:

"Provided that the time included between the first and last of such dates shall not exceed one year."

He said:—"The object of this amendment, my Lord, is to amend the clause as it stands in the Bill in these points. As it stands in the Bill it is said it shall not be necessary to specify particular items misappropriated. Misappropriation does not cover quite the whole of the offences that are covered by the two sections, of breach of trust and dishonest misappropriation, and therefore it is desirable to have the wording slightly altered for that purpose. The only important alteration is a further addition of the words that any such charge shall be deemed to be a charge of one offence within the meaning of section 234. Section 234 provides that, when a person is accused of more offences than one of the same kind committed within twelve months, he may be charged with and tried at one trial for any number of them not exceeding three. Now I must explain to the Council what the difficulty is that has to be met. Now, in England there was an offence called embezzlement, and this had technical rules of its own, and they arose from the archaic character of the old English common law, which was modified greatly to meet the exigencies of increased civilisation and the increase of property, and the various dealings with property. But it still retains many of its old characteristics, and the English Judges, in dealing with this question, are hampered with a great many old decisions with regard to larceny and embezzlement that they are bound to follow; but in the Penal Code there is nothing of the kind. Criminal breach of trust is committed when a man is entrusted with money and he deals with it wrongfully or in a manner opposed to the terms of the trust with a dishonest intention, and that it is all you have to prove. But in the English law it was different, and the reason of it was this—first of all they had larceny, and for larceny or theft it was necessary that there should be a specific thing stolen and that the taking should be wrongful. Now, when they came to deal with sums of money, of course they could not identify the actual shillings or sovereigns, but it was necessary to specify that a certain sum had been stolen, not to specify merely the number of shillings or pounds, but identify the sum in some way. Then, when they came to embezzlement, it was held that that differed from larceny in this, that the original taking was lawful. The money came lawfully into the hands of the man who afterwards converted it to his own use wrongfully and dishonestly, and that was the offence of embezzlement; and they held that he was to have the same particularity with regard to the sums embezzled, but there was very great difficulty in convicting where there was a running account, and where you could not put your hand on the specific item which had been misappropriated, although there might be no doubt of the misappropriation. Under these rulings you would have to specify the sums. There might be 500 sums, varying from one rupee up to Rs. 100. You had to take out some of these sums and say he has misappropriated these sums. In many cases, however, it is impossible to do that. A man may have your money as your agent, in a till or a bag, all mixed up together. He receives 500 different sums in the course of the month, and one day a creditor comes to him and says: 'I will put an execution in your house if you do not pay me what you owe me.' He puts his hand into the bag and pays the creditor Rs. 200 out of your money. You must say, out of all the 500 different sums he put into the bag, to which of these sums the Rs. 200 he took out was attributable. The criminal himself could not tell you that. He could only say: 'I took out Rs. 200, and God only knows — for no one else can tell you — to which of the 500 sums I had received in the course of the month it was attributable. All I know is that it came out of the bag.' Now that was one difficulty. This was got over to a certain extent by case law. Where there had been a weekly or monthly accounting, you were allowed to charge—although there might be 500 items in the weekly account—the prosecutor was allowed to charge one offence committed by failing to account at the end of the week, although he was not able to say on what day the accused had taken the money, or which particular items he had taken. But when there was no weekly accounting or anything of that sort, the difficulty still arose, and then there came this further difficulty that you were not allowed under section 234 to have more than three offences of the same kind, and so in a recent case in the 24th volume of the Calcutta Series you will find a most interesting case in which there was a charge of embezzling Rs. 9,000. It appeared from the depositions that the Rs. 9,000 must have been made up of many hundred items, and the counsel for the prisoner took objection that the charge was bad. The learned Judge could not make up his mind, so he went and consulted the Chief Justice. Then he came back and said that [he found, according to the ruling and practice of the Court, that it was impossible to have this charge, because it was uncertain which particular items the accused had embezzled. It was evident, however on the depositions that there must have been very many more than three items to make up the Rs. 9,000, and therefore the charge was not admissible. In order to meet these difficulties the section 222, as it stands in this present Bill, was introduced, and on looking at it I thought these two points could be altered for the better.

"It has been objected to this whole section, and not merely to my amendments, that we are throwing the onus upon the accused by bringing a charge against him of a deficit in his accounts. But the answer, I apprehend, is this, that the Penal Code says what the elements of the offence are, and unless you prove the dishonest intention to the satisfaction of the jury, a man cannot be convicted, and it is not right to say that you throw the onus on him by saying that there is a deficit in his accounts. It is for the jury to judge whether what you have shown amounts to a primâ facie case. I can represent it in this way: a man is my agent, he has R50,000 a month passing through his hands. He sends me his account, and apparently is 8 annas short. Well, no Judge would consider that there was any evidence of an offence there to go to the jury. But if he spent R20,000 out of R50,000 and could give no account of it, the Judge would take a very different view of it, and so would the jury."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I am quite willing to accept this amendment. The Hon'ble Member and the Select Committee have one and the same object in view. I think the amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Member carries out that view a little more effectually perhaps than the amendment suggested by the Select Committee. On that ground I have no hesitation in accepting the amendment, and I further agree with him in this that the object of our amendment is not to amend the Penal Code, but merely to get rid of a technical difficulty in framing a formal document, viz., the charge. The offence with which a man is charged is dishonestly misappropriating trust money or money otherwise entrusted to him, and the jury or the Judge who tries the case must be satisfied that he has dishonestly misappropriated the money. If the Court is satisfied on the evidence that the man has had the money entrusted to him, and has dishonestly converted it to his own use, then no technical difficulty in drawing up the charge ought to stand in the way of punishing that man. The act which is made an offence by the Indian Penal Code must be proved, but when it is proved we do not wish any technical difficulty to stand in the way of stating the offence, and this section only relates to the stating of the offence and not to the proof of it."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP :—"I fully recognise and appreciate the necessity for some legislation in regard to this matter, but I recognise also from the tone of the address to this Council of my Hon'ble friend who has proposed this amendment that he anticipates some difficulty in putting this portion of the law into operation. I also have some apprehensions, and my apprehensions are that it will operate severely against the defence of a person under trial. Now I do not wish it to be supposed that I have any particular sympathy with a man who has committed embezzlement or any other criminal offence; still I maintain that he is entitled to have a fair trial, and it seems to me that by enabling the prosecution to lump into one offence transactions that may extend over one year, and to charge him with not any specific act such as constitutes an offence, but to charge him in the lump with having failed to account for or to deilver a certain lump of money which is found deficient on the taking of his account may lead to serious complications in the criminal trial, and will call upon a Court of Session as an Accounting Office to decide many intricate issues, which may be more properly tried in a civil suit. I am not prepared to oppose this amendment, but I venture to state some of the difficulties which have occurred to me. I shall be glad to give such a new law a fair trial, and if it succeeds I shall be the first to acknowledge that my apprehensions were groundless."

The Honbl'e MR. STEVENS :—" The criticisms of the Hon'ble Member who has spoken last are of a purely negative character, and I think it would have been more satisfactory if he had favoured the Council with some suggestions as to how the difficulty in question might be got over."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :—" I beg to say one word in regard to the apprehensions of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep. He is afraid that it will bear hardly on the accused if he has a vague charge like this brought against him, but I wish to point out that if you can bring a more specific charge against him,f you can actually find out that he has embezzled a particular sum of money, you will always charge, that because it is so much easier to prove. But there are certain cases as I have said in which it is not possible to find the particular items embezzled, and it is not possible to find that there has been any accounting within the year. Then the matter stands as I said, that you have got the rupees as it were in a bag and no human being—neither the criminal himself nor anybody else—can say to which particular items what he took is attributable. Under these circumstances there should be some means of prosecuting ; there must be some charge which the Courts cannot throw out. As soon as the Magistrate or Judge finds that it ought to be it a civil case he will dismiss it and tell the prosecutor to go to a Civil Court for his remedy."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that in clause 227, sub-clause (2), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, after the word " alteration ", in line 1, the words " or addition " be inserted.

He also moved that in clause 228 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, after the word " alteration ", in lines 1 and 9, the words " or addition " be inserted.

He also moved that in clause 229 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, after the word " altered ", in line 1, the words " or added " be inserted.

He also moved that in clause 230 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, after the word " altered ", in line 2, the words " or added " be inserted.

He also moved that in clause 231 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, after the words " such alteration ", in line 6, the words " or addition " be inserted.

He said :—" These amendments are entirely verbal amendments. They are recommended by the High Court of Bombay and the Government of Bombay, and I am induced to move them to save the time of High Courts in the future from giving divergent opinions upon what otherwise is very plain English. The charge, my Lord, under certain circumstances may be altered, and the Select Committee have very properly inserted the words that the alteration may include an addition. Under the following sections when a charge has been so altered or added to certain consequences ensue. If it is unfair to the accused to go on with the trial on the new charge, the trial may be postponed, so that he is given time to prepare his defence. Throughout the sections the words 'altered' and 'alteration' are used. A plain man would think that a charge which had been added to was altered, but the High Courts will not say so. They will say—at any rate, the Bombay High Court seems to think—that the words 'add to' having been used in clause 227, that unless the corresponding words run through all the remaining sections, a Court may say that sections 228 and 229 do not apply to a charge that has been added to, and that consequently an accused may be deprived of the benefit which sections 228 and 229 undoubtedly give him. It is a purely verbal amendment. As the Government of Bombay have thought fit to recommend it, I venture to lay it before the Council for their consideration."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I see no objection to the Hon'ble Mr. James's amendment. I should have thought myself that an addition was an alteration. If I had an old house, and built a new wing to it, I think that would be an alteration. But I have no objection to adding these words. I should have thought that 'alteration' included 'addition', but as doubt is expressed about it by the Bombay High Court I see no objection to my Hon'ble friend's words."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP:—" I think it necessary in explanation of the Report of the Select Committee to remind my friend who has just spoken that several of its members were in favour of these words being added. Mr. Chalmers was against the insertion of these words as unnecessary in consequence of the new definition of 'charge'. It was the absence of such a definition which induced the Bombay High Court to put the interpretation which has been alluded to by my Hon'ble friend to the right (Mr. James). The Select Committee on this representation did not adopt what is the subject of this amendment, though some of us then thought, and still think, that the Bill in this respect was obscurely expressed, and that it would be more convenient that the words should be added to prevent any possible misunderstanding."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that to clause 247 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee the following proviso be added, namely :—

"Provided that, where the complainant is a public servant and his personal attendance is not required, the Magistrate may dispense with his attendance, and proceed with the case."

He said :—My Lord, this amendment is asked for by the Government of Bombay. It is partly to relieve public servants from unnecessary waste of time, and partly to prevent cases in which prosecutions are laid on behalf of Government —for instance in the case of offences against stamp, excise, forest and other laws—from being thrown out at once because the prosecuting official has got duties elsewhere. One of the Bombay officers whom I may quote remarked on the section :—

'When public servants are the complainants the "shall" is too strong. Take the case of a District Ábkári Inspector, or a Forest Ranger, who lays a complaint, against some one, of an ordinary ábkári or forest offence. Under section 247 that Government servant has to abandon his other and more important duties and dance attendance at the Magistrate's Court on every day on which the case may go on. The Magistrate cannot excuse his attendance after the first day, he cannot dispose of the case in his absence, the most he can do is to adjourn the case to some other day when he will be present. I know at least one Magistrate—and a First Class one too—who, if the original public servant who laid the complaint is transferred, will not accept the new incumbent as the "complainant," but demands that the transferred man shall attend, or the accused will be acquitted. This is no doubt an extreme case. But, nevertheless, the section should, I think, be so altered as to empower the Magistrate to acquit because the complainant is absent, but not to compel him to do so. And a paragraph should be added that when a public servant lays a complaint in his official capacity, his successor or locum tenens is to be considered the complainant for purposes of this section.'

" And from the Punjab comes a similar complaint :—

'There is no definition of complainant, so, read strictly, if the person who makes the complaint is absent on any day of hearing, the complaint is dismissed. It is advisable that the section be drafted in accordance with its meaning as it particularly affects cases under the Municipal Act. Such cases have to be instituted on complaint by some officer of the Municipality concerned, for instance, the Secretary. It has been held by some Courts that should the Secretary not appear, although the case is being conducted by the Municipal Pleader, the complaint must be dismissed. Though section 495 (2) allows a prosecution to be conducted by a pleader, yet section 247 insists that the complainant must be present.'

"The amendment is a small one, my Lord. It will enable the complainant having laid his complaint to go about his business, and if the Magistrate wants him the Magistrate can send for him at any time, but to make him waste his time dancing attendance on the Court is conducive neither to public convenience nor is it necessary in the interests of justice."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" This proposition seems to be a question for the Council to consider. It seems to me a reasonable proposition. It gives a Magistrate discretion where a public servant's evidence is not required to dispense with his attendance. Of course if his evidence is required the Magistrate must decide to adjourn the case or dismiss it."

The Hon'ble MR. NICHOLSON said :—" I concur with this amendment but on a ground different from those mentioned by the Hon'ble Mover of the amendment. In forest, excise, and similar cases a great number of unnecessary adjournments are given by Magistrates, with infinite annoyance and expense to parties and witnesses, simply because the complaining officer, who may have no direct knowledge of the affair, is not present, being detained by public duty elsewhere. The amendment will take away one great source of hardship to parties under prosecution for petty offences."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS :—" My Lord, I beg to support this amendment, which commends itself to me as highly desirable in the interests of the public service."

The motion was put and agreed to.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL moved that in clause 254 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, after the words "taken and made" the words "or at any previous stage of the case" be inserted. He said :—" The amendment which I propose in section 254 is most important. It is admitted on all hands that the privilege of recalling witnesses for the prosecution now freely accorded to the defence is constantly abused in the mufassal Courts, and it affords opportunities of tampering with witnesses and bringing the pressure of inconvenience to bear upon them, and that it ought to be restricted. The section as amended does something to remedy this evil, but I venture to think that a suggestion thrown out in the letter of the Bengal Government offers a further and reasonable safeguard :

" Mr. Bolton wrote :—

"I am to invite attention to the suggestion of some of the officers, to which the Lieutenant-Governor sees no objection, that the Magistrate should be authorised to frame the charge as soon as he is satisfied that a primâ facie case exists against the accused, without necessarily first completing the examination of all the witnesses for the prosecution. The remarks made by Mr. Nolan, the Commissioner of Rajshahi, on this point are here reproduced :—

'The provision made in section 257 for diminishing the abuse of the right to recall witnesses for a second cross-examination will be of special use in Bengal. If it is not too late to offer such a suggestion, I would propose a further change with the same object. At present a Magistrate cannot frame the charge until the evidence for the prosecution is complete (section 254), and the defence has a right to reserve cross-examination until the charge has been prepared. It very commonly happens—indeed, it is the rule rather than the exception—that all the witnesses for the prosecution do not attend at the first hearing, and it is then in the power of the counsel for the prisoner to send those present away subject to the obligation of attending again for the cross-examination. It is the fixed policy of many mukhtars to exercise this privilege whenever they can, with the effect of increasing expenses and giving a chance for their clients to get at the witnesses, to arrange a breakdown in cross-examination. I would give the Magistrate the power to prevent this practice by framing the charge as soon as the crime imputed has been accurately ascertained, although the evidence by which it is to be established has not been completely heard. It ordinarily happens that the imputation is patent on the face of the complaint; it has been entered in the summons or charge sheet of the police; perhaps special sanction for its entertainment has been given under the Criminal Procedure Code, sections 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, or Chapter XXXV. Except in the rarest cases, the accusation has been thoroughly ascertained at the end of the first day's hearing, and the Magistrate is then in as good a position as he will ever be to prepare the charge. Why, then, should he be precluded by law from doing so? I see no advantage in this; and the disadvantages are obvious. The witnesses are harassed by two journeys when one would suffice, expenses are accumulated, there is some risk that they may not again be forthcoming when required, they may be tampered with in the interval, and the cross-examination, when it comes at last, is always bad, the mukhtars having forgotten what was said in the examination-in-chief. If it be said that the Courts may abuse their discretion by framing the charge at too early a stage, I would reply that the tendency of Deputy Magistrates is in the opposite direction to postpone this troublesome process as long as they can.'

"There is a very good article on the subject in the Statesman newspaper for the 12th March, 1897, from which I should like to read a few extracts as showing the effect which the provisions of the Code have had even in the presidency-towns (I have ascertained that the Public Prosecutor entirely confirms the statements made):

'In 1877 the Legislature, in order to regulate the procedure and increase the jurisdiction of the Courts of the Magistrates in the presidency-towns, passed the Presidency Magistrates Act (IV of 1877). By this enactment, in cases in which a Magistrate had power to impose imprisonment for a term exceeding six months, a formal charge was necessary, and it could be drawn up as soon as the Magistrate was of opinion that a primâ facie case had been established against the accused person. It was not necessary for a Magistrate, before drawing up a charge, to examine more witnesses than were sufficient to convince him of its truth. He could then draw up the charge and call upon the accused to plead. If the accused claimed to be tried, he then had to enter upon his defence, and to commence there and then to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution.

'Now, it is right and proper to secure to the accused a full opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses for the prosecution after he has been informed of the nature of the specific charge which he is required to answer; and it will be observed that, under the Act already mentioned, this opportunity is afforded him at an early stage of the case. But the Legislature has, by the present Criminal Procedure Code, made an entire alteration in the law, and opened a door to temptation, bribery, and a host of other evils Any guilty man can, with the assistance of an unscrupulous and dishonest practitioner, not only inconvenience and harass the prosecution, which is a small matter, but what is worse, defeat the ends of justice.

'A prosecutor is, under the present law, at this disadvantage, namely that he has practically to prove his case up to the hilt, and then close it, without the possibility of knowing what defence is going to be set up When, in the course of the defence, he does discover the case set up by the accused, and wishes to rebut it by further evidence, he is told that he has already closed his case There is no provision in the present Criminal Procedure Code empowering a prosecutor to call further evidence to contradict the case set up by an accused; but by section 540 a Magistrate conducting a trial in a warrant-case has the power to call any person as a witness at any stage of the trial.

'Now let us see what advantages the foregoing procedure places in the hands of an accused person, and how he can avail himself of them if he wishes. We will assume, for the sake of argument, that he has really committed the offence charged against him. Having heard the whole of the case for the prosucution, all he has to do is to apply for an adjournment and get a day fixed for the cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution. In the meantime he can, with the aid of his friends and advisers, more especially if he has money or influence, tamper with and buy over the witnesses for the prosecution, or the most important of them, and then proceed to concoct such false defence as may seem best suited to the occasion.

* * * * * * * *

'Applications to recall witnesses are made to cause delay, harass the prosecution, and in the event of the Court refusing to comply with the request, to raise a ground of appeal

* * * * * * * *

'Now, what we maintain is this: that the abuses to which we have called attention are the result of the legislation which compels the Magistrate to frame a charge at so late a stage of the trial and puts it in the power of an accused person to reserve cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution till the close of the case for the prosecution. Cross-examination might safely be reserved in enquiries into cases exclusively triable by a High Court; but in all other cases the proper and legitimate time for cross-examination of a witness is directly after his examination-in-chief If a man is innocent, he knows from the first what his defence will be, and he cannot therefore be prejudiced by disclosing it. On the other hand, a guilty man has everything to gain by delay, and the Code of Criminal Procedure, in its present state, affords him that advantage'

"It seems to me perfectly reasonable that the Magistrate should frame the charge as soon as he sees what the nature of the offence imputed to the accused is, and I propose to empower him to do so, just as under section 253 (2) he can discharge the accused at any stage. The amendments in section 256 are merely consequential."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"This is clearly a matter for the Council to consider, and I certainly sympathise strongly myself with the arguments His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor has put forward. At home the procedure adopted by section 251 is unknown. If a Magistrate is going to try a man himself, the man is charged as soon as he is put into the dock. The information gives the nature of the offence the man is going to be tried for, and I myself cannot see why a distinction has been drawn in India between trial on summons and warrant-cases in this respect. I quite agree that in warrant-cases you want a full record of the evidence. But why the procedure should be different I cannot myself understand. The difference is an arbitrary one. In a summons-case the man is told when he is brought into the dock what he is charged with, and I do not see why the same procedure should not be followed in warrant-cases. I brought this matter to notice of the Select Committee, but the members said that the procedure under which a man first of all took the evidence of the prosecution, then framed a charge, then, so to speak, committed the accused to trial before himself, as though he was a different person altogether, was so sanctioned by usage in India, that it would be impossible to go back on it. However, the amendment proposed by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor seems to me to be a reasonable compromise between what I venture to think is the proper procedure and the procedure which long usage has sanctioned in India. There may be reasons that I am not aware of why, when a warrant-case is being tried by a Magistrate, that Magistrate should be considered to be two different persons, and should commit the case to himself. But I have no doubt that various Hon'ble Members who have Indian experience will be able to throw some light on this doubtful, and to me somewhat obscure, question."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :—"I quite agree with His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor's amendment."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU :—"I have serious doubts about the soundness of the amendment.

"The following are my reasons. It is a principle of criminal law that no accused person shall be called upon to state what his defence is before he is charged. But it is the duty of the accused to indicate his defence by the line of his cross-examination. To call upon him to finish his cross-examination before a charge is framed, as he must do if the amendment is accepted, is virtually to take away his right not to divulge his defence if possible and get rid of the prosecution. The difficulty is removed by his being allowed to conduct so much of his cross-examination as is directed to show the prosecution is unsustainable on its own merits. Thus there is in reality a great saving of time. This is my experience. Very often, many Magistrates go into the defence when it is once indicated, even when the prosecution is rotten, to avoid revision by High Court and remand. Thus there is often a considerable waste of time and needless expense to the parties. I can give a number of cases which I know of, but I think it is unnecessary."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES :—" I only wish to say how very strongly indeed I support the amendment of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor. If it leads to the defeat of justice in Calcutta, the Council may think what it means in the North-Western Provinces or the Punjab—countries of vast distances and terribly severe heat. In Calcutta the Public Prosecutor or the Counsel for the Crown can easily get a man from round the corner, but what the Bill as it stands means is that the evidence for the prosecution may be taken, the charge made, and then it is to be at the option of the counsel for the prisoner to recall all those witnesses from fifty or sixty miles away. As the Code at present stands the Magistrate is not to make the charge until he has taken all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution, and also all such other evidence as he himself may consider will throw light on the case. Now it must be familiar to every gentleman here who has ever tried cases in the mufassal that very often we have cases up with a complainant and four or five witnesses, and everything looks satisfactory, so satisfactory indeed that the Magistrate does not quite know whether it is true or whether it is all false from beginning to end, and he says 'Well, I won't charge the man until I have sent for one or two respectable persons who must know something about it.' In the meantime the witnesses have gone home, perhaps fifty or sixty miles, to sow their fields and attend to their irrigation operations, and then as soon as the Magistrate is satisfied about the nature of the offence it rests with the accused, who had the opportunity all the time of cross-examining the witnesses, it rests with him to send for them back from their villages again. Now, my Lord, it is very easy to legislate, but you do not very often see what it means. It means in nine cases out of ten ruin to respectable people if they are not to look after the irrigation of, say, 10,000 acres at a critical time. It means ruin to them to be dragged about, and the result will be that when a case of cattle-theft or murder occurs in a village the zamindar will have the people up, and will say to them, 'You know what happened in the last case: my neighbour from the next village caught a professional, stealing camels. He collared him, sent for the Police, and went up to the sahib's camp thirty miles away. The sahib could not examine the first day: the second day his evidence was taken and he came back again, and then when he was in the middle of opening his canals he was sent for back again at the bidding of the accused, and then he had to go to the Sessions Court after that.' 'Now,' he will say, 'Why should we put ourselves to this enormous trouble for the sake of the Government? Let us give the man a thrashing, or fine him or fine his people. Anyhow, let us settle it amongst ourselves'. That will be the result, my Lord. You will simply not get crime reported, witnesses will refuse to give evidence at all, and crime will be suppressed and go unpunished. Vakils are past-masters in the art of using the provisions of the law to defeat it. When a case comes up, and the complainant and his witnesses are waiting outside the Court, the Vakil or his clerk will siddle quietly up to them, and say 'You are going to give evidence against so-and-so, are you? Very well, I shall not cross-examine, and you will all have to come back next week. Better think over what you are going to say,' and we know what the result will be. So I hope both for the protection of witnesses and in the interests of justice that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor's amendment will be accepted. I have got two extracts from the Bengal papers which prove—the papers reek with proof—of the way in which the existing law is abused.

A Magistrate says :—

'I am absolutely in favour of restricting this right of cross-examination, which, as far as I have seen, is utilised in nine cases out of ten, purely for purposes of delay or to create an imaginary case of hardship on its refusal. The way this section is abused in Suburban Calcutta Courts is remarkable. I would even make section 257 (2) stronger and say "unless the accused can show to the satisfaction of the Magistrate that some new point has arisen since such cross-examination or opportunity of cross-examination which it is necessary for the purposes of justice to elucidate."

And the Judge of Durbhanga says :—

'The amendment (that is as originally proposed in the Bill) will, if carried, be one of the most satisfactory pieces of legislation ever enacted in India. The way in which witnesses were recalled in Durbhanga, for example, for cross-examination, weeks, sometimes months, after the affair had happened, was simply scandalous. I am, however, afraid that the effect of the amendment will be whittled away, under the concluding portion of sub-section (2), section 257, and I would therefore omit the words "unless the Magistrate considers that such application should be refused on the ground that it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay, or for defeating the ends of justice." If this is not done, witnesses will be recalled as freely as ever."

"The Lieutenant-Governor's amendment, I imagine, means that as soon as the witnesses have given their depositions and the Magistrate knows what it means—the stealing of a watch or knocking a man down or whatever it is—that the charge will be framed, and that the accused can cross-examine on that charge, and that afterwards when the accused is making his defence he shall not have the right to call for them, as the Bill gives it to him, without the sanction of the Magistrate. I trust therefore that the Council will pass this amendment, as it is one very urgently required in the interests of those poor creatures, the witnesses who receive far too little consideration at the hands of the law or the Courts."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP :—"In the course of a long service I have, had many instances brought to my notice of the annoyance and harassment that witnesses are unnecessarily put to, and I have realised the injurious effect it must have upon the administration of justice by making persons reluctant to assist in it by becoming witnesses. When the preparation of this Code was commenced, my first care was to try to relieve persons who from the accident of their having in some way come in contact with the commission of an offence had become witnesses before a Criminal Court. My attention was principally directed to the amendment of section 257 so as to prevent, if possible, a witness before a Magistrate being unnecessarily summoned twice for the purpose of being cross-examined. There is no part of this Bill that has received such opposition, and I may say such unreasonable opposition, as this section as it was originally drafted. It certainly in its terms went a little farther than I desired, but it was sound in its original intention, and I was much disappointed when the Select Committee accepted in the place of the section as originally drafted, the section as suggested by the High Court of Calcutta. I should have preferred to leave the law as it was in the Code of 1882. The Lieutenant-Governor's amendment is, in my opinion, a decided improvement on the Bill, but I think that there are difficulties in the way of putting it into practice, and I wish the Council to consider these difficulties so as, if possible, to meet them. The matter requires some consideration. The Hon'ble Law Member has given me an opportunity to explain our practice in regard to the trial of cases before a Magistrate, and especially the distinction between the trial of a summons-case and of a warrant-case, and the reason for this. Now, the first reason is that a summons-case relates to an offence punishable with fine or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months. Such an offence is therefore, from its nature, a comparatively trivial offence, to be tried ordinarily by a somewhat summary procedure, and when a Magistrate is vested with special powers, he can try such an offence under what is termed summary procedure—a procedure more summary even than the ordinary trial of a summons-case. On the other hand the trial of a warrant-case is more formal and perhaps more complicated, because it relates to an offence for which a Magistrate can pass sentence up to two years ; and not only that, it often relates to a very grave offence for which the extreme imprisonment allowed by law may be for ten years. There is not in Indian law a broad distinction, such as in England, between felonies and misdemeanours. We have three classes of offences,—the first class consists of offences triable only by Magistrates, which, as a rule, are summons-cases ; the second class consists of offences triable both by Magistrates and Courts of Session, which are warrant-cases, and for some of these offences the law declares that the punishment may be imprisonment for ten years ; the third class consists of cases triable only by a Court of Session. The Legislature has declared that the trial of an offence of the second class, a warrant-case, shall be more elaborate than for a summons-case ; and that, except in some instances specially provided for by section 260, it shall not be in the form of a summary trial. The reason for this seems to be that, as for the nature of the offence an appealable sentence will almost always be passed, the accused is entitled to have placed before the Appellate Court a record which fairly represents the whole evidence against him. It also not unfrequently happens that from the development of a case, as the evidence is being taken, the offence assumes a greater gravity than it originally presented, and the Magistrate who, in the first instance, may have thought that he should himself try it, finds himself compelled to commit it for trial by the Court of Session In such a case it is always necessary that the Court of Session should have before it a more complete record than that of a summary trial, so as to be able to compare the evidence given in the Magistrate's Court before commitment with that on the Sessions trial. Moreover, it must not be forgotten that in some parts of India Magistrates are specially empowered to pass sentence up to seven years which may be in transportation, and some regular procedure not of a summary character must be prescribed for such trials. Under the present law such Magistrates hold these trials under the form prescribed for warrant-cases.

"The difficulty which presents itself to me in the amendment arises in the trial of cases regarding offences which are triable by a Magistrate or Court of Session. The Magistrate has jurisdiction to convict or acquit, but until he has heard the entire evidence for the prosecution he is not in a position to determine whether he shall hold the trial or commit the case to the Court of Session. If he draws up a charge he must convict or commit or acquit. He cannot then discharge the accused. Now, it has frequently happened that in cases of this description a Magistrate takes an erroneous view of the evidence, and under the present law discharges the accused. The present law provides an easy remedy to repair such an error, for it enables the High Court, Court of Session or District Magistrate to consider such cases as Courts of Revision, and, if necessary, to order a further inquiry to be held, which means that the proceedings are reopened. A charge can then be drawn and a trial held as of a warrant-case, but that would happen only after all the evidence of the prosecution had been taken and a prima facie case had been established for the accused to meet or the case may be committed to the Court of Session. But this will not be possible, if under the amendment a charge is drawn before the Magistrate is in a position to judge whether he shall try the case himself as a warrant-case or deal with it as a case in which he is holding an inquiry as in a Sessions case, and if on an erroneous view of the evidence he finds that no case has been made out by the prosecution he must acquit, and then the only course to remedy a failure of justice from his having acted on an erroneous view of the evidence will be either by an appeal on the part of the Local Government against the order of acquittal or by application to the High Court as a Court of Revision. The remedy will be much more difficult. The Local Governments very properly are reluctant to appeal against orders of acquittal, and I believe refuse to do so except in cases of importance or of gravity. On the other hand, in an application to the High Court as a Court of Revision against an order of acquittal, the Prosecutor is in a very different position from what under the present law he would be if he were moving that Court, or even an inferior Court, against an order of discharge. The result of this amendment if it be accepted in its present form, will, I fear, be that justice will suffer from placing too large a discretion in the hands of a Magistrate to deal with such a case before he has become acquainted with its real character after hearing the whole of the evidence for the prosecution; and if he acts precipitately or yields carelessly to the importunities of a pleader for the accused so as to draw up a charge before the evidence of a case has become developed, a failure of justice will frequently occur, for which it will be almost impossible to obtain a remedy. On the other hand, under the present case, an easy remedy is provided, the order challenged being a discharge, and not an acquittal. If some course could be devised for meeting this difficulty, I should heartily welcome the amendment of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, because it would remove what has become a scandal to the administration of justice, the harassment to which witnesses are often unnecessarily subjected by allowing an accused to recall them for a second cross-examination, and for no other purpose than to entangle them and to take advantage of defects of memory which from the lapse of time are inevitable."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBHAR NATH :—"I beg to oppose the motion, as, in my opinion, the insertion of the words suggested to be put in by His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal would operate to the prejudice of the accused. I would, therefore, leave the clause to stand as it is."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR :—"I will only say that I am well satisfied with the course of the discussion. I would point out, with reference to the remarks of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Charlu, that what we have provided for is simply that the Magistrate should have discretion to frame a charge as soon as he knows the nature of the offence, and that the amendment has not exactly the force the Hon'ble Member attributed to it. There is no doubt, as the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep has pointed out, that the effect of an order of acquittal is different from the effect of an order of discharge. If after the charge is framed the Magistrate finds the accused not guilty, he must record an order of acquittal. As far as the Government and those interested in the administration of justice are concerned, I am prepared to accept the inconvenience, because I consider the inconvenience caused by the present practice is very much greater. I see no reason to grieve if the accused gets the benefit of a full acquittal instead of a discharge The Government has the right of appeal against the order of acquittal, and there is also, as was pointed out, the power of revision, but the case could be fully met if it were thought desirable by adding to section 258 these words. Section 258 stands thus :—

"(1) If in any case under this chapter in which a charge has been framed the Magistrate finds the accused not guilty, he shall record an order of acquittal."

"(2) If in any such case the Magistrate finds the accused guilty, he shall pass sentence upon him according to law."

"Then you might add "if he is not satisfied of such guilt he shall discharge the accused.' But I do not think really it is necessary myself. I am quite content to leave my amendment as it stands."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR ANANDA CHARLU moved that to clause 255, of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the following proviso be added, namely :—

"Provided that in cases under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code the accused shall be committed to the sessions if he claims to be tried by such a Court or he be tried with the help of a jury, if he claims so to be tried."

He said :—"We have been alternating during this session between two propositions, viz., (1) what in England is sound and good law must be good law for India; (2) diversity of the conditions in England and in India makes a law good for the former, not necessarily so for the latter. One or other of these was brought before the eye as the legislative thaunmetrope revolved before us. I for one unconditionally accept the truth in each of these. There can be no dispute about them so long as they are enunciated in the abstract. But the hitch is felt in their application to concrete cases. The solution, however, is perfect and simple if we go on the right path. Where cognizance has to be taken of special data, characteristic of the one community and totally or substantially absent in the other community, the second proposition is true and ought to be decisive. In every other case the first proposition is true and must command ungrudging acceptance as the upshot of a well-attested experience and dependent mainly, if not solely, on the fundamental and immutable features of human nature. To submit to a trial by one's own peers and unhesitatingly to bow to their verdict is a disposition, as to which the question has been asked whether it depends on anything peculiar to the Western communities, or whether it is based on ultimate facts of human nature, common to mankind at large and conducive to good everywhere. There is an opinion that it is of the former kind; but with all deference to those who hold it, I have good reason to demur to it. That opinion to which I do not agree is the unconscious expression of national egotism and of unconsidered dogmatism. This may sound like a bold assertion. But it is nevertheless an assertion, as to the soundness of which I am quite convinced on a solid basis in facts. To begin with, let us formulate to ourselves what is the essence of a faith in trial by jury and what is at the root of it. In a passage which I have already quoted more than once, an eminent English Judge thus describes trial by jury :—

'It is one of the peculiar advantages of our (English) jurisprudence that the conclusion is to be drawn by the unanimous judgment and conscience of twelve men conversant with the affairs and business of life......and not of one or more lawyers whose habits might be suspected of leading to the indulgence of too much subtlety and refinement.'

"I ask, in all humility, whether there is in the above statement any reference to anything special to the English nature and not equally predicable as to the Indians? To the best of my lights I discern none.

"The twist that the mind of the lawyer, pure and simple, receives is here noted as tending to lead him astray. No less is this the case in India than elsewhere. The business capacity, the sturdy commonsense and the unsophisticated conscience of a body of men of ordinary intelligence, chosen irrespective of their likes and dislikes, are set down as fairly infallible guides to truth and as safeguards against error. These features are no less patent and no less potent in the fairly cultured Indians, from among whom the jurors are drawn. So far there are no appreciable grounds to differentiate between the Britisher and the British Indian. What is thus manifest from an analysis of human nature is capable of being established by abundant illustration. What is the Indian's traditional trust in the panchay.t as a tribunal of last resort? What is the very meaning of the term panchayat, except this, that the person complained against is ready unconditionally to abide by what five men of his choosing, without any special leanings for or against him, might decide? What again is at the root of the peculiarly Indian system of disputants submitting to the arbitrament of men freely elected by them but a confidence in their decision? What is the underlying principle of the method known in Hindu society as excommunication, if it is not that the offender has belief in, and is therefore ready to bow to, the united vote of his brethren in his caste or creed. What again is the overruling force in the deliverances of bodies known as parishats in matters social and even spiritual, but an unqualified credence in the sense of justice and fairness in the guilty man's cultured fellow-countrymen. With so many and so palpable manifestations of the Indian's fidelity in the rectitude of the four, the five and the ten of his own fellows, as the public are called in various parts of the country, it is somewhat grotesque to ignore them and proceed to work as if to the Indian the system of leaving his guilt or innocence to be decided by his brethren is unsuited. What is called trial by jury in legal nomenclature is in essence nothing new to this country. It is only an indigenous plant, pruned and trimmed according to the modern methods and christened with a modern name. These considerations ought to put an end to all dispute on the subject. But there are other valid grounds as well to entitle the Indian to this privilege, hoary as regards him and consonant to the genius of his people.

"Those in the legal profession, who have had an extensive practice in the Original Courts, must have been struck, as I have been, as to how a suitor, who believed in the justice of his case, readily and cheerfully submitted to arbitration by his own countrymen, and how the opposite party with a dubious case resolutely fought shy of them and preferred the toss-up in the regularly-constituted Courts where technicalities play an important part. This single fact, if people had used their eyes and their wits, ought to suffice to carry conviction to the most sceptic hearts as to the value of the jury in discovering truth and minimising the chances of grievously missing it. It would be a great pity if the Indian should lose his customary advantage by becoming a British Indian."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS: "On behalf of the Government I must oppose this amendment, and I may point out that my friend's argument in support of it, if it is valid at all, goes much farther than he intends to carry it. If my friend's argument is carried to its logical conclusion, no case must be ever tried by a Magistrate at all. Every case of every sort, of every character, of every kind, must be tried by a jury. That is the logical result of my friend's argument. As regards this particular case, it is part of the policy of the Government that small and trivial offences under section 124A should be capable of being disposed of before a Magistrate. I am not going to follow my friend into his eloquent panegyric on the jury system, but speaking for myself, and myself only, I will say this, that I have tried a very large number of cases as a Judge with juries in England, and as the result of those trials I have formed the very highest opinion of English juries. In all the many cases I have tried with juries I can only recollect two in which I disagreed with the verdict of the jury, and in those two cases I had materials before me which were not accessible to the jury, which led me to come to the conclusion that the jury had arrived at an erroneous verdict. But it so happens that I have tried a certain number of jury cases outside England, and I can only say that my experience in trying cases with juries outside England is that they are a dismal failure. For the success of a jury trial you require certain conditions, and those conditions are, as far as I am aware, that you have a homogeneous people, a people who make their own laws, and who, moreover, are determined that those laws shall be enforced. With those conditions present I know of no better tribunal than a Judge and a Jury, and with those conditions absent I know of no worse form of trial than a jury trial. I need not, however, go into the general question upon this amendment. The proposal of the Government is that certain cases under 124A which the Magistrate does not think fit to commit should be triable before a Magistrate. I must oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI: "I am in favour of the amendment. It will make the law practically the same both for Europeans and Natives. At the same time, where the offence is trivial or the offender is an unimportant person, it is highly probable that the application contemplated by the proposed amendment will not be made. I trust, therefore, the proposed amendment will be agreed to. In fact, the proposed amendment appears to me to be in the nature of a compromise. As to the objection that every accused person will under the proposed amendment if adopted claim to be tried by the Court of Session or by a jury, it does not appear to me to be well founded. Cases under the section will not be trials of strength between two subjects. On the one hand, there will be the Government represented by the District Magistrate, on the other hand, there will be a subject. The probabilities, therefore, are that, except in important cases, which will be very few indeed, Government will be satisfied if the accused person is bound over or nominally punished, and there will be no necessity for having the trial transferred to the Court of Session or being decided by a jury. On the other hand, where the offence is a grave one or the offender is an important person and Government considers it desirable in public interests to make an example of the accused person, it will be satisfactory for Government itself to have the case tried before a Court of Session or by a jury. Accordingly, from whatever point of view the matter is lookd at, I humbly think the proposed amendment is a desirable one and will, I trust, be accepted, inasmuch as the object Government have in view, namely, of having a workable procedure whereby offenders may be promptly brought to book will be fairly accomplished, whilst those cases which ought to be formally tried will be tried accordingly."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND: "My Lord, it is not my intention in discussing this subject to follow my Hon'ble friend Mr Ananda Charlu into high disquisitions upon the subject of human nature, or to point out that human nature in the West and human nature in the East correspond in their elementary properties But when he says that in matters relating to this particular amendment, and matters relating to trial by jury the same qualifications which exist in England also exist in this country, I distinctly join issue with him. The reason why trial by jury is an eminently successful system in England is that the Englishmen are born with a respect for the law because it is the law, and that by long tradition they have a reverence for the tribunals in which that law is administered. We have had an object lesson before us during the last six months which shows what a vast difference there is in this respect between the feelings of certain people in this country and the feelings of the people of England. The Hon'ble Member proposes to apply the system of trial by jury specially in regard to the offences under section 124A. It is with respect to this section that that object lesson during the last six months has been read to us Has there been, I would ask, in the discussions in the Native Press, any symptom of that respect for the tribunals in which justice is administered which will be found in the English Press? For six months past a constant stream of invective has been directed against the learned Judge—not who found the prisoner at Bombay guilty, for that was not his business—but who presided at the trial where he was found guilty. That stream of invective is even at the present day continually recurring. Nay, more, the High Court of Bombay, one of the supreme tribunals in this country, has been attacked in the same unmeasured terms only because it supported that Judge in his decisions. Even beyond this has the Press in this country ventured to carry its attack. A paragraph that appeared in a newspaper not long ago asserts that the Lord High Chancellor of England, the supreme representative of the judiciary of the empire, from corrupt motives went out of his way to take part in the trial of the Tilak case in the highest tribunal of the Empire—the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and that he was rewarded for having done so by having an Earldom bestowed upon him by Her Majesty the Queen, of course at the instance of Her Majesty's Ministers. I am not quoting from any hole-and-corner paper; I am quoting from what on this side of India puts itself forward as the leading organ and chief representative of what is termed the Congress party. If Members will turn to the columns of the Indian Mirror of Thursday, 27th January, they will find that I am giving a correct account of the aspersions there cast upon the highest judicial officer in England. My Lord

I do not deny that there are newspapers of a low grade even in England; newspapers which fortunately I never see; but I doubt altogether whether, even in those newspapers, aspersions of this sort upon the highest tribunals would be tolerated. Well, my Lord, I bring forward these instances as evidence of the principal difference that exists between the attitude of the people of England towards their tribunals and the attitude of the people of this country. When a jury is selected from English people to sit upon a case in England, they feel themselves influenced to some extent by the glamour of their judicial position; they feel the responsibility that is cast upon them, and they do their best according to their lights to deliver a verdict which shall be impartial and not based upon their own sympathy; but in this country what is it that we have seen before us? Writers in newspapers who, socially at least, are drawn from the same class from which our juries in this country are chosen, have made it manifest in their writings and stated practically in so many words that they do not trust the tribunals, that they do not approve of the law, and that if they had it in their power they would have given a decision in the case which would have been based upon their own sympathy with the accused and not upon the law as it stands. Their notion rather is that if they do not approve of a law, they ought to take it that it is their duty as members of a jury to interfere with its operation, and although I am sure that the Hon'ble Member who proposed this motion is very far above any feelings of that kind, yet I am perfectly convinced in my own mind that if his motion were carried, the only result of it would be that the administration of the law in this country would be over-ridden and the decisions on questions tried under the section referred to in the amendment would not be decisions according to law but decisions according to the sympathies of the members of the jury."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR. "One great objection I have to this proposal is that it seems to me as it stands by itself not to give effect to the intentions of the Hon'ble Member. Trials in Courts of Session are not always held with juries, and in a great majority of districts they are only held with the aid of assessors, and therefore I infer that he proposes that the Magistrates should act only with the aid of juries.

"But in the opinion of a great number of authorities that is as applied in the case of European British subjects, probably the most unsatisfactory feature in the whole administration of justice at the present time. I think to give effect to the Hon'ble Member's proposals we should have to tear up the Code and provide a large number of sections which he does not attempt to move. I am not going into the general question of the system of trial by jury. We have it here in the country, and in certain classes of cases I am perfectly prepared to admit that juries have done extremely well. I have never been one of those who have objected to jury trials in certain cases, for instance for offences against property, but I have no doubt whatever that there are many other classes of cases in which jury trials are not satisfactory; and, if there are any classes of cases to which that description applied, I should say it would be those under section 124 of the Indian Penal Code. We do not wish our jury trials to be converted into political demonstrations."

The motion was put and negatived.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL moved that for clause 256, sub-clause (1), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the following be substituted, namely:—

"(1) If the accused refuses to plead, or does not plead, or claims to be tried, he shall be required to state whether he wishes to cross-examine any, and if so which, of the witnesses for the prosecution whose evidence has been taken. If he says he does so wish, the witnesses named by him shall be re-called, and after cross-examination and re-examination (if any) they shall be discharged. The evidence of any remaining witnesses for the prosecution shall next be taken, and after cross-examination and re-examination (if any) they also shall be discharged. The accused shall then be called upon to enter upon his defence and produce his evidence."

He said :—"This is merely a consequential amendment to give effect to the motion which the Council have adopted with respect to clause 254."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS : "It is a consequential amendment, and the Council have already practically agreed to it."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH : "I am not in favour of the amendment. I am rather in favour of the clause as it stands in the Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES : "With Your Lordship's permission I will withdraw the amendment I have given notice of, viz., that clause 256, sub-clause (1), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee stand as in the original Bill, namely :—

'256. (1) If the accused refuses to plead, or does not plead, or claims to be tried, he shall be called upon to enter upon his defence and to produce his evidence, and shall, at any time while he is making his defence, be allowed to re-call and cross-examine any witness for the prosecution present in the Court or its precincts who has not previously been cross-examined as to the facts constituting the charge.'

Defence

"I only proposed it in case His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor's amendment were not agreed to."

The amendment was accordingly withdrawn.

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS moved that in clause 259 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee the words "and the offence may be lawfully compounded" be omitted. He said :—"I beg to propose that the words 'and the offence may be legally compounded' be omitted from the section 259. My personal experience goes to show that in the mufassal there often happen cases which are of such trivial nature that it is not worth while summoning the complainant to produce his witnesses and to go on with the case when evidently by his absence he shows that he intends withdrawing from it. What I mean is this, that the dismissal of a case ought not to depend on the case being a compoundable one. In the majority of cases, when the complainant does not wish to continue the prosecution, the parties make matters up between themselves, through the influence of friends who are very often the witnesses in the case, so that the evidence which the Magistrate gets is of a very flimsy nature. The case is dismissed as usual, only the time of the Court is taken up, and that, too, for no purpose whatsoever. Again, even if the words 'and the offence may be legally compounded' be omitted, the section leaves discretion to the Magistrate to go on with the case should it be an important one and justice require that the case should be proceeded with in spite of the complainant's desire to withdraw from it. I therefore think that the words 'and the offence may be legally compounded' may be safely omitted from the section."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS: "I do not think this amendment ought to be accepted. If the offence is compoundable, there is no objection to the parties making an arrangement out of Court."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS moved that in clause 260, sub-clause (1) (i), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, between the figures "448" and the words "of the same Code" the words and figures "and offences under sections 451, 456 and 457" be inserted. He said :—"I beg to propose that offences under sections 451, 456 and 457 of the Penal Code be included in the list of summarily triable offences, as enumerated in section 260 of the Criminal Procedure Code. My reason is this: generally cases that occur of house-breaking are of a very simple nature—the lifting of a small bamboo screen often comes under this category. I think it would be wise to make such petty offences summarily triable, for it would save much valuable time of the Courts which have many important cases to try. In support of my statement, I would beg leave to quote what the Additional Sessions Judge of Nerbudda Division says on the subject:—

'Much of the crime against property,' writes he to the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, 'consists of petty house-breakings, with intent to commit theft. Except in towns, the walls of houses are usually built of mud, and the house breaking is accomplished by digging a hole in one of them. As only Magistrates of experience have powers under section 260, offences punishable under sections 451, 456 and 457, Indian Penal Code, might be added to the list.'

"I may add, my Lord, that the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces thinks that this suggestion of the Sessions Judge is a good one and its adoption would effect a great saving in the time of the Courts.

"I do not say that at times serious offences do not come under these sections, but the addition of the new proviso 2 to section 260 which makes it discretionary with Magistrates to try the cases summarily or otherwise is an ample safeguard for important cases being tried in a regular manner."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS: "I venture to think that this is an amendment the Council might very well consider. So far as I myself am concerned I see no objection to it: but I would rather have the opinion of those experienced Magistrates who are present as Members of this Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. NICHOLSON: "I agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Chitnavis in his amendment, and for the reasons stated by him."

The Hon'ble MR. LATOUCHE: "I also support the amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES: "I also beg to support it."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP: "It appears to me, My Lord, that this amendment goes rather beyond the original scope of the section. In some respects it includes offences which are triable by a Court of Session and in which the maximum punishment which can be awarded may be so far as seven or even ten years. Now, if you come to look at the section, you will see that its operation is extremely limited in the case of theft which is a cognate offence, and theft is an offence of very much less gravity than any of the offences covered by the amendment. For house-trespass in order to commit theft, the maximum term of imprisonment is fixed at seven years; and although the extreme sentence for lurking, house-trespass or house-breaking by night is imprisonment for three years, the offence is triable by a Court of Session; while an offence under section 457 is punishable with imprisonment for five years, and if it is committed in order to commit theft, the sentence may be one of imprisonment for fourteen years. Now, if the Council will turn to the offence of theft so far as it is made to form the subject of a summary trial, it will be seen that the jurisdiction of the Court is limited to theft in which the value of the property does not exceed R50; that is a case of a very petty character, whereas the offences under 451, 456 and 457 seem to me to be offences of great gravity, which should not form the subject of a summary trial."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS: "I concur entirely with what has fallen from Sir Henry Prinsep. It appears to me that these cases are far too serious to be tried summarily."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR: "I agree with Sir Charles Lyall that these cases may be serious or not. Very often one of the most trivial offences that can come before the Courts is what is termed in the Code house-breaking by night. Many such cases ought to be tried summarily. I would leave the Magistrate to suit his procedure to the nature of the case. If the Magistrate sees fit he will try it in the ordinary way. I support the amendment."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI moved that in clause 275 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee after the word "Session," in line 2, the words "or the High Court" be inserted. He said:—

"If my amendment is accepted, the law regarding the constitution of juries in the mufassal and in the presidency-towns will be the same. It will be generally admitted that the native inhabitants of a presidency-town are more advanced in education than their fellow subjects in the mufassal. If so, it necessarily follows that they are better qualified to act as jurors. It is difficult, therefore, to understand why in a presidency-town the accused person should not be allowed to be tried by a jury the majority of which consists of his countrymen. My amendment, therefore, is, primâ facie, a reasonable one. It was contended that the jury question is a large question, and had been recently considered, and that it was not desirable to re-open it. I submit that as the Criminal Procedure Code is now being consolidated, this is the proper time to consider the jury question which forms a part of the Code. I am not fully aware of the exact grounds on which the jury in the presidency-towns was allowed to remain in its present state when the question was last considered. But it seems to me that such grounds could not be strong or reasonable, for after all the main ground can only be with reference to the qualifications of the native jurors to be able to discharge their functions properly, and a fortiori the native inhabitants of the presidency-towns are better qualified for this duty than those of the mufassal. It is stated, however, that the accused person in the presidency-towns has certain advantages over the accused person in the mufassal regarding the constitution of the jury in the way of challenging a certain number of jurors and otherwise which counterbalance the disadvanges. I humbly submit that that is not the proper way of approaching the subject. The only consideration ought to be whether, if an accused person in the presidency-towns is allowed to be tried by a jury, the majority of which are his countrymen, will the trial be prejudiced? I am not aware of any circumstances which will so prejudice the trial, in other words, enable the accused, although really guilty, to escape. On the contrary, I think, there are stronger safeguards against this danger in the presidency-towns. The High Courts' Sessions are presided over by the best Judges in the land, there is the Press, both Anglo-Indian and Vernacular, and also public opinion. I humbly trust, therefore, my amendment will be accepted."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS: "I must oppose this amendment. We do not propose in this Code to cast the existing jury system into the melting pot. It would involve the breaking up of an illogical compromise perhaps, but one which at this stage of the Bill we are not at all inclined to enter upon. I would only point out this to my Hon'ble friend with reference to his remark about the distinction between juries in the presidency-towns, and juries in the mufassal. In the presidency-towns all trials in the High Court are conducted with juries. In the mufassal the jury system is only extended by order to certain Courts, and when the jury system is extended to certain Courts the order defines what particular classes of offence are to be tried by the juries. The Local Government in extending the jury system to Sessions Courts considers what classes of cases are to be tried by a jury and what are not. There is, therefore, no real analogy between the system of jury trial in the mufassal and in the presidency-towns, which latter is practically the English system. In the presidency-towns, as I understand, the juries are chosen from one general list of capable citizens, and it is desirable that the juries should be chosen from the general list as at present."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS: "I would only observe this, that I do not think any inhabitant of a presidency-town ought to vote for this amendment. The jury system in the presidency-towns is very old indeed. It goes back to the time of the old Supreme Court, and it is the English jury system. As a matter of fact in the mufassal it is a recent introduction with many limitations, and if once it were to be held that whatever was right in the mufassal was right in Calcutta, the consequence would be that we should be in the same precarious state as regards the jury-system as they are in the mufassal. There would be no reason why certain offences should not be excluded from jury trial in the presidency-towns as in the mufassal. Those who are not satisfied with the privileges they enjoy in the presidency-towns are hard to please. They are like the dog who dropped his bone to catch its shadow.

The Hon'ble Sir HENRY PRINSEP: "In addition to the arguments which have been advanced against this amendment, I would point out, as mentioned by the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans, that the law in respect of juries on trials in the sessions of the High Court has hitherto been uniform ever since the original constitution of the old Supreme Court more than a century ago. A native, that is to say, a person who is not an European or an American or an European British subject, can be tried by the High Court Sessions, first, if he is amenable to the ordinary criminal jurisdiction in the presidency-towns, or, second, if he has been committed for trial with an European British subject charged in the same proceeding. Now there is no reason why the practice which has been in force in the presidency-towns for more than a century should be altered. If, however, his case comes under the second category, that is to say, if he is brought under trial together with an European British subject, he will get a trial in the High Court and he can claim a separate trial, so that he is not tried by a jury of an alien race He will be tried by the High Court just as if the offence had been committed in a presidency-town, and he would therefore be placed on the same footing as those who live in presidency-towns, and who are supposed to enjoy special privileges, if they are charged with offences committed in the presidency-towns. He has moreover been brought into a Court of higher jurisdiction, and he can have a separate trial and a peremptory right of challenge which he would not have enjoyed if he had been tried in any ordinary Sessions Court, and, as has already been pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, if he were committed for trial in a Sessions Court, he would not necessarily be tried by a jury at all. I therefore ask the Council to consider why, if he happens to be committed for trial under these special circumstances to a superior Court, such as the High Court of a presidency-town, he should be placed in a better position than if he had been amenable to the ordinary jurisdiction, or why he should be placed in a better position than those who are now residents of presidency-towns."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH moved that in Chapter XXIII-L.—Special Provisions for High Courts—of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, it should be provided that "in a trial by jury before the High Court in a presidency-town of a person not being an European or an American a majority of the jury shall, if he so desires, consist of persons who are neither Europeans nor Americans." He said:—"I see no necessity for expatiating upon the reasons I have already submitted in regard to composition of the jury, or an extensive application of their powers in trials before High Courts in presidency-towns, of persons not being Europeans or Americans. The distinction hitherto observed is, to say the least, illogical; and the sooner it is removed the better. It is not at all a valid argument that the jury system is not suited to the peculiar conditions of this country. It has been tried long and worked well with this one exception, that it has unfortunately proved disastrous in a majority of trials held with the help of a mixed jury, where Europeans or British-born subjects were concerned in the commission of offences against native Indian subjects. But its partial failure there, however deplorable it may be, does not argue that it should not be extended further or utilised to a legitimate extent, with all its privileges and without any racial distinctions."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that in clause 345, sub-clause (2), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the word and figures "section 325", in line 3, be omitted. He said:—"The Bill originally proposed that several dangerous forms of mischief should be made compoundable, as well as grievous hurt under section 325. I am glad to see they have all been withdrawn except one, and that is clause 325, which I suggest to the Council should also be withdrawn. It is perfectly true that many offences are only technically grievous hurt. A blow that makes a permanent mark on a man's face, tripping a man up so as to knock out a tooth, is grievous hurt, and with the permission of the Court there is no valid reason why such should not be compounded, but if you allow very trivial cases of grievous hurt to be compounded with the permission of the Court, you will also have to allow most serious ones to be compounded. Now, my Lord, it will save time if I read an extract from one of the Bengal papers :—

'Most native races are not at all vindictive when there is no old standing personal quarrel. A man nourishes no enmity to the hired clubman who has nearly killed him, though he may be never so well inclined to murder the clubman's employer. He will, therefore compound, if he can get money by doing it, and, as I have said, the vast majority of Native Magistrates will never oppose his doing it.

'I have seen horrible cruelty inflicted by burning, and in other dreadful ways upon little girl children, and I have found Native Magistrates, men generally of sound judgment, so oppressed by ideas of saving family honour, and the general tendency to compromise everything, that they would allow these horrors, things only adequately punished by long imprisonment, to be compounded.

'It is to be remembered, too, that cruelty to children is to be compounded by payment to some other persons [clause (4)], and that in the very worst cases that have ever occurred, the offender is the child's mother-in-law, and the person who compounds the offence is her own son, the child's husband living in commonsality and probably maintaining her.

'I trust that the Legislature will not do anything to make easy the ways of torturers and of such assassins as merely fail of complete success.'

"I, my Lord, have seen myself the tortures on children alluded to, and there can be no doubt that, excellent as most Native Magistrates are, in matters like these they are weak. Only the other day I had an atrocious case of attempted murder, where a Magistrate, a most respectable man of long service who had recently retired on his pension, was undoubtedly conniving, to say the least, in hushing it up because the murderer was a lad with respectable connections in the town.

"It is really a matter for the opinion of the Council. Those Members who have risen from the lower grades of the Magistracy like myself will see, I think, that these arguments are extremely powerful, that by allowing Courts to compound, although I am all in favour of trusting our Courts, yet in some instances it is well that the case should be dragged to the light of day and fought out to the bitter end. Compounding is always a matter that requires careful looking after, and for myself, although I say that if my tooth was knocked out I should be allowed to compound for payment to get a false one, yet when it comes to the cases of little helpless children being tortured, and their relations compounding for them, the Legislature should interfere and prevent such offences being compounded."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS : "I must oppose this amendment ; it is a matter purely for the Council. I am not opposing it as a Member of the Government, but simply as Chairman of the Select Committee. We considered this question very carefully, and we came to the conclusion that the offence of voluntarily causing hurt or grievous hurt was eminently one where the Court should exercise its discretion. My friend Mr. James has quoted one or two cases where the Court has erroneously exercised its discretion. Well, we cannot help that. What we must look to is not individual, hard cases, but what is a sound general rule. In most cases of hurt the offence is eminently one which ought to be compoundable. In England most of these cases in which prosecutions are brought here would be treated as the grounds of a civil action for damages. If by negligence serious hurt is inflicted by one person on another, no doubt he has committed a criminal offence, but if he makes an adequate compensation to the person injured and if the Court is satisfied that public justice is not being defrauded by the case being stopped, I see no reason why the compensation should not be accepted and why the offence should not be compounded. This is one of those matters where one has to legislate for the general rule and not for particular hard cases. In particular cases you must trust to the Magistrate's discretion not to allow compensation to be accepted."

The Hon'ble MR. NICHOLSON said : "I oppose the amendment. As stated by the Hon'ble Mover himself, many cases falling under the definition of 'grievous hurt' are of a trifling character and may be the result of a petty assault; most cases are of no public interest, but affect only an individual and arise out of some private and perhaps sudden quarrel.

"Moreover, cases under this section are only compoundable with the permission of the Courts, who may be trusted to deal discreetly with cases which ought not to be compounded. If cases come up in which the offence is the result of a public breach of the peace or where persons unable to protect themselves or their interests are the object of injury, the Magistrate will doubtless refuse his consent to compensation. I do not see why we should prevent the compounding of these cases in general, because of some possible cases of hardship."

The Hon'ble MR. LATOUCHE : "I think the Hon'ble Member who has moved this amendment has given us quite as many and as strong reasons for rejecting it as for accepting it. The Magistrate's opinion which he read was fully considered by the Select Committee, and we came to the conclusion that there are many trivial offences which come under the definition of grievous hurt, and we thought that we ought to trust to the ordinary good sense and discretion of the Magistrates."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS : "I also oppose the amendment. In most of these cases unless the complainant rushes into Court at once these matters are settled by compensation. Money compensation is the only thing that will do any good when the man is injured. If the offence is such and is so deliberate that he does not wish to take money for it, the case can go on. The case of the little children is a very exceptional one, and one would trust that the Magistrate would not allow cases of that kind to be compounded. There is no doubt that as regards most bodily injuries money compensation is the best thing for the man who is injured. Many of these cases of grievous hurt are cases of negligence or sudden passion in which the man who committed the offence is afterwards very sorry and is quite ready to make compensation, and the injured man is ready to accept it. The question is whether he should be debarred from receiving it by the fact of his having instituted the case."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS : "My sympathies are entirely with the Hon'ble Member who moves the amendment—in his motives—but I am not able to support the amendment. Strong reasons have already been given why this amendment should not be accepted. I would merely point out that the arguments of my Hon'ble friend Mr. James apply with only less force to the offence of causing hurt, and with more force in this respect that in the Code we have provided that the offence of causing hurt may be compounded even without the consent of the Magistrates."

His Honour the LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR : "I am not able to support the Hon'ble Member, because his speech logically ought to have led to the removal of this entire sub-section. Logically he ought to have moved the omission of the clause. However, I am quite content to leave the thing to the discretion of the Court, which will deal with petty cases in the proper way and serious cases in the way in which they ought to be dealt with."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that in clause 349, sub-section (1), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words "and forward the accused", in line 12, be omitted, and that in sub-clause (2) of the same clause, after the words "if he thinks fit" the words "transfer the proceedings to another Magistrate having jurisdiction and direct that the accused be forwarded to such Magistrate, or he may direct that the accused be forwarded to his own Court, and he may, or the Magistrate to which such proceedings are transferred may, if he thinks fit," be inserted. He said :—"This is an amendment of the Government of Bombay, and personally I feel great interest in its being passed, because of the very great convenience it will be in the Punjab and Sind. I suppose, my Lord, I may explain that in my own province at least, the Subdivisional Magistrate always for four or five months in the year comes into head-quarters, and possibly the most extreme point of his division is 100 or perhaps 150 miles away. A man is caught thieving and is brought before the local Magistrate, who can only give him a month or perhaps six months. The Magistrate tries the case, and finds possibly that the man has been convicted before or that there are some circumstances which make it necessary that the convicted person should have a greater punishment than he himself under the powers given him by the Code is able to inflict. He therefore sends the proceedings to the Magistrate to whom he is subordinate, who goes through them thoroughly, as if he were an Appellate Court so to speak, calls for further evidence if he considers it necessary, and then passes sentence. By the Code, as amended by the Select Committee, it is necessary that the Magistrate who convicts the accused should forward him 'at once to the Magistrate to whom he is subordinate. The effect of my amendment will be that the accused need not be sent at once. The proceedings will be sent to the Magistrate 100 or 150 miles away, and the Magistrate will then go through the proceedings, and if he considers it necessary will send for the accused, and such evidence as he requires, and dispose of the case, and give the sentence required. But—and it is an arrangement we have been endeavouring to extend of late years—we have been in several instances, on account of the very great distances, placing Magistrates of high powers far away in remote corners. These Magistrates are First Class Magistrates, who have passed precisely the same examinations to get their first class powers as ordinary Covenanted Civilians. They all speak English, and while the Civilian and the Native Magistrates are on precisely the same footing as regards tests, the Natives are also chosen on account of their general capacity. Well, the result of my amendment would be that in the hot weather, when the thermometer is 128° in the shade, instead of the prisoner being sent straight off to the Subdivisional Magistrate who may be very many miles away, the papers will be sent by post to the Subdivisional Magistrate, and he will probably say, after looking at them, 'Oh, well, the Sub-Magistrate who tried the case can only give him a month, and he probably ought to have three, so I will send back the papers to the First Class Magistrate on the spot having jurisdiction.' Then he will take the place of the Subdivisional Magistrate and he will call for any further evidence required, and will pass sentence. It will be a very great convenience indeed to the witnesses and every body concerned that the case should be disposed of on the spot, and the Government of Bombay have asked for the amendment on those grounds."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS: "This is purely an amendment for the Council to consider. I do not remember that we discussed the point in Select Committee, but I myself can form very little of an opinion on it. Personally, I suppose my prejudices as an English lawyer are against the Indian system, under which one Magistrate tries a case and another Magistrate who has not tried the case passes the sentence. My own personal prejudices are against extending jurisdiction under that system at all, but it is a system which has a deep root in India, and how far this amendment may work for the convenience both of Magistrates and accused persons I do not know. It is a question which I must leave to those who have practical experience in the matter."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP: "I have already pointed out that the amendment aims at altering the section, which has never been questioned at the present day. It seems to me that the result of this amendment will be to keep the person who is under trial a longer time under trial than would happen under the present law. I think this alone is a great objection to the amendment. In the next place, the law contemplates that the case shall be at once sent to the superior officer having local jurisdiction, that is to say, either to the District Magistrate, or, in the event of there being smaller local jurisdiction, to the Subdivisional Magistrate, and that the case should then and there be decided by that officer or, if necessary, by some officer at that station who may have jurisdiction to deal with it. In that case if, as is contemplated by the finding of the first Magistrate, a sentence of imprisonment be passed, the imprisonment will at once commence at that place where the gaol would be situated. I do not understand why it should be necessary, as proposed by the Government of Bombay, that it should be provided that the cases submitted by a Third Class Magistrate should be triable by a Second Class Magistrate. It seems to me that the law is sufficiently wide to provide for such a case. It might happen that the Second Class Magistrate might find himself unable to pass an adequate sentence."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH moved that, at the end of clause 406 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words "or the Sessions Judge, respectively," be added. He said: "I think it is desirable that when a person is ordered to give security for good behaviour under section 118 of the Criminal Procedure Code, by the District Magistrate, such person should have the right of appeal to the Sessions Judge, subject, of course, to a further right of revision by High Court. The law, as is now proposed to be passed, makes an order of the kind, if made by District Magistrate, subject to revision by the High Court. But the High Courts, as a matter of general practice, do not, in the exercise of their revisional powers, enter into an examination of questions of fact or those of appreciation of the weight of evidence. The effect substantially of the rulings of those Courts upon the point, is that the probative force or effect of evidence is a question of fact; where there is evidence to be considered and weighed, a judgment of conviction will not be set aside by a Court of Revision."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS: "I must oppose this amendment. The proposal, as I understand it, is that instead of the appeals from the orders requiring security for good behaviour under section 118 going to the District Magistrate they are to go to the Court of Session, or there is to be an option to appeal to the Court of Session. But the District Magistrate is the person responsible for the peace of the district and not the Sessions Judge, and it must be borne in mind that the District Magistrate is an officer of equal or even superior standing in the service to the Sessions Judge. There is no reason whatever for altering the law and giving the appeal from a Subordinate Magistrate to a Sessions Judge, instead of to, his own superior, the District Magistrate."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that in clause 408 (c) of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee the word "District" be omitted. He said:—"I propose to omit the word "District" in clause 408 (c). The present clause runs as follows:—

> (c) when any person is convicted by a District Magistrate of an offence under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, the appeal shall lie to the High Court."

"I propose to omit the word "District" because of an amendment which I am going to propose later on. I need not discuss that amendment at the present stage; the omission of the word "District" here will have no effect. This clause will have the same effect whether the word "District" remains in or not, but I propose the omission with reference to the amendment that will be discussed later on."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH: "Without meaning any disrespect at all to the Hon'ble the Legal Member, whose sense of forbearance and courtesy towards others is remarkably exceptional, I observe that the high position he occupies in the Council often compels him, I believe against his own inclination, to assume, out of necessity, an unenviable attitude of a hostile critic or opposer in relation to amendments that are moved by his colleagues. It is not, therefore, in any other spirit than that of consistency on my own part, that I regret, I must oppose the amendment moved by the Hon'ble the Legal Member.

"There is no question, if I may be permitted to say so, of 'raising or lowering the elevation of martyrdom'; the question is really one of a fair trial before an independent tribunal. District Magistrates, being ordinarily local Executive Officers too, would generally be concerned in advising or initiating proceedings under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code; while First Class Magistrates do not, as a body, command the same amount of confidence, in point of experience or competency, as District Magistrates would otherwise do. The proper tribunal for trial of offences involving sedition under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code would therefore be the Court of Session aided by a jury or assessors, as difficult or complex questions of interpretation of a Vernacular language are most likely to arise in connection with such trials."

The motion was put and agreed to.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL moved that in clause 411 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, for the word "three" the word "six" be substituted. He said :—"This amendment merely gives effect to the scheme of restoring the jurisdiction of Presidency Magistrates which I referred to yesterday and is consequential on that proposal."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS : "It is consequential on what has already been done and we can certainly accept it."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS moved that in clause 435, sub-clause (3), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words and figures "Chapter XII and" be omitted. He said :—"These words were not in the Act of 1882 nor were they in the Bill submitted to the Select Committee. But they have been inserted by the Select Committee, and the effect of them is to take away the revisional power of the High Court in cases falling under Chapter XII. That Chapter deals with cases under sections 145, 146 and 147 of the Code. The discussion we had yesterday must have satisfied the Council that there are a great many difficult questions arising under these sections. The question of what constitutes possession in law is not an easy one. Then again the questions arising under section 147, disputes regarding easements, right of way and all other kinds of easements, are often difficult; but in addition to this I must call the attention of the Council to another thing, which is that Magistrates do not always exercise their powers in accordance with the sections at all. I had a case the other day of a char and the Magistrate examined all the papers, and took a good deal of evidence, and he said, proceeding under section 145, 'that it is impossible with regard to new chars ever to find out who is in possession of them, and therefore I will hand it over to the man on whose estate I think it has arisen as a re-formation.' That is not the thing the Act told him to do. The Act told him that he was to ascertain possession, and if he could not do that, he was to attach the char. Then when the High Court called upon him to explain, he said, 'I did not attempt to ascertain who was in possession, because it is a waste of time to do so.' Now, some people think this is quite right : that Deputy Magistrates with first class powers should go about, and affect to go about and pass orders dead in the teeth of the sections which they are supposed to be proceeding under, and thus deprive persons of the property and yet that there should be no means of quashing these manifestly illegal orders. Some revisional powers are necessary, for if these people find there is no revising power of any kind whatever, it will be very difficult to keep them straight at all. Now it must be remembered that at the present time the orders under section 144, which alone are exempted from revision and which can only be made by a first class Magistrate if he has been specially entrusted with these powers, are the urgent orders, temporary orders in urgent cases of nuisance or of apprehended danger. They are quasi-executive orders which can be made without examining witnesses. But it is quite evident that section 145 was never meant to enable a Magistrate to give one of these quasi-executive orders. It is there provided that the parties should send in their statements of each side of the case, and it is also provided that there should be a full examination of all the witnesses, these orders can be made by any Magistrate with first class powers because they are safe-guarded by the power of revision. Now it is proposed to take away in these particular cases the power the High Court has with regard to all judicial proceedings. With regard to all judicial proceedings they have the power to see that they are taken according to law. I quite admit that there have been cases in which some Benches of the High Court have sometimes interfered with orders under section 145 which they would have done better if they had left alone. But I do not think a sufficient case has been made out for taking away the power of revision which has existed for all these years, for, if it is taken away, nobody whatever will have any power to see that all these delicate provisions which we have been discussing are ever carried out at all. The Magistrate, as in the case I have quoted, will make some sort of summary order, and whether it is according to law or not will be quite immaterial. It is said, on the other side, that this is merely a summary order of possession, and it is followed by a civil suit. But with regard to these matters, it must be remembered that the man who is out of possession may have his civil suit go on for years, and by the time it has gone up to the Privy Council and been finally settled it may be four, five, six or ten years. Take, for instance, a case where a man has sown indigo on a char, and another man has sown mustard on the top of it—it is a very common case. It is not much use to say to the man who has sown the indigo, 'Oh you will have your civil suit.' It will be perfectly impossible to assess his damages. The Magistrate may say that he thinks the char belongs to so and so, and will give his decision accordingly; but he may also say that, 'I do not know which was sown first, the mustard or the indigo, and I am not going to enquire who was in possession last year.' Now what I want to put to the Council is this, these orders are generally made by an inferior class of Magistrates. At present there is power in the High Court, the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate to call for the record and exercise control over the inferior Magistrates. It is the basis of our system, and is the only way they are kept straight. But by this change you sweep away all control and supervision. Neither High Court, Sessions Judge nor District Magistrate can say anything however outrageous or scandalously absurd the order may be. Such uncontrolled powers have never before been entrusted to inferior Magistrates involving the disposal of property frequently of immense value. If you are afraid of the High Court, cannot the District Magistrate be trusted to see fair play? It is easy to foresee the results. Char districts ought to be much sought after by the inferior Magistracy."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" This is an important question, and it is one for the Council to consider. It is a matter on which I have no personal experience, and on which my opinion is absolutely useless. But I must point out, and I hope Hon'ble Members with personal experience will point out, that there are strong arguments on the other side. My Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans points out that this particular provision which he proposes to expunge was not in the copy of the Bill submitted to the Select Committee, but a corresponding provision was inserted in section 145. That provision was taken out of section 145 and was moulded into the form which this provision now takes in section 435. This was one of the points which was carefully considered by my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep in Simla, and Sir Henry Prinsep in his original memorandum very briefly stated what I may call the arguments on the other side. Perhaps I may read three or four lines of that memorandum which put the other side better than I can put it myself. He says :

'It has been considered necessary to make the Magistrate's order in such a case final. It is very desirable that such matters should be summarily dealt with, and that any party disputing a Magistrate's order should seek redress at the Civil Court as is contemplated by the law, and that recourse should not be had to a Court of Revision whose interference only tends to prolong the termination of the dispute and a final summary adjudication of rights raised.'

" I do not know if anything that has taken place since has altered my Hon'ble friend's opinion, but if it has altered his opinion, I have no doubt he will give us the benefit of the reasons which he thinks now ought to prevail."

The Hon'ble Mr. LATOUCHE :—" Something may be urged in favour of the view that Magistrates should not have the summary powers conferred on them by clause 145. This question was fully debated yesterday and the Council decided that Magistrates should exercise these powers. That being so the order of the Magistrate should be summary and final subject to the ultimate decision of the Civil Court. In Bengal there has been a tendency to bring all these cases before the High Court on revision, and to attempt to make the High Court a Court of appeal before which the whole question may be litigated afresh. This practice should, in my opinion, be stopped."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES :— "I thoroughly agree with what has fallen from my Hon'ble friend Mr. LaTouche."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP :—" My Lord, my object in recommending for the consideration of the Hon'ble Member in charge of this Bill—and he has accepted my recommendation—alterations in section 145 in the Code and also the amendments which are now called in question, was to endeavour to ensure a summary final decision of the Magistrate, so as to put an end to disputes so far as his Court was concerned, and to leave the ultimate decision of the matters in contention between the two parties to a competent Civil Court. It must be recollected that the order of the Magistrate is a very special order, justified only by the special circumstances of the case, that is, to prevent a breach of the peace, and to remove the disturbing element by declaring and maintaining in possession one of the disputing parties. The Council in the debate we had yesterday did not accept the principle that I contended for, which was that there should be a simple matter in issue at the time of actual possession; what I desired was that there should be a simple issue such as would be understood by the parties, and could be easily decided. Under sub-section (5) as has been already mentioned by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill, I have succeeded in obtaining the approval of this Council—for that part of the Act has already been assented to to this principle that the High Court shall not get behind the proceedings on the ground that they are ab initio bad from some preliminary flaw in the Magistrate's proceedings. Now what has taken place in many reported cases is that the High Court has invariably considered, even when raised before it at the ultimate stage of the case, whether the Magistrate had sufficient grounds for initiating the proceedings, that is to say, whether there was sufficient material before him to be satisfied in the terms of the law that there was an imminent breach of the peace. I have always myself, in the cases which have come before me in that Court, refused to attend to such a plea raised at the ultimate stage of the case, and I wish I could have succeeded in getting other Judges to follow an excellent decision passed many years ago by Couch, C.J., who held that, after the parties had submitted to the Magistrate's jurisdiction and obtained an order from the Magistrate, one of them could not reasonably complain that the whole proceedings were without jurisdiction. That to my mind has always been a sound principle to go upon, and it was with that view that I have succeeded in obtaining the alteration of the Bill in so far as to prevent the interference of the High Court, where without any objection the Magistrate had proceeded on grounds upon which he was satisfied that a breach of the peace was imminent. It was open to either party in the course of the proceedings to call this in question by showing that the Magistrate had no grounds to proceed upon, and if he did not choose to do so, it seemed to me that he should not be allowed to do so when he had submitted to jurisidiction and had objected simply because he had been defeated by an adverse order on the merits. The object in view is to obtain finality on proceedings under Chapter XII, in which only an ad interim order can be passed and to make the parties have recourse to the Civil Court to which admittedly they must ultimately go. I should have been glad to have had the benefit of my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans' arguments yesterday when I was trying to convince the Council that the Magistrate's jurisdiction was very often dangerously exercised, for I am quite sure that what he said to-day in endeavouring to show that the Magistrates do not exercise a proper discretion in such cases and mischievously interfere in matters more properly cognizable by the Civil Courts, would have been of the greatest assistance to me then. However, the Council will, on the other hand, believe that although I endeavoured to restrict the jurisdiction of the Magistrates yesterday within what I considered legitimate bounds, I am in no way in favour of restricting their jurisdiction when it has been so exercised without objection raised at the proper time. Sir Griffith Evans has referred with great sorrow to a case which was brought before him of possession of a char in which the Magistrate refused to consider the question of possession. In regard to this I have no doubt that the Magistrate had facts before him to justify his opinion that in a newly-formed char it was really impossible to ascertain who was in possession of it. Of course he ought to have endeavoured to do so. I do not mean at all to justify his action. I do not know the number of years that Magistrate had been in the service, but I should say he had been reading Act IV of 1840, section 5, for he followed the law as there expressed. That section I submitted to the Lieutenant-Governor for his opinion in connexion with the matter under discussion. It is a section that expressly declares that in the case of a char, or newly-formed lands, the Magistrate should decide in accordance with the right of the parties. That section was repealed when the Code of 1861 came into force, but it was to some extent replaced by the section which now appears as 146, which enables the Magistrate to attach property if he should find on the evidence that neither party has satisfied him that he was in possession. Instead, therefore, of enabling him to exercise the rights of civil jurisdiction, the law empowers a Magistrate summarily to attach the property and hold it until the conclusion of the suit before a Civil Court. I wish now to refer to the case upon which the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans laid great stress yesterday, and I am not quite sure whether he mentioned it as against the High Court or that it had his approval. It is the case known as the Katras Jherriah case. The parties were in possession, some of one portion of the property and some of another, and the learned Judges came to the conclusion that it was quite impossible to say who was in possession of any particular portion, and so they attached the entire property. In that case it was not the Magistrate but the Judges of the High Court who refused to decide, or considered that the evidence was not sufficient to enable them to decide, who was in possession. The long and short of this matter is that the contending parties must eventually go to the Civil Courts, and they will have before them an order of the Magistrate on facts submitted for his decision as to actual possession. If the party to whom that order is adverse desires to get it set aside he should do so by some suit in the Civil Court. It may be that he can obtain relief only by proof of his own title to the property. But the sooner the parties leave the criminal jurisdiction the better. I can point out cases which have been before the High Court in which there have been remands for further inquiry by Magistrates, certainly once if not twice, and that these proceedings which profess to be summary, and should be summary, have extended over years. No doubt such cases are exceptional, but they should not be possible."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS said:—"My Lord, I am pleased to find myself to-day on the same side as the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep.

"I trust that nothing which I said in discussing section 145 of this Bill implied, and that nothing which I am about to say will imply, any disrespect to the High Court or any depreciation of the immense value of the Court in supervising and keeping straight the Courts which are subordinate to them. But it must be owned, I think, that with regard to Chapter XII of the Code the interference of the Court has had far from satisfactory results.

"I shewed when dealing with section 145 that the High Court's predecessor, the Nizamat Adalat, had no power whatever to review an order passed under Act IV of 1840, which was analogous to Chapter XII, and it was only after the passing of Act XXV of 1861 that the High Court for the first time claimed the power to revise such an order.

"As to the general nature of the interference now exercised, I cannot do better than refer the Council to a note in Sir Henry Prinsep's edition of the Criminal Procedure Code.

'Thus' (it is said) 'the result of proceedings inconsiderately taken by a Magistrate is sometimes to disturb a long and uninterrupted possession and to be the means of at least seriously imperilling titles to valuable properties It will be observed that in reported cases the High Court, probably for these reasons, has shown a great inclination to restrain the action of Magistrates, and to set aside their orders on grounds which are sometimes very technical.'

"In other words, because Magistrates sometime make mistakes in working the law, the High Court set themselves to render the law generally inoperative.

"I think that a Magistrate required to act rapidly in the preservation of the public peace should not be subject to th s sort of restraint.

"In speaking on section 145 I quoted a ruling of the Court in which it was said that 'the law contemplates that the time of the institution of proceedings and the time of deciding the case is practically identical.' I will now read some observations made by the Court in case of Read v. Richardson, printed in I. L. R. 14 Cal. 362 :—

'We have considered this case at great length, and, departing from the ordinary rule which the Court prescribes to itself in cases of revision, we have thought it desirable to go into the whole of the evidence in the case, with the view of putting ourselves in full possession of all the facts appearing upon it, and we have also kept in mind the circumstance which is constantly brought before us in these cases that, as between the two parties to the present dispute, section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is being used for a purpose wholly alien to that for which it was originally intended, and one calculated to produce, in whosoever's favour it is made, very unexpected and unfair results; in fact, that a squabble about sown grass is to be turned into an important judicial decision as to the boundary of two large estates. That is a state of things which we regard with great disapproval, and which it is the object of this Court to discourage as far as possible; and as we see in this case that the decision, whichever way it went, is calculated to have this effect in a very high degree, we have felt it necessary to scrutinize with great minuteness the legal grounds upon which the decision rests, and the adequacy of the evidence which supports the decision at which the Magistrate has arrived.'

"In other words, the learned Judges appear to have had regard entirely to the private interests of the parties, and to have disapproved of their being put in jeopardy by proceedings under section 145; they therefore 'scrutinized with great minuteness' the legal grounds of the Magistrate's order and examined the adequacy of the evidence. This is a case in which, as the Hon'ble Mover of the amendment will see, the High Court has gone into the evidence.

"At one time it is held that a separate case should, strictly speaking, be instituted in respect of each plot held separately by any person or persons. Yet we have it on Sir Henry Prinsep's authority (which I have not thought it necessary to examine further) that in another case 109 plots held by various tenants of different contending villages were dealt with in the same proceedings, and in another that the right to receive rent from land comprising more than 300 villages in two parganas was in dispute and dealt with in one case.

"The Court examines a case with the object of seeing if the breach of the peace is 'imminent,' that is to say, of seeing if the dispute has been allowed to go so far that the danger is great and serious. They see whether the Magistrate's action is technically justifiable by the sufficiency of the information on paper.

"In short, if the purpose of the revising authority has not been done to restrict and render nugatory the law which is intended to give the Magistrate a rough and ready means of ensuring that the peace shall be kept, that has certainly been the result of their action.

"I cannot dispute that Magistrates are sometimes careless and inconsiderate; and I should never think of denying that the High Court may sometimes detect errors, and that upon the whole their deliberate judgment formed with the assistance of a powerful Bar is likely to be more accurate than that of an officer who has to consider rapidly rather the immediate good of the public than the effect of his order on the private rights of the contending parties. Yet, I think, that a body so unfriendly to the administration of the law by the Magistrates, as the High Court admittedly has been, is not well suited to control that administration.

"One unfortunate result of the system of revision, which has grown to be very nearly a system of appeal, has been greatly to protract enquiries under this chapter and to deprive them of that summary character which was so much, and so rightly, insisted on yesterday by my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep, and which to me also appears to be essential to the useful working of the law. However rapid may be the proceedings before the Magistrate, the case is not over till the High Court has done with it. But the Magistrate himself is likely to elaborate proceedings which will possibly be subjected to acute and hostile criticism. Upon the whole, and admitting that there is something to be said on the other side, I think it is better to risk mistakes on the part of some Magistrates than to perpetuate the condition of perplexity and difficulty in which all are kept under present conditions. I am constrained to vote against the amendment."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBER NATH :—"I am entirely in favour of the amendment moved by the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans. I must say I have heard with great surprise some doctrines enunciated in this Council recommending as it were the establishment of a 'benevolent despotism." With due deference, I beg I may be excused for taking exception to the remarks that have unfortunately been made reflecting upon the character and duties of lawyers as a body, or upon the position of confidence and trust which the Chartered High Courts in the country have, justly occupied."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR :—"My Lord, I do trust that nothing will be done to take away the summary character of the proceedings under section 145. We passed yesterday the section which declared that the Magistrate's orders were to be final, and, although it may be said that revision is different from appeal, we have the evidence of the High Court itself to show that the effect of dealing with these cases on revision is the same as dealing with them on appeal. I will not trouble the Council with long quotations—we have had perhaps enough of them—but if Hon'ble Members refer to the opinion of Mr. Justice Rampini they will see why there ought to be no powers of revision under this section.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Stevens' amendment was yesterday negatived though much has since transpired to show that the mere fact of the Magistrate having to carry back his enquiry a few weeks makes little practical difference in the proceedings. For instance repeated mention has been made of the Khattras Jherriah case. I will only say that the curious fact in connexion with that case is this that the Judges said then that no hard-and-fast rule, as to the exact point of time to which an enquiry should be directed could be laid down: and they pointed out the absurdity of precluding the Magistrate from enquiring into anything before the date of his order, especially as the Magistrate had recorded that he ought to have recorded this 13 days sooner than he did.

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :—"I hope I may have misheard the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens, but his words as I took them down were that 'the High Court was hostile to the administration of the law.' I do not know whether he meant this law or the law in general."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS :—"Unfriendly to the administration of this law by the Magistrates."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :—"Even that seems rather a strong thing to say. However I will let my hon'ble friend settle his account with the Hon'ble Member of the High Court who is next to him, and I will proceed to the other matters. I am very much obliged to the Hon'ble Member for having recalled to my memory Richardson's case, in regard to which the High Court did depart from their usual rule and scrutinised carefully the evidence in the case. It was, as you will find on looking at it, a case in which there had been a mala fide and very improper use made of this section. Under the circumstances the High Court made an exception of the case. I do not think that is a case in which the High Court should be quoted as having wrongly exercised its powers of revision considering the nature of the case, and the fact that they substituted for the erroneous order another order equally effective for keeping the peace. Then the other case the Hon'ble Member has presented me with is a still more startling instance of the absolute necessity for revision. It is what is known as the Bijni case, and I am glad my Hon'ble friend has recalled it to my mind. The case was this: there were three hundred and odd villages, the whole of the Bijni Raj covering two very large Parganas. The Magistrate had simply considered who was in possession of the central cutcherry and had not considered the evidence of possession in the various villages and the order was manifestly wrong. My Hon'ble friend has also reminded me of another case. I have known all these cases because I have been in a great many of them and my Hon'ble friend has refreshed my memory. It was a case of over one hundred separate plots of land. The High Court said the order was entirely contrary to the true meaning of the Code. Now the point of it is that these orders were absolutely wrong and irregular. According to the view of some Hon'ble Members it does not matter what is done: but once let the Magistrate dispossess you of your land, and what is the result. In these char cases the question of who is in possession will frequently determine the fate of the case, because in regard to many of these chars it is often impossible to establish a title. The man who has possession keeps them for ever, so that you must remember that in sending him to law which you do so gaily by means of these absolutely wrong orders—orders in contravention of the law—you are in many cases depriving a man of the land altogether. If it seems to the majority of this Council right to arm the inferior Magistrates with these despotic and uncontrolled powers of dealing with property, they have the power to do so. It will be interesting to watch the result."

The Council divided:—

Ayes—6.	Noes—12.
The Hon'ble Gangadhar Rao Madhav Chitnavis.	The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Pandit Suraj Kaul.
The Hon'ble Sir G. H. P. Evans.	The Hon'ble F. A. Nicholson.
The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur P. Ananda Charlu.	The Hon'ble J. J. D. LaTouche.
The Hon'ble Joy Gobind Law.	The Hon'ble H. E. M. James.
The Hon'ble Pandit Bishambar Nath.	The Hon'ble Sir H. T. Prinsep.
The Hon'ble Rahimtula Muhammad Sayani.	The Hon'ble C. C. Stevens.
	The Hon'ble Sir A. C. Trevor.
	The Hon'ble Major-General Sir E. H. H. Collen.
	The Hon'ble M. D. Chalmers.
	The Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn.
	The Hon'ble Sir J. Westland.
	His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor.

So the motion was negatived.

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH moved that sub-clause (5) of clause 439 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee be omitted. He said: "In moving this amendment, which also stands in my name, I need not expatiate upon the reasons that I have assigned in its support. I may be permitted to call attention to my note of dissent, appended to the Report of the Select Committee, which forms a part of the proposed Bill as printed. The paragraph bearing upon the point runs thus:—

'Clause 439(5).—This sub-section (5) tends to deprive the accused of the benefit of double remedy, which has been allowed to him under the existing law. It is rather unreasonable that while the High Court is to exercise, on its own motion, the power of revision, even in a case of this description, the party aggrieved is denied the right of moving it for the same purpose.' "

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"I must oppose this amendment. This is a matter which was very carefully considered by the Select Committee. The Committee came to the conclusion that where the law gave an express appeal then that the person to whom that appeal was given ought to take advantage of it and ought not to have, so to speak, two barrels to his gun. The clause as amended by the Select Committee is carefully drafted so as not to interfere with the power of the High Court to move ex proprio motu. It is only where an accused person has an appeal, that the section provides that he shall not proceed by an application for revision. The High Court can still interfere of its own motion if it thinks fit."

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI:—"I am in favour of the amendment."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that the following proviso be added to sub-clause (6) of clause 439 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, namely:—

> "Provided that applications from parties for the exercise of the High Court's powers of revision shall be in writing and be submitted in the first instance to the Court which passed the order or sentence complained of, and that that Court shall be bound to forward them forthwith direct to the High Court with such comments or report thereon as may assist the High Court in coming to a conclusion."

He said:—"My Lord, I invite the Council's attention to the proviso proposed for this reason. The sub-clause emphasises and brings to notice the enormous powers of revision the High Courts have got. Scattered all over the Code are allusions to the High Court's powers of revision. Now, one of the blots on our system is that there is no finality in our judicial proceedings. There is the first appeal, the second appeal, and then an application for revision. Now by the original Code the High Court—then called the Sadr Court—could only revise at the instance of a District Magistrate or a Civil Court. It could only pass orders on proceedings called for of its own motion on a point of law. Gradually the powers of the High Court have been enlarged, and the result is that in many places a person dissatisfied with the way his case is going rushes off at once to the High Court and gets an ex parte order to stay proceedings. Now, my Lord, it seems to me that this is hardly judicious. At any rate the High Court might wait until the proceedings in the Lower Court are ended, and supposing a Magistrate has convicted a man of a crime and an appeal has been brought to the Sessions Court, and the Sessions Court has rejected it, the case should ordinarily end there. But the convicted person being made aware by his pleader of this sub-clause will, if he is rich enough, probably apply to the High Court for revision. I admit that for extreme cases the power exists already, it would be difficult now to limit it, as at first, to points of law only, but the use of the power is becoming something like an abuse. It appears to me, therefore, only reasonable that the High Court should not issue orders in too great a hurry, assuming that the lower Court is probably wrong, and on ex parte statements, but that when an application is made by a private person to revise a Lower Court's proceedings, it should not interfere with those proceedings until it has heard what the Lower Court has got to say first. The new sub-section is sure to greatly stimulate applications for revision. Therefore I venture to suggest that the proviso of which I have given notice should be added to the sub-section."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"I do not myself think that the amendment ought to be accepted, and will very briefly state the reasons. In the first place, the High Court have ample powers to make rules, and if this is a desirable rule to make they could include this provision in a rule. But then I do not see the necessity for it at all. If I understand the Hon'ble Member, the point seems to be this, when an application for revision is made he wants the application to be made through the Lower Court which passes the order so that that Court may have an opportunity of giving any explanation that is necessary. Well, I think that amendment must be proposed under a misapprehension. I cannot imagine a Court of Justice listening to any reflection on a judicial officer without giving that officer the most ample opportunity of explanation. I cannot imagine a Court of Justice doing it, or a body English gentlemen doing it. I am perfectly certain that the practice of the High Court must be that, if they take notice of any allegation against a Magistrate, if they do not dismiss it as absurd and ridiculous, that they would call upon the Magistrate for an explanation and give every weight to that explanation. It seems to me that this proposed amendment of my Hon'ble friend's must be founded on a misapprehension as to what takes place."

The Hon'ble MR. NICHOLSON said:—"There are several objections to this amendment, but I will only mention two, viz., that it is both unnecessary and burdensome.

"The object of the amendment is that due representation of the Magistrate's view of a case shall be laid before the High Court before it proceeds to dispose finally of an application for revision. Now, as presumed by the Hon'ble the Legal Member, this is amply provided for in practice; in the Calcutta and Madras High Courts to my knowledge, and presumably therefore in all other High Courts. That practice is as follows: when an application for revision is actually admitted, the High Court addresses proceedings to the District Magistrate having jurisdiction, calling upon him to submit the record and to show cause why the application should not be granted. The District Magistrate accordingly submits the record with the observations of the Magistrate whose order is in question, supplemented by his own. This is not all; the High Court simultaneously sends to the Public Prosecutor (Government Solicitor or Legal Remembrancer) a copy of its proceedings addressed to the District Magistrate; the Public Prosecutor addresses the District Magistrate for instructions as to opposing the application, and it is, I believe, understood that in all such cases the Public Prosecutor may, and in all important cases that he should, appear in support of the order. Hence there is the amplest provision that no order shall come under revision without the fullest representation of the Magistrate before the High Court; the amendment is therefore unnecessary.

"The amendment would also be burdensome on the Magistracy, who would have to report upon every case in which application for revision might be made, whereas at present they have to report only upon such cases as are actually admitted and referred for records; these of course, are far less numerous than applications, of which large numbers are rejected upon mere presentation.

"I therefore oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS:—"The Hon'ble Mr. Nicholson has correctly stated the practice as it is in the Calcutta High Court. What happens is that no order is made calling for the record unless a good case is made out. It has to be made out on affidavits, and in almost all the cases it is necessary to have copies of the various orders which are relied on and which are alleged to be erroneous, and they are laid before the High Court. Then, if the Court considers that a sufficient case has been made out, it issues a rule on the opposite party, if there is one, and on the District Magistrate to show cause. Then cause is shown in due course with the explanation of the Magistrate. But of course the fate of an enormous number of these applications for revision is that they never come to anything at all, being rejected. Now the effect of this amendment is that these frivolous applications, instead of being rejected, should be sent down, in the first instance, to the local authorities, and that they should report upon them before the High Court should be at liberty to reject them."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU:—"The Hon'ble Mr. Nicholson has stated the practice in Madras most accurately, and I have no other remarks to make on the subject."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP:—"I would point out that there are two classes of cases which come before the High Court for revision. One is where a case is referred by a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate to the High Court for the correction of some order which has occasioned a failure of justice. The other is when the High Court is moved either on the application of one of the parties or acts of its own accord. Now, in the first instance, under the orders of the High Court of Calcutta, the explanation of the Magistrate concerned should be submitted along with the reference or report. In a case of the other class that is when action on revision is taken directly by the High Court, it is the invariable practice to give a rule on the District Magistrate or the Sessions Judge. By this means in both classes of cases before any order in revision modifying or setting aside an order by an inferior Court is passed the High Court in revision has either the explanation of the particular Court concerned or has presented before it that explanation if it be desired to defend that order. The rule is directed to the District Magistrate rather than to the inferior Magistrate who may have passed the order in position, because the District Magistrate is responsible for the whole work of the district; and he invariably obtains, if he thinks it necessary, the explanation of the particular officer concerned, or he asks the Legal Remembrancer through the recognised Government Law Officers to appear to defend the order. The practice of the Calcutta High Court is, as my Hon'ble friend on the right (Mr. James), would have it. I am not able to speak of the practice of other High Courts. But the amendment seems to me to be open to first objection as it would interpose great delay before an order which is undoubtedly illegal and most unjust could be set aside: it would fetter the action of the High Court: and it would interpose great delay which can easily be avoided under a practice such as I have described as in force in Bengal."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS:—"I do not know that I can add much to what has been said already, but I may say that, in the course of an unusually long experience as a District Magistrate, I have never known a case in which the procedure described by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep has not been followed. Therefore I think this amendment is unnecessary. I think it is open to objection as causing a great deal of unnecessary work for, and I might almost say imposing needless anxiety on, subordinate officers."

The Hon'ble SIR ARTHUR TREVOR:—"I would ask the Hon'ble mover of the amendment whether he did not intend his proviso to refer to applications for transfer rather than to applications for the exercise of the power of revision."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES:—"I certainly, as I mentioned to the Hon'ble Sir Arthur Trevor, intended moving that a similar proviso should be added to clause 526, where it is even more wanted than to this clause; but after discussing it with other Hon'ble Members I thought that it would only be a waste of the time of the Council to attempt to limit the power of the High Court in that particular, and therefore I abandoned my intention."

The Hon'ble SIR ARTHUR TREVOR:—"I should have been prepared to accept an amendment of section 526 in the sense proposed, but I see no occasion for such an amendment in connection with applications for revision."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS moved that sub-clause (6) of clause 439 of the Bill as amended be omitted. He said:—"My Lord, it is not necessary that I should detain the Council by arguing at any length regarding this amendment. Sub-clause (6) was inserted in the Bill (as the Report of the Select Committee shows) in order to make it clear that orders passed under section 108 of the Code should be subject to the revision of the High Court. I believe that the Committee were unanimous in thinking that they ought to be subject to such revision. On looking again at clause 435 of the Bill, I find that the High Court or any Sessions Judge or District Magistrate or duly empowered Subdivisional Magistrate may call for and examine the record of any proceeding before any inferior Criminal Court for the purpose of satisfying itself or himself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding, sentence or order recorded or passed, and as to the regularity of any proceedings of such inferior Court. This appears to me clearly to cover the case of proceedings under section 108 of this Code; if I am right, the necessity for sub-clause (6) does not exist. It is open to objection in that it seems likely to have a more far-reaching effect than was intended by the Select Committee. Since it is apparently superfluous in any case, it is better that it should be omitted from the Code. Accordingly, I move the amendment which stands in my name."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"I think that, on the whole, this amendment is right and that sub-section (6) is unnecessary. If you look at the opening words of the section,—sub-section (1) runs:—

"In the case of any proceeding the record of which has been called for by itself or which has been reported for orders, or which otherwise comes to its knowledge, the High Court may, in its discretion, exercise its powers of revision.'

"Well, those proceedings are referred to in the section quoted by the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens, and I think the newly-added section may be open to objection from two different aspects. In the first place, it may seem to imply that in the case of any order the High Court is bound to exercise its powers of revision and is not merely authorised to exercise them as in the case at present. It would seem to override the existing discretion of the High Court in dealing with applications for revision. But there is another objection to the sub-section. It might be held to limit the powers of the High Court in revision. There are many proceedings which cannot be correctly described as orders which the High Court has power to revise As the sub-section stands it might be contended that the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court was intended by this to be confined to orders, and not to proceedings which may not necessarily involve an order. For these reasons, I am inclined to agree with the Hon'ble Member's amendment."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS:—"I agree with the amendment. It seems to me that the sub-section is absolutely unnecessary when the fullest powers are given in section 435. You cannot make them fuller, and the only result of this will be to introduce confusion. It cannot possibly do any good."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBHAR NATH:—"Without meaning to oppose the motion I think I may be permitted to remind the Hon'ble the Legal Member, that the sub-section now proposed to be cut out, was added in the Select Committee, by the Hon'ble Member himself with the object of making it positively clear that the revisional powers of High Courts were to be exercised generally, unless expressly prohibited by any specific provision in the Bill. I have a distinct recollection of the fact, and consider it desirable simply to allude to it."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR:—"Much of what I intended to say has been anticipated by the Hon'ble Members who have spoken, and I will be as brief as possible. The sub-section is not required and its introduction is open to serious objection. There is, however, no room for doubt that the High Court will possess the requisite power without any express provision. Its revisional powers are very wide. Under section 15 of the Charter establishing the High Courts (24 and 25 Vict., c. 104), these Courts are vested with superintendence over all the subordinate Courts, and may sent aside any order made by such Courts without jurisdiction. Under section 435 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the High Courts may call for and examine the record of any proceeding before an inferior Court, and, under section 439, may, on such inspection, set aside any order which is incorrect, illegal, or otherwise improper. Any limits to the inerference of the High Courts are such only as the Judges themselves may think fit to impose, and it rests with them, on consideration of the circumstances of each case, to decide whether or not they should interfere. Individual Judges make large use of this discretion in rejecting applications which appear to them trivial or which relate to orders that do not, in their opinion, affect the just decision of the particular case. It is much to be desired that the Court should lay down for itself sound rules of practice on this and many other points. At present there is great dissimilarity between the practice of different Benches, and I trust the present Chief Justice will find time to deal with the matter. Meantime I may observe that, there being no provision in the Bill to the contrary, the High Court will obviously possess, in respect of orders under section 108, the same powers as it is competent to exercise in regard to all other orders under the Code, and any express provision, vesting it with such powers, would be superfluous. In any case, such provision, if insisted on, should have reference specifically to that section, and should be added to it. The new sub-section to section 429, being of a general character, thus goes beyond the requirements of the case. It is further calculated to have far-reaching effects which are not contemplated. It declares every order of an inferior Court subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court, and cannot but encourage the filing of applications for revision in respect of many orders which have hitherto been usually acquiesced in. This encouragement it is not desirable that the Code should give. Already the privilege of moving the Superior Courts in their revisional jurisdiction is greatly abused. The High Court's last Annual Report on the Administration of Criminal Justice, that for 1896, shows that, in that year, motions for revision were made to the High Court in 722 cases, of which no less than 404 were rejected summarily, while 59 were rejected after the issue of a rule. In the Courts of the Sessions Judges and District Magistrates, the applications of 5,291 persons, out of a total of 7,731 who applied for revision, were rejected summarily, or after the issue of notice on the opposite parties. These figures indicate the extent to which the time of the superior Courts is wasted by groundless applications for revision; and they imply, besides, much needless harrassment and expense to the prosecutors, who feel constrained to appear and resist such applications. This evil would be greatly aggravated if the new sub-section is passed into law. The provision would be appealed to when the High Court is indisposed to grant rules on motions; Counsel or Pleaders would be able to argue justification for pressing for a hearing in respect of any and every order of the inferior Courts, even say, an order for remand, by pointing to the express declaration that every order is subject to revision by the High Court; and the Judges might often feel embarrassed in exercising the discretion of summarily rejecting applications, which may now be freely exercised. The disposition, already sufficiently marked, to disregard the authority of the lower Courts, would be increased, and this, combined with the probability that the High Court would have to yield and grant rules in a larger number of cases than hitherto, could not fail to affect injuriously the administration of criminal justice in the districts. Respect for the law has already been weakened throughout the Province by the latitude which is afforded, for contesting the orders of the lower Courts, however correct, and it is of the greatest importance, in the interests of good administration, that this latitude should be curtailed rather than extended. The new sub-section should, therefore, be removed from the Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that in clause 498 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words "or Court of Session," in line 6, be omitted. He said:—"Among other powers that Superior Courts have is that of interfering with the powers of Magistrates refusing bail. Personally, I submit that the whole question of bail in the Code of Criminal Procedure is very unsatisfactory, but as this is only a consolidating Act, and as it would take up the Council's time unnecessarily, I shall not enter into that. The Government of Bombay request that, in accordance with the general policy of reducing unnecessary interference with the Lower Courts, the words 'or Court of Session' should be cut out of clause 498 of the Bill. It is only part of a very great question, but I submit the amendment for the Council's opinion. I notice in one of the Bengal papers one of the officers recommends the same thing as the Government of Bombay. He remarks:—

'The words "a Court of Session" should in my opinion, be omitted. There is a tendency to an overcarefulness of the liberty of the subject at the expense of the community shown by the Sessions Court: and it is to be remembered that the Magistrate, who in the majority of cases represents the Government interest, is never given a chance of representing the peculiar cases which led him to refuse bail.'

"Personally in my experience the power has not worked satisfactorily. I think, on the whole, when a man has been convicted or committed for a non-bailable offence, and is in prison, he ought to stay there and not to be allowed out on bail except on the special order of the High Court. The provision is mostly worked in the favour of wealthy offenders."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"It is a matter for the consideration of the Council. The law as it stands has been the law of the land for a good many years. I quite agree that the law as to bail is not in a very satisfactory state. That is a very large question into which we are not going to enter. We are asked to alter this provision which has been in force for a great many years, and I do not think the Hon'ble Member has brought forward any very cogent reasons for the change."

The Hon'ble MR. NICHOLSON said:—"The law has not been altered by the present Bill, and no good case is made out for omitting these words. As the Hon'ble Mover has himself stated, the provisions regarding bail are difficult and not altogether satisfactory and should be dealt with as a whole, while the present amendment deals only with one small item. I think that we should not meddle unnecessarily and by scraps with such a matter. Moreover, my own experience is that the power of the superior Courts to admit to bail is very useful, and one which could not with propriety be denied to a Court of the status and authority of a Court of Session."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :- I oppose the amendment; no case appears to me to have been made out for it. The most the Hon'ble Member has said is that he has known several cases where it has worked unsatisfactorily, but he has not informed the Council what he means by its working unsatisfactorily. He has not told us that the men have absconded—absconding is a very difficult matter in this country, and if they appear at the trial, what is the object in keeping them in jail, as my Hon'ble friend desires to keep them whether they are innocent or guilty? They say they are innocent men when they appeal, they give bail and they say we shall appear at the trial, and they do appear. But my friend says not that he fears they will not appear but that he prefers them to be kept in jail; why he wants them to be kept in jail I am at a loss to understand."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU :—"It will be a great advantage to the parties appearing at the trial, in the part of the country to which the Hon'ble Member belongs. He has been referring to long distances for various parties. If it is to be one Court the parties have to go very long distances."

The Hon'ble SIR H. PRINSEP :—"I will only add to what has passed before that the law has remained in its present form since the Code of 1861 without any alteration."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS :—"I have one other objection and that is, that the effect of the amendment would be to throw a very large amount of comparatively unimportant work upon the High Courts."

The Hon'ble SIR ARTHUR TREVOR :—My Lord, it seems to me that even if the amendment were carried, the Court of Session would still be able to take action of the kind to which objection is taken in the exercise of their power of revision under section 435.

The Honb'le SIR JAMES WESTLAND :—"I agree in opposing the amendment."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP moved that to clause 522 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the following sub-clause be added, namely:—

"(2) If the conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, the order under sub-section (1) shall become void."

But after the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers drew his attention to section 423 (d) of the Bill as amended, he, with permission, withdrew his amendment.

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH moved that in clause 526, sub-clause (8), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words "(unless it is of opinion that the application is made for the purpose of delay or otherwise prejudicing the course of justice)" be omitted. He said:—"In moving this amendment, I have to submit that it is neither expedient nor wise to allow such a discretion to the Magistrate to whom the application for leave to transfer is to be made. For further reasons, I may be permitted to point to my note of dissent attached to the Report of the Select Committee, which forms a part of the Bill, as printed."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"This is a matter for the Council to consider. It is not a matter of which I have any personal experience, but when my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep and I were considering this Bill in Simla, he called my attention to certain cases which I see he mentions in his note, where this privilege of asking for a transfer and asking for an adjournment in the meantime had been grossly abused. I have no doubt he will be able to give us particulars of these cases."

THE Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :—"I do not deny that this power given in 1884 is liable to abuse, and has been abused. In fact, I pointed out at the time in the debate that it was a statutory power of delay that would make in favour of the long purse. At the same time I do not propose to vote against the amendment, for this reason: it was granted under very peculiar circumstances; it is embodied in the Act of 1884, and although it is not part of and has no relation to that compromise, I would sooner not meddle with that Act if I could help it. Unless the trouble was very serious, indeed I think it wiser to leave it alone. The power was granted after great deliberation. The conclusion the Government came to was that they would take the chance of its occasional abuse, and as I say, not on account of its merits but for other reasons, I do not oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU :—"For some years after this section was enacted it was thought that the adjournment, intended for the purpose of moving the High Court, worked out a complete stoppage of the trial. If that is still the law, it may work with difficulty. I believe the Courts have laid down that the trial may go on during the period granted by that adjournment. The only thing is the point up to which the trial might proceed."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP :—"The objection which has been raised by the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans that this is a portion of what is known as the Ilbert Bill compromise."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :—"It is not a portion of the compromise."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP :—"I should correct myself. The fact that this portion of the Code formed part of the amendment of the law which was the result of what is known as the Ilbert Bill was not present in my mind when I suggested to Mr. Chalmers that in view of some reported cases it was necessary to amend the law in this respect. I have no desire to press the retention of this matter."

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI :- "I am in favour of the amendment."

The Council divided :—

The Hon'ble Rahimtula Muhammad Sayani.

So the motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS moved that in the explanation to clause 556 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, for the words "material to an inquiry or trial is alleged to have occurred" the words "material to the case is alleged to have occurred, and made an inquiry in connection with the case be substituted." He said :—"My Lord, I am inclined to think that the explanation as it now stands is somewhat defective. I fear that the Courts would construe 'viewing' a place as not including any inquiry whatever. Those who have had mufassal experience will bear me out when I say that inspections of localities are often most valuable aids to the decision of criminal cases, but they would often be deprived of much of their value if the Magistrates who made them were debarred from making any inquiry. It would indeed be difficult for him to make a useful inspection without some inquiry.

"I may mention a few instances within my own experience. One party declared that a path was a boundary of a certain field in the possession of a second party. The second party said that the path passed through his land, and had been recently made in order to allow the first party to make good his encroachment. A visit to the spot disclosed in a moment that the path had been recently made in the middle of a field which had been sown with peas, and the Magistrate found the remains of plants which had recently been destroyed in making the path.

"On going to the place where a burglary had been alleged to have been committed, the Magistrate found clear marks of digging on the inside, instead of the outside, of the wall.

"The Magistrate went to see the place where a murder had been committed. He saw the places where the witnesses were said to have been, and the information gained assisted him in proving eventually that the case as against the accused before him was entirely got up by the police.

"A charge was brought against a certain person of having illicit opium in his possession. An inspection of the locality shewed that the opium could easily have been put by another person from the outside in the place where it was found on searching the house.

"Now I maintain that none of these visits, all of which involved a little inquiry, ought to be regarded as disqualifying a Magistrate from passing orders in the cases in question.

"It is quite conceivable that there may be cases in which the inquiry might have been such as to disqualify the inquirer from giving an impartial judgment; in such circumstances he ought to stand aside. The proposed amendment will not have the effect of bringing it about that any Magistrate who has made an inspection and inquiry shall try the case, but will merely provide that, if there be no valid reason to the contrary, the mere fact that the Magistrate has made an inspection and an inquiry he shall not on that mere technical ground be prevented from trying the case.

"I think that the amendment of which the Hon'ble Mr. James has given notice goes too far, because a Magistrate who has been trying to quell a disturbance, and has perhaps been threatened or assaulted, is not likely to take a calm and dispassionately judicial view of the case. Even if he were right as to the facts, which would be scarcely likely, it would be imposing a very invidious task on him to expect him to award punishment.

"My own amendment seems to include what is necessary, and I beg to move it."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I have no objection to this amendment. It is a matter for the Council."

The Hon'ble MR. NICHOLSON said :—"I entirely concur with the amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens, and for the reasons given by him."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES :—"I agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens. I should like to point out to the Council that this section is a standing example of the mistake of making unnecessary laws. In 1882, some wise persons discovered that though there was no law in England that Magistrates interested should not try cases in which they are not, personally, but privately interested, such a law would be a useful thing in India. A Magistrate in England may not try a case against a Railway, of which he is a director, or try a tramp caught stealing his own fruit, or cases of that sort. There is no law against it, however, and if a Magistrate misbehaves in England it takes no little trouble before he is taken off the Commission of peace. Here there is no trouble at all. The Magistrates are all appointed by Government, and are removeable by Government, and if any Magistrate tried a case in which he was privately interested he could be reported and gazetted out of his office at a moment's notice. The result of putting this section in is, that some Judges of the Calcutta High Court have held under it that an officer carrying out the ordinary duties of his office in keeping down crime is a person interested, and they actually so far strained the common meaning of the English language as to say that a person only officially interested has a personal or private interest in the case. The main objection I have to the High Court's proceeding is that it means to say that you do not trust your officers. As every officer here will tell you, it is the business of the Magistrate to take cognizance of and put down crime. Now, when a Magistrate takes cognizance of a case there is a section under which the accused has the power of objecting to be tried by the Magistrate who is taking cognizance of it, and though that is a section which personally I should like to see amended, it gives ample protection to an accused. As a matter of fact, I know parts of the country where the Calcutta High Court's interpretation of what personally interested means, Districts where Magistrates do not grow behind every hedge as they do in Bengal, would prevent the law being enforced at all. Two years ago the District Magistrate and two Assistants, the only First Class Magistrates in a District in Sind, spent a year in hunting dacoits, eight of whom had to be shot down, and three of whom were caught and hung. And there was no one else but the three Magistrates to try, and commit, the prisoners when once they were caught. I think, however, it will save the time of the Council if I say that I will accept the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens' amendment instead of that of which I gave notice."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP:—"I did not intend to speak on this amendment, but there is one statement made by the hon'ble mover which calls for an explanation from me. The Hon'ble Mr. James says that the Judges of the High Court in acting on this section have shown a distrust of their Subordinate Courts. He has not, however, understood the reason why the Judges have made use of this section. They have not been actuated by any distrust of their officers, but they have acted on the principle laid down in numerous English cases in which it has been held that it was of the highest importance that the Courts should have the confidence of the public, that regard should be had not so much to the motive which might be supposed to bias a Judge or Magistrate as to the reasonable susceptibilities of the parties concerned; and that it was a most important object to clear away everything that might engender suspicion and distrust of a tribunal so as to promote the feeling of confidence in the administration of justice which is so essential to social order and security. Wherever therefore any case has come within this rule the Judges have removed its trial to some other Court. The particular officers concerned should not feel aggrieved and regard such an order as any slight. They should rather appreciate the object contemplated and recognize also that orders under this section are not made lightly and without some good reason to attain that object."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS said:—"My Lord, I beg to propose that the newly introduced words 'or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity' be omitted from the explanation to section 556. These words make the scope of the section too wide, and their retention, I am afraid, may at times interfere with the impartiality of the administration of justice. For instance, there is nothing to prevent a Magistrate who has acted as the president or responsible head of a municipality from ordering the prosecution of a person and trying the person himself. Again, a Magistrate who has acted in a particular case in his executive capacity as head of the police, may, if the words be retained, safely try any case initiated by himself as a Judge—a proceeding which cannot be too strongly condemned.

"Any interest, however small, ought in my opinion to disqualify a Magistrate or Judge from trying a case in which he is interested.

"I therefore think that, in the interests of justice, the words 'or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity' should be omitted."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"I must oppose this amendment I do not put the same construction on the section as the Hon'ble Member does."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS moved that for clause 557 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee the following clause be substituted, namely:—

"557. No pleader who practises in the Court of any Magistrate in a Presidency-town or district shall sit as a Magistrate in such Court or in any Court within the jurisdiction of such Court.

Practising pleader not to sit as Magistrate in certain Courts."

He said:—"My Lord, I think the members of the Select Committee were unanimous in regarding it as improper that a pleader should alternate between his practice as a pleader and active participation in judicial work in the jurisdiction within which he pleads.

"I believe that in England the law is more strict than the proposed section 557 would make it. But I think that we may safely relax it still further. There are many pleaders (using the term in the widest sense) who do not take criminal practice at all, and I see no reason why they should be excluded. Again there are others who may practise in one part of a district, who need not be debarred from sitting as Magistrates in another.

"Pleaders form such a very large proportion of the educated public of Bengal that the District-officers expect of them, and receive from them, very considerable help. I think it would be practically inconvenient to take stronger measures than are necessary to avoid the scandal at which the section is aimed. I therefore move the amendment in my name."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"This is an amendment which may be accepted. Speaking for myself I should have preferred the clause as it stood. I think the clause as it stands and as framed by the Select Committee is right in principle, but in the peculiar circumstances of the mufassal there is no doubt it might give rise to a certain amount of difficulty, and therefore I am prepared to sacrifice a certain amount of principle to practical convenience and to accept the clause proposed by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Stevens."

The Hon'ble MR. LATOUCHE:—"The principle of the clause as framed by the Select Committee is unquestionably sound but in the Provinces practical difficulties arise if all practising pleaders are prohibited from sitting on Benches The amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens will be a convenience in outlying Districts."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS:—"I have been desired to bring before the Council the state of affairs in Calcutta with regard to the Presidency Magistrates. The facts I have been asked to lay before you are these:—It appears there are some of the attorneys of the High Court who have sat as Honorary Magistrates—one of them, I think, for about twenty years—and I believe they have done very good work. They are attorneys of the High Court, and of course, so far as their being attorneys of the High Court is concerned, it might be all right so long as they do not practise in the Police Courts, but, as a matter of fact, two of these gentlemen who have been Honorary Magistrates for a very long time do practise before the Stipendiary Magistrate, and the difficulty was as to what should be their proper course, there being no law about it at all. I am told they obtained opinions from the Advocate General to the effect that probably they would be within the spirit of the rule, having regard to the peculiar state of things in Calcutta, if they abstained from ever appearing before any Bench of Magistrates and only appeared before Stipendiary Magistrates. That is what they have done for a good many years. They have not appeared before any Benches, they themselves sitting on some of the Benches. I thought I should bring this to the notice of the Council because the change may cause a certain amount of inconvenience. As regards the principle of the thing, I am entirely at one with the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers. The principle must be observed, the only question is, how far we can really observe the essential principle and, at the same time, cause as little inconvenience as possible."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH :—"Clause 557 as amended by the Select Committee is, I submit, open to a practical objection. In the North-Westen Provinces and Oudh, distinguished practising vakils or pleaders are generally appointed as Honorary Magistrates in districts within the local limits of which they are respectively engaged in carrying on their profession, without any restraint or limitation. Such legal practitioners must now be prepared either to give up their practice or cease to aspire to the distinction of being selected as Honorary Magistrates. It is desirable, therefore, that the amendment moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens should be adopted and carried. The clause as amended by the Select Committee, and as I did point out to it, would also interfere with the free exercise of a patronage in the gift of the Local Government."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR :—"The amendment proposed by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Stevens has been prepared in consultation with myself and has my entire support. We are very much indebted, and the Bengal Government is particularly indebted, to the large number of gentlemen of the legal profession who have served as Honorary Magistrates throughout the mufassal, and generally I may say that, although these gentlemen have occasionally been persons practising in the Criminal Courts, there have been very few cases indeed in which, even in the shape of anonymous communications, aspersions have been cast upon their honour. But there is no doubt that the principle now to be inserted in the Code is a sound one, that a man should not shift between the Bench and the Bar, and that he ought to make his election between the two, and Mr. Stevens' amendment will not deprive us of the services of gentlemen who do not practice in the Magistrates' Courts. I am well aware of the cases in Calcutta to which my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans has drawn our attention. The gentlemen to whom he refers have done a large amount of good work on the Bench, and I should be sorry to lose their services, but on the other hand it has been pressed on me from various influential and well-informed quarters that considerable scandal has been caused in Calcutta by certain other persons executing that manœuvre which I call shifting about from the Bench to the Bar. It is very desirable that that practice should be stopped, and if the gentlemen to whom my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans has referred do not see their way to abandoning what little practice they may have in the Magistrate's Court, I am afraid we shall have to lose their services, though I hope under the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens' amendment we shall be able to see our way to retaining their services as Honorary Magistrates if they give up their practice in the Magistrates' Courts."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS :—"I wish to say that in drafting this amendment I made several efforts to reduce this clause of the Bill to the minimum compatible with the principle which we wish to embody in the Bill. I feared that the introduction of this principle might cause inconvenience and even in some cases what might be termed hardship. The terms of the amendment were arrived at after much thought and trouble.

The motion was put and agreed to.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL moved the following two amendments: that in clause 563, sub-clause (1), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, for the words "a Court having power to deal" the words "the Court which convicted the offender, or a Court which could have dealt" be substituted; also that at the end of sub-clause (2) of the same clause the words "Such Court may, after hearing the case, pass sentence" be added. He said :—"These amendments are practically only verbal amendments. A new procedure has been introduced dealing with first offenders, and it is only to make the sections a little more clear for the officers who have to work them that I suggest these additions. It is not at present expressly provided that a sentence is to be passed when the terms of the conditional release are violated, or that when the Magistrate who passed the original sentence is transferred another Magistrate may take the case up on violation of the bond."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I quite agree in the principle of these amendments, only a doubt has occurred to me as to the words of the second amendment—'Such Court may after hearing the case pass sentence.' Some doubt might arise as to the words 'after hearing the case,' because there is no case to be heard.

"I should like to ask my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans if he would consider with me for a moment the wording of this second amendment. The English Act contains no such words as it is proposed to insert here. The sentence is passed as a matter of course by the Court before which the motion is brought, but this is a new procedure in India and it may, therefore, be necessary to go into details which are not gone into in England."

After some further discussion the motion was put and the amendments were agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that in the heading to clause 565 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, for the word "Habitual" the words "Previously convicted" be substituted, and that in the marginal note to the same clause for the word "habitual" the words "previously convicted" be substituted. He said :—"My Lord, this amendment will only need two words of explanation. The marginal note says 'habitual offenders.' For many years past the term 'habitual offenders' has in Chapter VIII of the Code been used for describing a different class of offenders altogether. I would refer Hon'ble Members to the margin of section 109. The Bombay Government deprecate the expression being used for both classes. In the one case they are previously convicted persons, and in the other case persons who are by repute known to misbehave, and the Bombay Government fear that, by applying the same title to both, ultimately confusion may arise and difficulties occur. In order to prevent anything of the sort it is proposed to change the term in this chapter from 'habitual offenders' to 'previously convicted persons." I understand that no objection is likely to be raised, so I have the honour to move it."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I do not see any necessity for tha amendment; it can do no harm. A person who has been previously convicted is very like an habitual offender, and it seems to me that the difference between the two is rather like the difference between tweedledum and tweedledee. It is wholly immaterial whether it is done or not."

The motion was agreed to.

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH moved that, in Schedule II to the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, column 8, opposite the entry relating to section 124A, the words "Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate" be omitted. He said :—"It is highly desirable in the ends of justice that offences falling under section 124A should be made triable by the Court of Session with the aid of a jury or assessors. The alteration made in column 8, Schedule II, whereby such offences are made triable by District Magistrates as well, is open to objection on the grounds stated in my note of dissent."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I must oppose this amendment. The Government desire the small cases to be dealt with by Magistrates. It is undesirable that small offenders who contravene the law should have their weak and silly sayings made more public than is necessary. I remember being struck by an expression of my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans in the previous debate. He said that, when you have to disinfect infected linen, you do it as far as possible away from the busy haunts of men. Our object is that where there is a petty offence by a petty offender, which does not call for a great punishment, that that offence should be promptly dealt with, subject of course to the power of revision by the High Court. We do not want first of all an inquiry in which the offence is gone into before the Magistrate, and a second inquiry in which this nonsense is circulated by a trial before the High Court. The object is that a small punishment should be meted out as promptly as possible."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that in Schedule II to the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, column 8, opposite the entry relating to section 124A, the words "or Magistrate of the first class specially empowered by the Local Government in that behalf" be added. He said:—"In this case, on behalf of the Government, I have to move an amendment which goes back to what I originally gave notice of, and which to some extent alters the amendment proposed by the Select Committee. I will very briefly state the reason why the Government cannot accept what seemed to be the right thing to the Select Committee. The Select Committee proposed that these powers should be confined to Chief Presidency Magistrates and to District Magistrates, but I must call attention to the fact that the exercise of this jurisdiction is safeguarded by section 196. That section provides that no prosecution can be instituted under section 124A without the sanction of the Local Government or of the Government of India. Well, now what would be the effect of requiring that previous sanction? It will be this, that before proceedings are instituted under this power, the attention of the Local Government would have to be called to the offence. Now, who is the person who will call the attention of the Local Government to the offence, and who will more or less advise the Local Government as to the necessity or propriety of instituting proceedings? That person will necessarily be the District Magistrate. The consequence is that, by virtue of the provisions of section 196 which require the consent of the Local Government, the District Magistrate will have to interfere in the case in an early stage. He will have to make up his mind whether there is a case to report to the Local Government or not, and no doubt in reporting the case to the Local Government he will to some extent form an opinion on the matter, and therefore in the interests of the accused it is better that he should not try the case. The fact that he has reported the matter, that he has called the attention of the Government to the matter, may be held to give him a bias in the matter, which would render it advisable that he should not himself both report the case to Government and subsequently try it. Well, that being so, the Government think it is necessary that there should be other Magistrates who would have power to try these cases and who will not have that possible bias which a previous enquiry into the case may have given to the District Magistrate. We propose that the Courts empowered to try cases of this kind should be not only the Chief Presidency Magistrates and District Magistrates, but also Magistrates of the first class specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf. I beg to move the amendment which stands in my name."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH:—"With great diffidence I have to submit I am against the amendment."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that in Schedule IV to the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, page 235, after clause No. (14) the following be added, namely:—

"(15) Power to try cases under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code."

He said: "This amendment is merely consequential, its object being to include in the powers with which the Local Government may invest Magistrates of the first class the power to try cases under section 124A. It is merely consequential on the last amendment, and is enumerative of the powers already given."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Bill as amended be passed.

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :—" There is one observation I wish to make on this matter which is more or less of a personal character. The Maharaja of Durbhanga in his long speech, which was an excellent speech, but which we did not have the advantage of hearing yesterday, but which I have had the advantage of reading this morning, points out that there are a very large number of amendments put forward in the Bar memorial, and he asks why neither the Legal Member nor I had noticed them, or why none of them had been brought forward by me. I was unable to sit on the Select Committee because it was impossible for me to do so with the limited time at my command. It is a very intricate and cumbersome Bill, and it was absolutely impossible for me to spare the necessary time to go through all the amendments that had been proposed and brought before the Select Committee or the suggestions which had been made after the report. I knew the Select Committee contained many experts—including Pandit Bishambar Nath and Mr. Sayani—and also outside it there was Mr. Ananda Charlu, who had his whole time at his disposal, which I, unfortunately, had not, and who were well able to look after the interests of the accused persons if it be supposed that the official Members did not do so and to criticise these matters in detail. It is impossible for a professional man to undertake to form an opinion or to put forward an amendment upon these matters of drafting without going right into the root of the thing and examining the history of the amendments and the original sections. It would have taken me a very long time to do so, and I am sorry to say I had not the leisure to do it. There are certain portions of this Code that I am familiar with, and can give an opinion on, almost off-hand, but there is a great deal in the Code that I do not pretend to be familiar with as I practise very little in the Criminal Courts. There are many members of the Council with more leisure than myself who have no doubt gone into these matters and considered them."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP said :—" I share with the Hon'ble Member who has been in charge of this Bill a keen feeling of relief that its ultimate stage has been reached, and with all the members of this Council I venture to hope that we have been able to present a consolidating and amending Act relating to a subject of the highest importance which it is hoped may in its operation be found to be a substantial improvement on the existing law, so as to assist all those who may be called upon either to administer it or to submit to its terms in the practice of our Criminal Courts.

" I shall not be out of place and shall not uselessly expend the time of this Council if I shortly recall previous legislation on this subject.

" I am one of those few still in the public service who can recollect the state of the law before the Code of 1861 was passed. We were guided by a few useful but fragmentary rules issued from time to time either by the Legislature or by the highest Courts of the country, and I am not sure whether we were not able to do justice as well with their assistance as successive generations of Judges and Magistrates under the very minute codes which have since become law. I share in the opinions expressed by the Hon'ble Law Member in charge of this Bill and by others in our discussions on it that the first Code of 1861 was generally a more workable Code than any of its successors, though I do not wish to be understood as holding that it was not capable of being improved, as in course of time its defects and omissions became exposed in practice. Still it had one great merit. It avoided many unnecessary matters of detail and it confined itself principally to laying down broad principles on which our Courts were to act and which they were to adapt to the varying circumstances which arose.

"I would here quote Sir Henry Maine's words on this subject. Sir H. Maine, in dealing with objections to a codification of the law, stated that the only possible remedy for the state of things he had described was a code which without going over much into detail should set forth fundamental principles with as much simplicity as was compatible with accuracy; and I venture to express my regret that in subsequent legislation on this and many other subjects this rule has been too often departed from. At the same time I fully admit that from the material from which our Judges and Magistrates are taken it may be necessary occasionally to legislate on matters of detail on which our Courts may have erred or on which difficulties may have arisen from a conflict of opinions expressed even by our highest Courts. But it appears to me, and I know that this opinion is very generally entertained, that while legislation may serve to ensure uniformity of practice, and to prevent failures of justice from imperfect declarations of the law, it has too often unnecessarily undertaken the task of endeavouring to prescribe too minutely matters of detail so as to defeat its object. It has caused embarrassment by inviting criticism which may be described as hair-splitting, and in spite of the safeguards which it has provided that no technical defect shall affect the merits of a case unless it has occasioned a failure of justice, the law reports show that in their sensitiveness our Courts have too often allowed non-observance of matters of form to affect the final result of a trial. It has often struck me that there are serious objections to a law which, while it deals minutely with matters of detail (and I here refer to our present Codes of Procedure) and also expressly requires their observance in the course of proceedings held under those Codes, at the same time declares that their non-observance through the carelessness or even incompetence of a judicial officer shall be immaterial if a fair trial has been held. It has often seemed to me to encourage careless work and unduly to throw upon the highest Courts in its exercise of powers of revision the duty of defining the consequences of transgression of the law, whereas, if that law had been expressed more broadly in matters only of principle, such difficulties might not have arisen. But it is too late to recall the past. We can only act on the lines adopted by our predecessors, and endeavour from time to time by careful legislation to meet difficulties brought to notice by expressing that law more clearly, even though we may diverge into minute matters of detail. These are the main difficulties which have to be encountered in any amendment of any of the Codes of Procedure.

"The Code of 1861 was amended and re-enacted by the Code of 1872. It consisted of 445 sections and had been only once amended in the interval in 1869 by an Act which amended either wholly or in part 76 sections.

"The Code of 1872 expanded the 445 sections of the Code of 1861 into 541 sections, and as one of those whose duties called upon him to administer it I can speak feelingly of the difficulties felt from a law recast on entirely different lines. We had to make ourselves familiar with an entirely different law and we were puzzled and wearied in our attempts to find a familiar point hidden in that law under a different arrangement of the subject. I am aware of Sir James Stephen's remarks on justifying the change and his condemnation of the manner in which the subjects dealt with by the Code of 1861 had been arranged, but we who had to administer the law never appreciated the change and we often bitterly lamented the valuable time lost in finding out where the old law had been re-enacted.

"The Code of 1872 was followed by the Code of 1882, having been intermediately amended only by one Act in 1874 in respect of 74 sections out of the 541 sections which it contained. So far therefore we had little room to complain after we had once mastered the Codes of 1861 and 1872. Each of these Codes was only once amended, and then completely, and, I may say, once for all.

"The Code of 1882 contained 558 sections, an increase over those of the Code of 1872, but a small increase in comparison to that of the Code of 1872 over its predecessor of 1861. But here we had to deal with a Code in many respects recast and different from the former Code in many respects also; for while professing to re-enact the former law it expressed it in different terms so as to cause much difficulty and complication. As an instance of this I would point to the use of the concise term 'tangible immovable property' in section 145 instead of the familiar and well-understood words of the former Codes and previous law.

"The Code of 1882 is now to be replaced by the Code of 1898. But intermediately we have had sixteen amending Acts; of these, I find that two were passed in the same year, in another year three amending Acts were passed, while in another year no less than four were passed, and it has astonished those who presided in Criminal Courts to find that two Acts were passed in the same year, both amending the same section; all this constant amending Legislation without any attempt at consolidation has necessarily caused confusion which might have been avoided. In mentioning this I hope that our difficulties in the past will be appreciated and that in the future there will be less frequent amendment and more consolidation. Sir James Stephen in his well-known minute on the administration of justice recommended consolidation at short intervals of all great Codes; as far as I can recollect, at intervals of five years. Hitherto a decennial consolidation of the Code of Criminal Procedure has been the rule, and I venture to confess to express a hope that this will be done in the future. A consolidation and reconsideration of previous legislation so as to embody and settle case-law with then become necessary. I can feelingly speak of the consequences of such delay in accumulating a greater mass of material scattered over sixteen years which had to be arranged and separately considered in the preparation of the present Code, and I have also had experience of the confusion caused by such long-deferred legislation in the work of our Courts.

"We have the satisfaction of feeling that in Your Excellency's Government the mistakes of the past have been recognized. We have now a consolidated Code which was due before Your Lordship assumed office, and we have this Code scrupulously on the lines of the Code of 1882. The Hon'ble Law Member in charge of this Bill, whose reputation as a draughtsman stands quite as high as that of any of his predecessors, has resisted all temptation to display his art, and has, if I may say so, too often sacrificed neatness in form to his desire not to alter the numbers of the sections of the Code of 1882 with which practice had made us so familiar. So far he is entitled to the warm congratulations of all Judges and Magistrates. Personally I am inclined to think that his object might have been sufficiently attained if the sequence of the law had been maintained, and that in its re-enactment the new parts should have appeared as interpolations. In adding to the bulk of a section so as not to alter the numbers of the following sections some difficulty must always arise in finding what is required and in quoting a law expressed in one section and sub-divided into many sections, for although all these sub-sections may relate to the same subject they deal with different branches of it; they may properly form separate sections; and when compressed in one section they often form a small sub-chapter. I fear that when the next consolidated Code is passed these sections will be broken up, so that reference to the old law will become a matter of greater difficulty. Still we of the present generation will be saved, for we shall have passed away, and we may be allowed, selfishly perhaps, to congratulate ourselves on this self-negation of the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers.

"I hope that I may be permitted now to refer to a somewhat personal matter. I have been associated with Your Lordship's Government in the preparation of this Code, and I am most grateful for the terms in which my work has been referred to. I do not desire to avoid any responsibility in my work, but I desire to state the extent of my responsibility because I have the strongest reason to know that I am in all ill-informed quarters held to be directly responsible for all that is contained in this Code. This is rating my work too high and at the same time is imposing on me a responsibility which is more than my due.

"As Your Lordship's Government is aware, my duties have been to assist in the preparation of this Bill, to collect material for that purpose, and to lay it before the Hon'ble Law Member for his consideration. In this task I have been responsible for not misleading him and for not overlooking or misrepresenting anything, and I have throughout in the preparation of this Bill discussed with the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Home Department the details of this Bill. Having done this my responsibility, except as a Member of this Council, has ceased. The Bill is the Bill of the Government of India in the hands of the Hon'ble Member who has had the carriage of it through this Council. In some respects it does not altogether express my opinions, and in others it is expressed in terms which I have ventured to state in Select Committee have seemed to me to be not altogether appropriate or easy for interpretation by the bulk of our Magistrates. But I have subordinated my own opinions on these points to the judgment of the majority of those with whom I have been associated in dealing with this subject, and I have only on one matter which I consider of great importance ventured to offer any substantial objection. In adopting this course I have considered that I was acting in a manner best calculated to promote the administration of Your Excellency's Government."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said :—"I have only two words to say, first, with regard to what fell from my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans in which he referred to the various valuable suggestions made in the Hon'ble Maharaja of Durbhanga's speech. Unfortunately that speech was not delivered in the Council, and therefore I have not had access to that valuable information. I did not know that it was published in the papers, and I have not had the benefit of seeing it. I suppose like many other valuable things I shall see it when it is too late. As regards what fell from my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep, I have only got to thank him for the assistance which he has given us in revising this Code. He says he thinks that every Code ought to be consolidated every five years. I should be delighted that this Code should be consolidated at the end of five years, for I shall not be here. In the meantime I hope we have done something to make its meaning clearer. We have done something by consolidating sixteen Acts into one. My task is over and I can only say I am very glad that my Hon'ble friend and not myself will have the laborious work of editing 'the new Code'."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT :—"I congratulate the Council on finishing this very long Bill ; and in doing so I would only say with my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep and my Hon'ble friend on the left (Mr. Chalmers) that I hope that much advantage will accrue to the public from the time and labour expended in the first place and pre-eminently by themselves in the revision of this Code, and also by the Select Committee and the Council itself. The only other word I will say, and I am sure I shall say it on behalf of the whole Council, is to express our admiration not only of the ability but the untiring tact and temper which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Chalmers has displayed in the heavy task which has fallen upon him in the conduct of this Bill."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Monday, the 21st March, 1898.

The Hon'ble Allan Arthur.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble RAHIMTULA MUHAMMAD SAYANI asked :—

"Will Government be pleased to produce statistics showing the respective numbers of men of different nationalities in the service of the East Indian Railway Company employed as station-masters and as assistant station-masters of roadside stations and as clerks in the company's various offices, and also showing what educational standards are required for the respective posts?"

The Hon'ble SIR ARTHUR TREVOR replied :—

"The East Indian Railway is worked for Government by a Company which appoints its own employés.

"The numbers of Europeans, East Indians and Natives respectively employed in the different Departments of the line will be found in statement No. 40 of the Administration Report, Part I, of the Railway Department.

"The figures given in the last report, that for 1896-97, are as follows :—

Europeans.	East Indians.	Natives.	TOTAL.
General Administration.
69	38	2,769	2,876
Traffic Department.
408	285	12,864	13,557
Engineering Department.
83	51	16,605	16,739
Locomotive Department.
435	285	13,862	14,582
Total.
995	659	46,100	47,754

"Government have no information as to the educational standard required for the different posts."

The Hon'ble RAHIMTULA MUHAMMAD SAYANI asked :—

"1.—Whether the Government of India in the Military Department has received petitions from certain Mahar petitioners complaining that, though till recently many Mahar soldiers served in the Bombay Army with distinction and some rose to the highest non-commissioned ranks, military service has been closed to sons of these people by recent changes in the orders about selecting recruits from certain classes.

"2.—Whether Government is not prepared to extend the application of these orders so as to include these people in the Dekkhani, Maratha and Konkani Maratha classes from which recruiting is permitted under existing rules ?"

The Hon'ble MAJOR-GENERAL SIR EDWIN COLLEN replied :—

"1.—Two petitions were received, one from the Mahars of Satara, and one from a society called the Anarya Dashpariharall Mandali, apparently composed of Mahars or Parwaris, Mochis, and Mangs in the Ratnagiri District, appealing against the exclusion of their caste-fellows from the Bombay Army. The petitioners urged that men of their caste had always served the Government faithfully, and cited, in support of their fighting qualities, the battle of Karigaum, where they state large numbers of their caste had been killed. It was found that half a battalion of the Bombay infantry regiment engaged at Karigaum was apparently composed of low caste men.

"2.—The whole question of the composition of the Bombay Army was considered by a committee of officers of that Army in 1892, and they recommended that the enlistment of certain low castes, among whom Parwaris were included, should be prohibited, excepting such as were required as musicians and buglers. The question was thoroughly discussed by the Commander-in-Chief and the Government of India, and orders were issued prohibiting the enlistment of any but the fighting classes. The only exception to the rule was to be in the case of tradesmen in the Pioneer regiments, and in other regiments writers, bandsmen and mochis.

"The memorials to which I have referred were fully considered, and the question was discussed whether men of the classes named could be formed into a class regiment. This question was decided in the negative, and the Government of Bombay were informed that the orders could not be rescinded."

FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1898-99.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND said :—

" The year now closing has been marked by a singular succession of calamities. When it opened, the famine due to the drought of 1896 was becoming more and more intense both in Northern and in Southern India, and plague was raging in some parts of the Bombay Presidency. Before the first three months had expired, the eastern side of India was shaken by an earthquake which caused much damage to the buildings and the Railway works in the districts which were affected by it. During the rest of the year we were engaged in meeting a series of fanatical attacks by the tribes on our North-Western Frontier, and repelling them by military operations conducted under conditions of very great physical difficulties and necessarily great expenditure.

" 2. These circumstances are necessarily reflected in the Financial Statement which I have to lay before the Council, in which I shall have to declare for the closing year a deficit of larger amount than any since 1859-60.

" 3. But there is also a brighter side in my statement. The harvests of 1897 have been more bountiful than any within recent memory, and the recovery from the effects of famine and scarcity promises to be a very rapid one. The Revenue returns of January were sufficient in themselves to shew that the crisis had passed, and gave hopes of early return of prosperous times. And at the present moment there are signs of peace on our frontiers and of the submission of the still outstanding tribes to the General Commanding our forces. Our financial position for the year that is about to open will therefore, I trust, be a reflection of times of returning peace and prosperity, although as peace is not yet assured to us, I am obliged to include in my estimates of expenditure a considerable provision not only for the return of our troops from the theatre of war, but also for the possible resumption, before their return, of military operations.

"Accounts of 1896-97.

" 4. A couple of months ago I announced that the accounts of 1896-97 had been closed, and that the results, as is usually the case, closely corresponded with, and were slightly better than, the revised estimate presented to Council in March last. The comparative figures are as follows :—

	Revenue. Rx.	Expenditure. Rx.	Deficit. Rx.
Estimated in March 1897 .	93,803,800	95,790,700	1,986,900
By actual accounts . .	94,129,741	95,834,763	1,705,022
Improvement . . .	325,941	—44,063	281,878

" The improvement in Revenue was mostly due to somewhat short estimates of Land Revenue and of Railway earnings. Under all other heads the estimates were very closely followed except under Civil Works, under which the short expenditure, being nearly all Provincial or Local, merely gives rise to a cross-entry under 'Provincial adjustment.'

" Revised Estimates of 1897-98.

" 5. For the year 1897-98 we have to announce a deficit of Rx. 5,283,100 being greater by Rx. 2,819,100 than that which was anticipated in the Budget Estimates. This result is entirely due to the expenditure on famine being about 50 per cent in excess of our estimates, and to the outlay involved in the military operations on the North-Western Frontier. Separating out the figures connected with these two subjects, the results of the year compare as follows with the Budget Estimates :—

	Budget. Rx.	Revised. Rx.	Difference. Rx.
Excluding Famine and War—
Revenue	95,676,800	96,479,200	802,400	Better.
Expenditure	94,499,600	92,547,000	1,952,600	Better. (a)
Famine Relief	3,641,200	5,391,800	1,750,600	Worse.
Warlike Operations . .	...	3,823,500	3,823,500	Worse.
Deficit .	2,464,000	5,283,100	2,819,100	Worse.

(a) Mostly by reason of improvement in Exchange.

"It is perhaps worthy of note that the deficit of the year is actually less than we have spent on Famine Relief; in other words, if we had had no famine expenditure to meet, our ordinary revenue would have been sufficient to meet our War expenditure and to leave a small surplus over. This is important only as indicating our general financial position apart from the calamities that have fallen upon us during the year.

"6. The comparison between Budget and Revised Estimates set out in greater detail in the form I have adopted on previous occasions is as follows :—

"Estimates of 1897-98.

		Budget.	Revised.	Revised Better.	Revised Worse
STERLING IN ENGLAND—

Surplus (+) Deficit (—) .		—2,464,000	—5,283,100		2,819,100

(a) Including Interest and Receipts under Civil Works.

(b) This entry in the Indian portion of the accounts is a minus one, as the interest passed to the charge of Railways and Irrigation is greater than the whole amount of interest payable in India.

"7. Of the increase in English expenditure, £161,500 occurs under the head of Interest (including discount on Loans raised), and is due to the increased loan operations which were rendered necessary by reason of our inability, to which I shall presently allude, to keep the Secretary of State in funds to the extent we anticipated at the time of the Budget Estimates. Another large item, £51,600, is due to stores sent out for military works in India and is met by the corresponding reduction under the same head in the Indian Accounts. And a further special demand for £23,100 worth of stores was made in connection with the military operations on the North-Western Frontier. No other differences in the English Account are large enough to be mentioned here.

"8. It will be seen that by the improvement in the rate of exchange at which the English transactions are brought to account, our Revised Estimates shew, even with the somewhat increased expenditure, a result better than Budget by Rx. 1,488,700. The Budget Estimates were drawn up on the basis of a rate of 14·46 pence; whereas the rate actually realized has been 15·38 pence.

"9. In the Account of Revenue in India, the Revised Estimates shew an improvement under Land Revenue of Rx. 286,100 which may be put down as the effect of the excellent harvests; but there is against this a heavy loss on opium due to the falling-off in prices in China. The price realized for Bengal opium has been R1,023 per chest only against R1,075 taken in the Budget Estimates, and in Bombay the falling-off in the trade was such that we had to reduce the pass duty from October 27, 1897, to R500. The other heads of Revenue produced, as a whole, a very little less than we estimated.

"10. The improvement under Departmental Receipts is accounted for by the excess received in the shape of Post Office Revenue, Rx. 42,200, and of Telegraph Revenue, Rx. 219,500.

"11. Under Railways we have received Rx. 482,900 more than we estimated, the important items being:—

		Rx.
1. East Indian Railway	Better	600,000
2 North-Western Railway	Better	500,000
3. Burma Railways	Better	85,000
4. Indian Midland	Better	80,000
5. Rajputana-Malwa	Worse	290,000
6. Bombay, Baroda and Central India (net earnings)	Worse	180,000
7. Great Indian Peninsula (net earnings)	Worse	330,000
Net of the above	Better	465,000

Of these, the first and largest is due to movements of grain towards the famine districts, and the second chiefly to the movements of troops in connection with the war. Plague and scarcity account for the losses on the three Railways which run towards the Western Presidency.

"12. The very high receipts from Irrigation occur mostly in Northern India, and are due to the dryness of the earlier part of the year and the consequent high demand for water. The impressions produced on the people by a year of scarcity, no doubt, tend in themselves to stimulate the use of irrigation-water.

"13. Passing to the Expenditure side, we have first a saving under Opium of Rx. 289,200, which for the most part means that the crop for which we had to pay fell short of our expectations; our custom is to assume, in the Budget, an average crop at least.

"14. The extra expenditure under Civil Departments amounts to Rx. 275,800, and is caused by plague operations, Rx. 279,900, the head under which it is mostly shewn being Medical. There is an excess also under Jails, amounting to Rx. 84,700, and due partly to high prices and partly to increase of jail population, one of the side-effects of the general scarcity.

"15. The saving under Military Works I have already explained as meaning merely a transfer of the expenditure to the English Account.

"16. Under Army, apart from the warlike operations, we have a saving of Rx. 538,400. There has been a saving of about Rx. 200,000 on Commissariat and Transport services which would have had to be spent if the troops had not been absent on field service; Rx. 66,500 has been saved in exchange compensation by the rise of rates, and Rx. 77,400 in pay and allowances; the despatch of a British regiment to Natal and a Native regiment to Mombassa brings a saving of Rx. 52,200. Against these savings we have had to meet excess expenditure of Rx. 65,800 arising out of increase of prices, and Rx. 10,900 on account of Jubilee concessions to the troops. The other items of difference do not call for special mention.

"17. The excesses of Rx. 1,747,800 under Famine and Rx. 3,869,800 under Warlike operations will be separately dealt with.

"Famine Relief.

"18. The effects of the famine upon our accounts extend far beyond the mere cost of famine relief. Even the administration of famine relief, taken by itself, necessitates increase of establishments charged under the heads of District Administration (Land Revenue), General Administration, Police, Medical, and others; but besides that, the high prices which accompany a period of famine increase the expenditure on jails, on petty establishments, and, above all, on the army. Our revenue, moreover, is seriously affected, the Land Revenue and Provincial Rates and Forests directly, and such revenues as Salt and Excise, by the general pressure on the people.

"19. The total cost, direct and indirect, of the famine is estimated as follows:—

	1896-97. Rx.	1897-98. Rx.
Spent on Famine Relief	2,079,500	5,391,800
Remissions and losses of Land Revenue (independent of suspensions)	871,600	576,400
Loss of Salt and Excise Revenue	417,800	357,600
Loss under other principal heads of Revenue	337,800	391,300
Loss of Railway Revenue	1,504,100	1,477,400
Charges for compensation for dearness of provisions, and other increases due to high prices—
Under Army	506,400	604,100
Under other heads	183,000	321,000
Other charges arising in connection with famine	76,700	123,400
Total	5,976,900	9,243,000
Deduct—Increase of Irrigation Revenue due to drought	424,900	556,700
Net cost, direct and indirect, of famine and scarcity	5,552,000	8,686,300
	14,238,300

These figures omit the suspensions of Land Revenue amounting to Rx. 1,856,500 which, if the seasons are good, will be recovered.

"20. As regards the direct expenditure on Famine Relief, the following figures shew the general results in Rx.:—

"21. The great excess of expenditure, as compared with Budget Estimate, has, it will be seen, occurred in the Central Provinces and in Madras. As regards the first of these, it became evident very early in the year that, though the Chief Commissioner had provided a proportionally larger amount than any other province, the people were in a more poverty-stricken condition than even he had anticipated. In some parts of that province there had been a long succession of bad seasons, and the population had nothing whatever to fall back upon. When the time came at which in other provinces the beginning of recovery was apparent, the people of the Central Provinces were as poor and as hardly pressed as ever, and it will be seen that in 1897-98 more money has been spent on famine relief in that small province than in any of the others.

"22. As regards Madras, we are still in communication with that Government on the question of its failure to foresee the extent of the demands it would have to meet. Twelve months ago I stated on the authority of the latest estimates received from the Government of Madras that the province was only slightly affected by famine, that its revenues had suffered very little, and that it would be able to meet, without assistance from Imperial Funds, the whole or nearly the whole of its famine expenditure. It must be remembered that the harvest in that province largely depends upon the rains of December to February, so that, so far as realization of the actual condition of things was concerned, Madras was not until May in the same position in which the other Governments were in January. But the demands of the province in respect of famine expenditure came upon the Government of India in June with a severity which we had not anticipated.

"23. The North-Western Provinces spent somewhat more, and Bombay a good deal more, than was anticipated at Budget time; but I explained last year that I could not put forward the estimates of famine expenditure with anytning approaching to an assurance that they would prove sufficient.

"24. The following figures will be of interest as shewing, both in money spent and in people relieved, the history of famine relief in the several provinces of

India. The figures do not include famine operations in Berar, or in the Native States of the Central India Agency :—

	EXPENDITURE IN Rx. Quarter ending

"The expenditure in all India in January 1898 was only Rx. 32,000, of which more than half was in the Central Provinces; famine relief operations had practically come to an end.

"25. The following is a statement of the units relieved, stated in thousands, a unit being one person relieved for one day :—

"The number on relief was highest in May and June 1897, during which period about 3,650,000 persons were relieved each day.

"26. Besides the direct outlay upon Famine Relief, the famine operations affect also another portion of our accounts, as the Governments in India have to meet part of the necessities of the population by a liberal extension of the system of agricultural advances. The ordinary operations under this head of our accounts amount to advances a little in excess of Rx. 250,000 and recoveries somewhat short of this amount, the duration of the advances being only one or two years in some cases (such as advances for seed) to five or ten years and sometimes still longer periods in cases of advances for permanent land improvements. In 1896-97, however, the amount advanced came to Rx. 1,104,335 against recoveries amounting to Rx. 287,095, that is, a net amount of Rx. 817,240; and the net advances of the current year are about two-thirds of this amount.

"27. The figures stated by provinces are as follows, the minus sign indicating cases in which the recoveries exceeded the amounts advanced :—

"It is worth while to observe that we recently made special enquiries about the punctuality of repayment in the case of these advances to cultivators, and were assured on all hands by the Local Governments and by the Revenue authorities subordinate to them, that the cultivators habitually observed the obligations which they accepted in respect of the advances, and that the outstandings were sound and good debts.

"28. The figures which I have so far set out include only the operations of the Government in the matter of Famine Relief; but it would not be becoming in me if I were to pass from the subject of the contest with famine, without reference to the large measure of assistance which was given, in supplement to the operations of Government, by the munificent subscriptions to the Charitable Relief Fund. The Honourable Mr. James who has had much to do with the direction of the operations of that Fund has been good enough to give me, in anticipation of the Central Committee's formal report, the following summary of its appropriation :—

"The Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund was founded at a public meeting held at the Dalhousie Institute, Calcutta, on the 14th January 1897. Followed up by a meeting at the Guild-hall in London on 16th January, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, and by meetings in other parts of the United Kingdom, the Fund grew rapidly till it reached a total of Rx. 1,670,000. Of this, Rx. 300,000 were subscribed in India, and Rx. 1,370,000 were received from countries abroad, principally from the United Kingdom which contributed the splendid sum of Rx. 1,230,000, the exchange equivalent of £773,000.

"That sum was divided as follows :—

Mansion House	543,000
Lancashire	131,000
Glasgow	54,000
Liverpool	26,000
Edinburgh	17,000
Miscellaneous	2,000
	773,000

"These contributions from the United Kingdom exceed those made for the famine of 1877-78 by nearly £150,000, and form indeed a signal and beneficent manifestation of national benevolence. Of the balance of foreign subscriptions, amounting to Rx. 140,000, mostly remitted in Indian currency, Canada remitted Rx. 57,000, the Australian Colonies Rx. 15,500, Ceylon Rx. 14,700, China Rx. 14,000, Russia Rx. 9,800, the Straits Settlements Rx. 6,800, Japan Rx. 5,000, and the remainder came in smaller sums from New Zealand, Natal, America, Mauritius, Fiji, and other countries, Indian emigrants to British Colonies sending numerous contributions.

"The fund was divided, as subscriptions came in, amongst the distressed provinces, and the following are the sums which each received, including its own local receipts :—

	Rx.
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	518,500
Central Provinces	370,000
Bengal	215,000
Bombay	165,000
Madras	157,500
Punjab	122,000
Central India	42,500
Burma	30,000
Berar	20,000
Baluchistan	2,000
Rajputana	2,000
	1,644,500

"Expenditure is still going on in the Madras Presidency owing to the failure of the north-east monsoon, and in Bombay, where plague has been superadded to famine, but the Central Committee expect to wind up with a balance of between Rx. 40,000 and Rx. 50,000, consisting chiefly of moneys returned by Provincial Committees which will be invested and form the nucleus of a fund against the next famine.

"Over two-thirds of the fund have been spent in giving a fresh start in life to those who had lost all in the struggle, principally to peasant farmers whose bullocks had died from want of fodder, and who had neither plough-cattle nor seed, nor credit on which to procure them. The bulk of the residue was spent upon doles to parda-nashin women and respectable persons or tradesmen, who were unable from social custom to work or accept Government relief, accompanied as that must be by official enquiry into and by some kind of test of the reality of the destitution to be relieved, and a comparatively small amount has been devoted to supplementing the Government ration in poor-houses and on relief works, by small gifts of food and clothing, and to the maintenance of orphans. The Famine Fund has thus distributed in relief nearly one-fifth of the direct expenditure from the State, and as it has in no way displaced Government relief (which was not confined within predetermined financial bonds, but was limited only by certain tests), the Fund has been extremely valuable in softening the sharpness of distress, and it has restored to prosperity a vast number of families. Statistics shew nearly 1½ million heads of families relieved by grants of cattle, seed and implements, nearly 1 million of respectable persons fed, and 1½ millions of relief workers assisted, at the expense of the Charitable Fund, while provision has been made for the maintenance and education of about 4,000 orphans whose relatives or friends cannot be found. The Government of India contributed to the Fund by giving an officer for the duties of Vice-Chairman and Honorary Secretary, by a grant of Rx. 1,800 towards office expenses, and by allowing the Committee the free use of the Government Press. Numerous concessions of a similar nature have been made by Local Governments, firms and individuals, so that the total expenditure from the Fund on establishments and offices comes to less than one-half per cent.

"Military Operations.

"29. The military operations on the North-Western Frontier, which have added so much to the expenditure of the current year, may be divided into four parts, and I may state the facts in a tabular form which I admit to be better suited to a Financial Statement than to a military history :—

	I. Tochi Field Force.	II. Malakand Field Force.	III. Mohmand Field Force.	IV. Tirah Field Force.
Origin of the expedition and its date.	Attack at Maizar, 10th June.	Attack on Malakand, 26th July.	Attack on Shabkadr, 7th Aug.	Attack on Khyber Forts, 23rd Aug.
Date of formal sanction of expedition	19th June	30th July	2nd Sept.	8th Sept.
Expedition against Buner sanctioned . . .		1st Jan.
Field Force broken up . .	18th Feb.	4th Feb.	6th Oct.	Still standing.
Fighting men engaged * . .	7,306	10,421	10,624	32,161

* Besides 3,776 in Reserve Brigade at Rawalpindi.

"30. Our estimates of the expenditure on military expeditions are, I may explain, made under three heads,—(1) Initial charges, (2) Monthly charges, and (3) Terminal charges. The second of these is necessarily somewhat problematical; we can say how much any given expedition will cost per month, but the question how many months it will last is determined only by events.

"31. Our estimate of the cost of the above expeditions was made in the beginning of October, and made on the assumption that they would last till the end of December. That estimate amounted to Rx. 3,720,000. This is not the place to explain what events necessitated the prolongation of the expeditions, and chiefly of the largest one, the Tirah expedition. The result, with reference to the estimate above mentioned, is that the total expenditure on account of the monthly charges has exceeded what we anticipated, but there has been a large saving on terminal charges, only however by reason of their passing into the accounts of 1898-99. We estimate now that we shall spend Rx. 3,823,500 in 1897-98 and a further sum of Rx. 1,488,500 in 1898-99. This last estimate has been drawn up on the supposition that there would be a spring campaign lasting three months, followed by what I have called the terminal charges of the expedition. Although preparations continue to be made for that three months' campaign, the prospects of peace being concluded without it are, at the present time, very favourable, and, if so, there will be some saving upon the expenditure now estimated for 1898-99.

"Loan Operations.

"32. In the Budget Estimate for 1897-98 I announced the intention of the Government of India to raise a Rupee loan of four crores; but when the usual time approached for our entering the market, it became very doubtful whether it was wise to try to borrow so large an amount. The Bank rate in India remained unusually high, having been 10 per cent for the first 5½ months of 1897. On June 17th it was reduced to 9 per cent, and a week later to 8 per cent.

"33. The price of 3½ per cent Government Paper was 99, 100, and 101 per cent during January, February, and March 1897; it rose to 104 about 20th May, and thereafter till the end of July gradually fell back to a little over par.

"34. I took the opportunity of visiting Calcutta at the end of June to make enquiry into the state of matters, and I desire to convey my acknowledgments to my banking and mercantile friends for the advice they then gave me and the information they placed at my disposal. The result of my report to His Excellency in Council was that the Secretary of State sanctioned our reducing the amount of the loan to Rx. 3,000,000, and in July we called for tenders for this amount to form part of our ordinary 3½ per cent loan, the time being unpropitious for a continuation of our 3 per cent loan of 1895. In the result the loan was taken up at an average rate of R98-5-3 and a minimum rate of R98-1 per cent.

"35. The Secretary of State's loan transactions were as follows :—

(1) In accordance with Budget Estimate he raised permanent debt in May to the extent of £3,500,000, namely, India 2½ per cent stock. This he obtained at an average price of £96-15-11.

(2) In his Budget Estimate he proposed to pay off £1,000,000 of temporary debt outstanding on March 31st, and to raise new temporary debt to the amount of £2,000,000. The suspension of drawings to which I shall presently allude compelled him to enhance this last amount to £6,000,000, which he obtained as follows :—

Date.	Amount.	Rate of interest.
	£	£	s.	d.
September 14	2,500,000	2	11	8
November 30	2,500,000	2	15	2
January 17	1,000,000	2	4	5

"Council Bills and Rate of Exchange.

"36. The rate of exchange at the close of last year when the Estimates were brought before the Council was about 15 pence, and it remained at that rate throughout April. It fell during May, and in the end of that month the Secretary of State drew at 14$\frac{5}{16}$ pence. It then rose till the beginning of August, being then above 15 pence.

"37. During July we were obliged to reconsider our position as regards Ways and Means. The suspension of the rains throughout the month of June destroyed our hopes of the early closing of the Famine Relief Works, and at the same time sudden and unexpected demands for money for Famine Relief were made from Madras. In July the position became more difficult as hostile attacks by the tribes on the North-Western Frontier made it obvious that military operations would have to be undertaken. These demands came upon us at the most difficult time of the year, so far as the supply of funds is concerned, for under ordinary circumstances our Cash Balances, even including Loan Receipts, run down throughout the five months July to November. A careful re-examination shewed that, in the face of the new demands upon us, we would be obliged to ask the Secretary of State to greatly reduce his drawings; and as the military operations became more extensive, he not only stopped them altogether, but remitted back to us a crore of rupees out of the amounts he had already drawn.

"38. With the aid of this crore of rupees which reached us in the beginning of October, we just managed (as we had calculated) to pass through the low-balance period, our Cash Balances being as follows:—

	Rx.
Last day of August	8,504,300
September	7,620,000
October	8,079,300
November	8,076,400

"I ought to add here a word of acknowledgment to Mr. Barrow, the Officiating Comptroller General, who accomplished the extremely difficult task of meeting the demands upon the Government Treasuries throughout this period with such inadequate resources, and that at a time when they included those of a war on the frontier, and of famine relief on an extensive scale in five of the largest provinces of India. I had asked the Local Governments to instruct the District Collectors throughout India to lend their special aid in the management of the Cash Balances; and with their assistance the arrangements worked with perfect smoothness.

"39. The result of the suspension of drawings was to maintain the rate of exchange at over 15½d. till the middle of November, but it then began to fall through a belief, which turned out to be quite unfounded, that it could not be maintained when the Secretary of State recommenced drawing. It fell just below 15 pence in the middle of December, but as soon as the Secretary of State resumed his drawings, it became apparent that the demand had been quite under-estimated. His last drawing in December was at the rate of 15⅞d., and the rate has since that date maintained itself at and above this rate, the average rate of the drawing of the month of January having exceeded 16d. The demand for money has recently been much greater than the supply, and the Banks' rate has risen from 5 per cent in the beginning of December to 12 per cent in the beginning of March. At one time the tension was so severe that it was deemed prudent to introduce a legislative measure, which would have the effect of enabling gold in England to be placed at the immediate disposal of trade in India. No operations have actually taken place under it, though we have received about £150,000 in gold in India, but it had the effect, which we intended, of allaying the anxiety of the market.

"40. The drawings for the year necessarily fell far short of the amount estimated in the Budget, £13,000,000, and we estimate that for the whole year they will stand as follows :—

	£	Rx.	Rate.
Council Bills	9,378,000	14,585,400	15·4d.
Less Re-remittance	669,400	1,000,000	16$\frac{1}{16}$d.
Net Remittance .	8,708,600	13,585,400	15⅜d.

"41. This rate of 15⅜ pence (or rather R15·6 for each £ sterling) is accordingly taken as that at which the English Revenue and Expenditure are brought to account in the Revised Estimates of 1897-98. And following my usual practice of avoiding any speculations upon the future of Exchange, I adopt the same rate for the Budget Estimates of 1898-99.

"Budget Estimates, 1898-99.

"42. The result of the Budget Estimates for 1898-99 is that, after providing for the full amount Rx. 1,500,000 of the Famine Grant, and also Rx. 1,488,500 for the continuance of military operations on the frontier, we have a surplus of Revenue over Expenditure of Rx. 891,400.

"43. Except for this provision for possible war, there are no special features in the year's account. We do not intend to alter our revenue or the rates at which we collect it; we shall have to incur some special expenditure upon the suppression of plague, and the measures, which have been announced in England, for improving the pay of the British soldier, will also involve some expenditure in India. How much this may be it is impossible, in the present inchoate state of the communications on the subject, to say, but we have thought it wise to provide in the Estimates a sum of Rx. 200,000 'on account'.

"44. There is therefore little to say but to explain the details of the Estimates; and the following statement shews in the usual condensed form the comparison between the Budget Estimates now presented and those of the preceding two years. I have included, for purposes of comparison, the figures of the Budget

Estimates of 1896-97 as well as those of 1897-98, because the latter were in some respects peculiarly affected by the prevalence of scarcity and famine :—

" 45. The principal difference in the expenditure in England is an addition of £171,400 to the interest there payable, which is due to the fact that the Secretary of State has had by borrowing to make up for the short drawings of Council Bills during 1897-98. The real increase of interest chargeable upon the ordinary account of the Government is a good deal less than the amount just named, as it will be found that in the Indian portion of the accounts a considerable portion of the addition is passed on to the charge of the Railway account.

" 46. In addition to this increase of English expenditure on account of interest, there are the following which may be regarded as normal increases :—

Superannuation Allowances	41,500
Interest on Railway Companies' Capital	24,100

There is an offset of £11,100 against this on account of reduction of rate of interest.

Payments to the War Office for effective and non-effective charges of British Forces	12,000
Other non-effective Army Charges	24,000

"There is also a special provision of £38,200 on account of stores required for warlike operations on the frontier, and an increase in the payments of the Indo-European Telegraph Department of £21,900.

"47. Passing to the account of Revenue in India, we first of all expect a large increase of Land Revenue. Last year's estimates were estimates of the revenue of a year of scarcity; the present are estimates of the result of a bumper harvest, in which we expect to receive not only the revenue of the year itself, but something on account of revenue suspended during the famine—suspended, that is, in distinction to remitted. The following figures compare the expected receipts with what I gave last year as the standard of the annual Revenue as it stood in 1896-97,—a standard which has of course somewhat advanced since then:—

	Standard of 1896-97. Rx.	Expected receipts in 1898-99. Rx.
India	150,000	150,500
Central Provinces	844,800	920,000
Burma	2,571,300	2,657,000
Assam	614,200	626,000
Bengal	3,902,100	4,087,300
North-Western Provinces	6,110,900	6,667,900
Punjab	2,464,000	2,614,100
Madras	5,600,000	5,856,100
Bombay	4,816,400	4,961,300
	27,073,700	28,540,200

"This amount is shewn thus:—

Under Land Revenue	27,568,200
" Irrigation	972,000
TOTAL	28,540,200

"48. As the annual increase of the Land Revenue has on the statistics of the last ten years been 31 lakhs, the standard figure for 1898-99 may be stated at Rx. 27,690,000, and the revenue we expect is, it will be seen, Rx. 850,000 in excess of this.

"The chief advance is in the North-Western Provinces. In that province very liberal remissions and suspensions of revenue were granted during the evil times of 1896-97; and the revenue of the two years 1896-97 and 1897-98 has fallen short of the standard figure of 1896-97 by about Rx. 1,200,000.

"49. Under Opium we are unable to anticipate a revenue even equal to that of the current year 1897-98: and the figure is therefore much less than the Budget Estimates of 1897-98.

"50. Under Provincial Rates there is a considerable increase for the same reasons as explained in the case of Land Revenue.

"51. Under Departmental Receipts the improvement, as compared with the Budget of 1897-98, is mainly under three heads, namely, Interest Rx. 81,200, due partly to the interest on the addition of Rx. 2,000,000 made to the Currency Reserve Investment in December 1896, and partly to the large advances and loans we made during the period of scarcity; Post Office Rx. 65,900, Telegraph Rx. 144,400, due in both cases to expansion of business.

"52. Under Famine Relief and Insurance the figures necessarily entirely differ from those of the Budget Estimates of 1897-98. We restore the Famine Grant of Rx. 1,500,000, distributing it as follows :—

	Budget, 1897-98. Rx.	Budget, 1898-99. Rx.
Famine Relief	3,641,200	85,100
Famine Insurance	...	325,800
Protective Railways	...	668,300
Protective Irrigation	25,000	20,000
Add—Interest on Indian Midland and Bengal-Nagpur Railways under 'State Railways'	456,500	400,800
TOTAL	4,122,700	1,500,000

"The expenditure in the second line is the amount available for famine insurance after meeting the prior claims on the grant and the portion of the Railway construction expenditure charged against it.

"53. The difference under Railways it will be convenient to explain along with the difference under the same head on the Expenditure side, and the remaining heads require no remarks.

"54. On the Expenditure side the first difference calling for notice is under "Interest," and this has, as mentioned above, to be considered along with the same entry in the English part of the accounts. The English estimates provide, as already stated, for an additional interest charge of £171,400, say Rx. 267,000; but as in our Indian accounts there is an additional transfer of Rx. 167,000 from the ordinary account of Interest to the Railway and Irrigation accounts, the net burden of interest is enhanced by only Rx. 100,000.

"55. The principal portions of the increase under Civil Departments (Rx. 321,000), are Medical Rx. 149,800, due to provision for plague expenditure which, though not sufficiently provided for in the Estimates of 1897-98, had nevertheless to be incurred; and Superannuations Rx. 46,200, a continually increasing charge.

"56. The statistics of the Revenue and Expenditure of Railways in India may conveniently be thus stated :—

	Budget, 1897-98. Rx.	Revised, 1897-98. Rx.	Budget, 1898-99. Rx.
STATE RAILWAYS—
Gross Earnings	18,023,400	18,994,700	19,382,600

Net on the whole account	6,930,100	7,477,400	7,084,400

"Under State Railways it is mainly on the following lines that the traffic is expected to be better in 1898-99 than it has been in 1897-98:—

	Budget, 1897-98. Rx.	Revised, 1897-98. Rx.	Budget, 1898-99. Rx.
Rajputana-Malwa . . .	2,250,000	1,960,000	2,200,000
Bengal-Nagpur . . .	650,000	590,000	680,000
Bengal-North-Western . .	620,000	620,000	675,000
Oudh and Rohilkhand . .	880,000	900,000	1,000,000

Provision is made for larger working expenses corresponding to the increasing traffic and for special renewals of permanent-way and rolling-stock.

"Under Guaranteed Railways, the Great Indian Peninsula and the Bombay, Baroda and Central India are both expected to recover from the low figures of the current year.

"57. The Army expenditure in India, excluding the account of military operations, is estimated at Rx. 343,100 less than the Budget for 1897-98. The better exchange brings a saving of Rx. 228,300 and the fall in prices Rx. 272,600. There is also less provision for ordnance stores to the extent of Rx. 41,200, and a further deduction is made in India of Rx. 64,900 for certain demands provided for in the English Estimates, but not now required. Against these savings, of which the total is Rx. 607,000, we have to provide for an increase of Rx. 27,400 for pensions, the addition being larger than usual owing to the grant of extra pensions in consequence of the military operations of the year, and Rx. 11,500 for providing medals. We have also, as already mentioned, provided Rx. 200,000 for possible improvements in the British soldiers' pay.

"Railway Construction.

"58. I referred last year to a systematic programme of Railway construction which had been sanctioned by the Secretary of State. It amounted to 28 crores (afterwards extended to 29⅜ crores), and was intended to last over three years, 1896-97 to 1898-99. I divided it, for convenience sake with reference to our accounts, into four categories, namely:—

First.—State Railway Construction; money found by Government, but also by debentures in the case of the East Indian and Assam-Bengal Railway Companies.

Second.—Construction by Companies, out of funds raised by them or advanced by Government to them (including a small advance for a Native State Railway).

Third.—Construction by Companies outside the accounts of the Government, and also construction by Branch Line Companies.

Fourth.—New construction by the old Guaranteed Companies.

"59. The programme of 29⅜ crores did not include the Railways of the third category, and no arrangements had yet been made for any construction under the fourth category. The estimate for expenditure under the first and second categories, that is, the expenditure falling within the "programme" during 1897-98, came to Rx. 10,130,000. But the revision of Ways and Means imposed upon us by the difficulties which began in June and July, alluded to in paragraph 37 above, compelled us to reduce the amount by one crore, and it stood therefore at Rx. 9,130,000. For similar reasons the Government of India have thought it advisable to curtail the intended expenditure of 1898-99, as the strain through which the country has passed during the past two years, renders it inadvisable to raise money at the rate which was contemplated before the Famine and the Frontier war were within our calculations. The expenditure for 1898-99 was therefore at first fixed at Rx. 10,121,300; but as for various reasons, including the engineering strike in England, even the Rx. 9,130,000 will not be worked up to in 1897-98, these two amounts are now redistributed between the two years, and thus the estimates now stand at Rx. 8,414,400 for 1897-98 and Rx. 10,836,900 for 1898-99.

"60. The details are as follows :—

TOTAL	2,160,200	2,360,700

"64. The estimate under the fourth category provides mainly for the Calicut-Cannanore, Amalner-Jalgaon, and Chalisgaon-Dhulia Railways.

"Irrigation.

"65. The usual annual amount of Rx. 750,000 is provided for expenditure on Irrigation in 1898-99. The similar grant for 1897-98 has not been fully worked up to, owing chiefly to certain recoveries and writes-back not provided for in the Budget.

The principal works under this head are at present—

" Remittance and Debt.

"66. The following account shews in a shortened form the requirements of the Secretary of State; the figures are drawn up so as to shew separately the transactions on account of Government, and the transactions arising out of the operations of Railway Companies:—

	Revised, 1897-98. £	Budget, 1898-99. £
Requirements on Government Account—
Excess of expenditure on Revenue Account	16,099,000	16,286,500
Expenditure not charged to Revenue	834,600	1,119,900
Net payments on Remittance Accounts, etc.	187,700	191,300
Total Requirements	17,121,300	17,597,700
Transactions of Railway Companies—
Net receipts on account of Capital	1,170,300	1,676,000
Payments for Stores, etc.	1,919,000	2,619,000
Net Outgoings	748,700	943,000
Net Funds required	17,870,000	18,540,700

"67. The following figures shew the manner in which the above requirements have been or are to be financed:—

	Revised, 1897-98. £	Budget, 1898-99. £
By Council Bills (net Remittance)	8,708,600	16,000,000
By addition to Permanent Debt	3,497,300	2,615,300
By addition to Temporary Debt	5,000,000	Nil.
By reduction of Cash Balance	664,100	...
Deduct—Addition to Cash Balance	...	74,600
	17,870,000	18,540,700

"It will be seen that the Secretary of State opens the year with outstandings of temporary debt to the extent of £6,000,000, and this he intends to renew. Under the head of Permanent Debt he intends to discharge India Debentures to the extent of £3,000,000 and Oudh and Rohilkhand Debenture Stock to the extent of £384,700, giving a total of £3,384,700. For the discharge of this amount, and for generally supplementing his resources, he intends to raise permanent debt to the extent of £6,000,000. His further requirements will be met by drawing Council Bills to the extent of £16,000,000.

"68. We propose in India to raise a Rupee Loan of Rx. 3,000,000.

"69. These announcements of the amounts of Council Bill drawings and of debt to be raised are made with the usual reservation of entire liberty to the Secretary of State to vary the amounts as he may find occasion.

"Currency Policy.

"70. I regret that I am not in a position to make any further pronouncement on the part of the Government, on the subject of the Currency Policy. Since the date, January 14th, on which I informed the Council that the matter was having the anxious consideration of the Government of India, we have communicated to Her Majesty's Secretary of State our views on the present position. We are now also sending home to him a copy of the Honourable Mr. Arthur's address to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and of an important communication we have received from the Bombay Chamber. We are confident that Her Majesty's Government will give the subject their early attention.

"Review of twenty years' Finance.

"71. I conclude my statement with a short review of twenty years of Indian finance, 1878 to 1898.

"72. Twenty years ago the experience of a severe famine in Northern India, followed after a short interval by another in Southern India, brought home to us the effect upon our finances of such periodically recurring disasters, and obliged us to lay down a financial policy intended to have the effect of increasing our capacity for dealing with similar calamities in the future. We have now passed through another and a severer famine, and it will be useful to look back over this period and to see whether our financial policy has, as a whole, been successful, and whether, taking the twenty years together, a period covering both the financial preparation for, and the actual experience of, disaster, we have paid our way and can give a good account of what financially we have accomplished. These twenty years include, it must be remembered, the war in Afghanistan, the annexation of Upper Burma, and the recent wars in Chitral and on our North-Western Frontiers. They include the outlay entailed by a programme of expenditure on 'special defences' which began in 1886-87 and is only now being closed; and they include the large increase of the army effected after the occupation of Upper Burma.

"73. I present on the opposite page a statement in a compressed form, which includes every transaction which during the period in question has passed through our accounts. I think the form is as devoid of technicalities as a statement of so complicated and comprehensive a subject can be, and is such as to be easily followed. I summarize the result as follows.

"74. Taking first the Revenue Account, and reckoning as ordinary expenditure everything except the cost of our large wars, of the 'special defences' just alluded to, of actual famine relief, and of Railway construction so far as met out of revenue, the result is that our revenue has exceeded our ordinary expenditure by Rx. 50,988,294. Distributed into four quinquennial periods this figure is made up as follows:—

	Rx.
1878—83	22,294,539
1883—88	5,513,331
1888—93	13,472,520
1893—98	9,707,904
TOTAL .	50,988,294

"75. Of this excess of revenue, we have spent Rx. 21,223,424 on War (our smaller military expeditions are not included in this term, but are taken as ordinary expenditure); we have spent Rx. 4,589,664 on special defence works; we have spent Rx. 8,138,478 upon Famine Relief, and we have spent Rx. 13,659,867 upon Railway construction. The balance of Rx. 3,376,861 remains over, to the good, on the whole account. We have, in the twenty years, by this amount more than paid our way.

"76. On our borrowing and investment account we have raised debt to the extent of £65,786,082 sterling (including £1,542,500 East Indian Railway Debentures) and Rx. 48,815,586. This is mostly increase of permanent debt, but it includes Rx. 8,632,573 obtained by extending the advantages of Savings Banks all over India. Of this large sum, it will be seen, we have spent £19,448,516 and Rx. 53,518,033 mostly on the construction of Railways, but partly also on Major Irrigation works (Minor Irrigation works are paid for from Revenue); we have used £33,542,776 and Rx. 10,675 to buy up the undertakings of the East Indian Railway and other similar Companies, as they fell in under the purchase clauses of their contracts. We have lent Rx. 16,473,480 to Port Trusts for the construction of Docks and Harbour works at Calcutta, Bombay, Madras and elsewhere, to Municipalities for expenditure on projects of water-supply and drainage, and to cultivators for promotion of agriculture. But as Rx. 11,211,096 has, during the same time, been repaid to us by our debtors, the net burden upon us in respect of these lendings has been only Rx. 5,262,384.

"77. A further sum of £6,734,900, included in our borrowings, has been placed at the disposal of Railway Companies for expenditure on Railway construction under their contracts with us.

"78. Passing to the accounts of these Railway Companies, we find that, in addition to the sum of £6,734,900 just mentioned as lent to them by us, they have raised, either under our guarantee or under pledges of assistance from us, capital to the extent of £31,647,425 sterling plus Rx. 1,527,904. Their capital expenditure, during the twenty years amounts in sterling or its equivalent to £39,658,227 besides Rx. 1,098,145 on account of Branch Line Companies.

"79. As to the effect on our revenues of all this expenditure on Railway Construction, it may be stated in this way. At the beginning of the twenty years' period the annual loss on Railways after meeting all interest charges was about Rx. 1,500,000, whereas it is now, except in good years, nearly Rx. 2,000,000. This is an apparent loss of Rx. 500,000 a year; but it has to be remembered that by reason of the depreciation of the rupee, it requires now more than Rx. 1,000,000 net earnings to pay the interest charge on the sterling capital as it stood in 1878; so that our Railway Revenue account has, after the expenditure of the twenty years, so far improved that it not only provides the whole of the interest charge which that expenditure has imposed, but meets in addition thereto Rx. 500,000 of the burden which the fall of the rupee has intermediately added in respect of the capital as it stood in 1878.

"80. Stated shortly, therefore, the result of twenty years' finance is this. So far as Revenue goes we have, even after charging off Rx. 13,660,000 spent from Revenue account on Railway construction, more than paid our way, including all expenditure on war, special defences, and famine. So far as capital transactions go, we have raised under various conditions and spent upon Railways, Irrigation, Harbour Works and Docks, Municipal projects, and Agricultural Improvements, a sum equal (at 16 pence the rupee) to Rx. 198,820,000; and we are after all this expenditure better off by Rx. 500,000 a year than before we undertook it. I am dealing, it must be remembered, with direct financial returns only; the effect of all this expenditure on development of Revenue and its economic and administrative aspects lie outside my present purposes. As mere episodes in these transactions, we have spread Savings Banks and Money Order offices over the country; we have received in the former a net sum of Rx. 8,630,000 in deposit, and we carry out remittances in the latter to an annual extent of about Rx. 25,000,000.

"81. One of my objects in setting out this general review of our finances is to point out how little occasion there is for our seeking assistance from Her Majesty's Government in aid of our revenue account. This course has been suggested in many quarters, both in England and in this country, but the Government of India have never wavered from the position taken up by Sir John Strachey in his Financial Statement for 1880-81, from which I quote the following paragraph:—

"43. I can imagine few greater misfortunes to India than the loss of her financial independence, and the acceptance by England of financial responsibility for her Indian Empire. It would signify to India the loss of control over her own affairs in every department of her administration, the possible subordination of her interests to those of a foreign country, and the substitution of ignorance for knowledge in her Government. Although some rare instances may be quoted in which, when there seemed to be a conflict between English and Indian interests, it may perhaps be doubted whether India has been treated with perfect fairness, there can be no question that, on the whole, the Government of India has been carried on with as honest and thorough a regard for Indian interests as if India had a separate national existence of her own. England may rightly be proud of the way in which she has treated her great dependency. These fortunate results have, however, been due not only to her justice, but also to the wisdom with which she has left to India a separate financial responsibility. England has felt that it would be no kindness to take upon herself burdens which India now bears, to guarantee Indian debts, pay for Indian wars, and relieve Indian famines. England has also felt that it was wise, in her own true interest, to refuse to take into her own hands the control of the £67,000,000 which now constitutes the revenue of India. England does not choose that there should be grounds for even a suspicion in regard to the purity of her motives. I say this in the belief that India has before her a future of increasing wealth and prosperity; but if this anticipation should not be verified, and her future should be one of financial embarrassment, the loss of her financial independence would bring with it other misfortunes. I trust that the people of England may never find cause for believing that the maintenance of their Indian Empire means the imposition of heavy burdens on themselves.

"82. The record of twenty years' finance which I have displayed in the above figures is a better one than can be shewn by almost any country in the world but the United Kingdom. As Sir J. Strachey said, we ask for no charity from England. As a mere matter of our financial credit, we consider it infinitely more profitable to us to shew that we are able with our own resources to rise from our accumulated misfortunes of last year to new energy and new prosperity, than to present ourselves before England as a poor relation seeking help out of her abundant wealth. We have every prospect, as the Budget Estimates for next year have shewn, of wiping out, within a single year, so far as our financial condition is concerned, the evil effects of the year of calamities through which we have just passed.

MEMON BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to render it permissive to the members of the Memon community to declare themselves subject to Muhammadan law. He said: "As the Report of the Select Committee is a somewhat exceptional one I think it is advisable to explain that Report in a few words. The Memons of Bombay are a small community of about 8,000 souls who have been governed up to the present time in the matter of their inheritance by a customary law which has been expounded in a series of decisions of the Bombay High Court. The question of defining and specifying the law by which their inheritance should be guided has been before the Local Government and the Government of India for many years. Two years ago we were advised by the Bombay Government that the general feeling of the Memon community was that this customary law should govern the inheritance of members of the community as a general rule, but that power should be given to particular members of the community who so desired it to differentiate themselves and by a formal registered declaration pronounce themselves and their families subject to the ordinary Muhammadan law of inheritance. On that understanding a Bill was prepared and introduced into this Council. When the Select Committee sat upon that Bill last year we were informed that the Memon community, if it had originally possessed those desires upon which the Bill had been framed, had now altered their opinion, and that the desire of the great body of the community now was that it should be altogether governed by the Muhammadan law and not by the customary law which had previously governed it. On this it was considered necessary to consult the community in a very formal way, which has been done through the Bombay Government, and the community has now by a very large majority indeed declared its desire that the general law of inheritance to govern them shall be the ordinary Muhammadan law and not the customary law. In a matter of this kind Government only seeks to give effect to what is the general wish of a community of the kind, but the Committee felt that it was impossible to change the Bill round so completely as the new expressions of their desires would have compelled us to do. Under the new statement of the opinion it was no longer to be a special act of a special member of the community that he should declare himself subject to Muhammadan law, but it was to be a specific and individual act of a member of the community that he should declare himself subject to the customary law. Now in framing a fresh Bill upon these new lines the difficulty presented itself to us that, if the general body of the community was to be subject to the Muhammadan law, any dissenter from that proposition making a declaration that he wished his family to be subject to the customary law would have practically to write himself down a dissenter from the general Muhammadan law, to proclaim himself unorthodox, and in other words an infidel. This was a position so serious that the Select Committee considered for some time what possible alternative might be suggested to overcome the natural unwillingness of the dissenters of the community to carry out what they felt to be most suited to the circumstances of their own families. The suggestion which was eventually made is a very important one, and that is that the Bill should take the shape of giving the Muhammadan law to the whole community, but allowing anybody who wished to remove his own particular family out of the general law to carry out his purposes by a testamentary disposition. Testamentary dispositions under the strict Muhammadan law are very limited, indeed, and it is a proposition which we felt we could not carry through without once more consulting the Memons of Bombay. This is the purport of the advice that has been given by the Select Committee, and we now recommend that the Government of Bombay should be once more formally consulted in the matter."

CENTRAL PROVINCES TENANCY BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN moved that the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Agricultural Tenancies in the Central Provinces be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, the Hon'ble Sir Arthur Trevor, the Hon'ble Pandit Suraj Kaul, the Hon'ble Mr. Chitnavis and the mover.

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS said:—"My Lord, with Your Excellency's kind permission I beg to offer some remarks on the principles of the Tenancy Bill of the Central Provinces. The Bill vitally affects the interests of the whole agricultural population resident therein, and as such I crave the indulgence of the Council if I dwell a little too long upon a subject which is so very technical in its character and which is so peculiarly important to my own province.

"My Lord, before I come to the discussion of the Bill, I have a duty to perform, and that is to express gratification on behalf of the people I represent that the Bill is in the hands of the Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn whose long and varied experience in matters of administration and knowledge of local circumstances, and whose sympathy with the people he once ruled with such marked ability, it would be impossible to question. The people of my province hope great things from him. They believe that in the Hon'ble Member they have a gentleman so thoroughly acquainted with all the circumstances of the province which he has ruled for a long period with so much distinction to himself and benefit to the people that they can fully trust him to apply the Bill in a cautious, wise and judicious spirit. Now, as to the Bill itself, my Lord, it is a matter of congratulation that Your Excellency's Government does not intend to go behind the arrangement under which the malguzari system of land-tenure was introduced in the Central Provinces. I do not therefore propose to take up the time of the Council by a detailed account of the revenue-system as it existed under the old Bhonsla Kings and of the way in which it developed into the present proprietary system under the beneficent policy of the British Raj. It will be sufficient for my purpose if I say that the essence of the Maratha revenue-system consisted in constant revision of the revenue-assessments with the view of maintaining them at the highest possible level and thus preventing the growth of middlemen with rights and interests intermediate between the Government and the cultivator.

"But the evils of a system which recognised no property in land and had no fixity of any description whatsoever were seen in a declining revenue, in an increasing amount of fallow uncultivated land, in the involved and embarrassed condition of both the patels and the raiyats, and in the general negligence and indifference with which agricultural operations were carried on under it. Things continued in this state till the year 1818, when the northern half of the province was ceded to the British Government, and the Nagpur State, which, roughly speaking, formed the southern half, came under British management owing to the minority of Raghoji III. The former districts, designated the Saugor and Nerbudda territories, were later on brought under the authority of the Agra Government, and afterwards under that of the North-Western Provinces; while the Nagpur State was temporarily managed by the Resident, Sir R. Jenkins, who thus became fully cognisant of the evils under which the land-administration then suffered. To remedy these evils, Sir Richard Jenkins thus advised his officers:—'In the conduct of the assessments the attention of all must be specially directed to revert to the regular principles of the ancient system, to guarantee to the patels the just and faithful observance, on the part of the Government, of the engagements which might be concluded, to remit balances which appeared irrecoverable, to make the assessments light and moderate, to provide for restoring waste-lands by cowles (i.e., agreements) granted according to the former practice, and for the resuscitation of capital in the hands of the agricultural classes and to prolong the terms of leases.' He further said: 'It is required to touch with a tender hand the relations between the patels and the raiyats, to avoid unnecessary interference and discourage litigation, to redress well-founded complaints, but mainly to rely on the effects of moderate demands on the part of Government and equitable conduct in its operations for realizing them; as well as on the consequent excitement of competition in the patels for agricultural labour to produce a gradual amelioration in the condition of the raiyats.' For a considerable period these principles guided the land-revenue policy of the province; but unfortunately, during the time the government of the country underwent many changes, and the revenue-system, though it worked well for a while, was found by experience to contain all the evils of the old system, was devoid of permanency or fixity, and became, in the course of time, an instrument of evil in the hands of unscrupulous officials. Things continued to drift in this state until 1853, when, on the death of Raja Raghoji III, the province was annexed to British territory. For a short time the old Maratha revenue-policy was pursued in the newly-acquired province. But it was soon realized that, owing to heavy oppressive assessments, it had resulted in distress and ruin to thousands, in the desertion of villages, in a general deterioration of the whole tract called the Saugor and Nerbudda territories, and in a considerable falling off of the Government revenue. The first to draw attention to this deplorable state of things was Mr. Bird, who was deputed by the Supreme Government to enquire into the state of the country. The Chief Commissioner of the time, Mr. (now Sir) Richard Temple, after a careful perusal of the reports of Mr. Bird and other officers, and after giving full and anxious consideration to the evils arising from the revenue-system in vogue at the time, determined in the interests of the country and the Government to recommend a proprietary system of land-tenure for the province.

"Accordingly proprietary right was conferred on the patels of the Central Provinces. I need scarcely say that this grant was a free, generous and unconditional gift of the Government; and as such was received by the people with feelings of the deepest gratitude. At the same time that proprietary right was conferred upon the patels, the rights of the tenants were also defined and recognised. This resulted in what is known as the first proprietary settlement made between the years 1862 and 1868, which guided the revenue policy of the province till the year 1883, when it underwent another change, and the ultimate result of that change was the existing Tenancy Act of 1883 which the present Bill proposes to amend.

"I may be permitted to observe that the broad result of the Act of 1883 was to strengthen the hands of the tenant against the landlord—to protect him against capricious eviction and to secure him in the possession of his holding as long as he paid a fair rent. The Act did more. It conferred on the tenants (says the Hon'ble Mover of the Bill) powers and privileges very much in excess of the privileges given to occupancy-tenants in other parts of India. I would, even at the risk of some repetition and tediousness, call the attention of the Council to these privileges. They are, to quote the words of the Hon'ble framer of the Bill, as follows:—

'The absolute occupancy-tenant has been declared practically a proprietor. He is entitled to transfer his rights in his holding without reference to anybody. His rent has been fixed for the period of settlement.

'The occupancy-tenant has been endowed for the first time in the history of the province with the power of transfer subject of course to some limitations. His rent has also been fixed for a period of ten years at least.

'The ordinary tenant has been given the right to have his rent fixed for seven years. In cases of disturbances the malguzar has to pay him compensation for the improvements made by him in the soil. He has been given the power of protecting himself by purchasing the right of occupancy at a sum equal to 2½ times the amount of his rental. His rights have been made heritable and transferable under the same restrictions as those which apply to the occupancy-tenant.'

"My Lord, if these concessions have already been made to the tenant, I find it hard to imagine that there can still exist any cause for complaint or dissatisfaction on his part against the landlord. I, for myself, believe that there can be none. Nay, I would go a step further and say that the present Bill is not the result of the complaints of the tenants against their landlords, for it is admitted on all hands that very healthy relations exist between the two. As a proof of these good relations I would beg leave to quote the opinions of some of the most distinguished and experienced officers who have conducted the administration of the province.

"Mr. Venning, Commissioner of the Jabalpur Division in the year 1893-94, says:—

'I agree with Mr. Cook (the Deputy Commissioner) that the small use of the section (section 62) that has been made is a sign of the good relations subsisting between landlords and tenants. If the former habitually treated the latter in a high-handed way, ejecting them and enhancing rents in contravention of the law, it is difficult not to believe that a much larger proportion of tenants would have availed themselves of this simple means of improving their status.'

"Mr. Anderson, Commissioner of the Nagpur Division, writes :—

'So far as the reports submitted and my information go, the majority of landlords in this division are considerate to their ordinary tenants, and they all know well enough, I believe, that they have no legal power to eject them at their pleasure. The ordinary tenant is no longer a tenant-at-will, and his lot is not to be specially pitied, provided his position under the law is respected by his malguzar, and that his own extravagance or misfortune has not landed him in excessive debts.'

"Only two years ago, Colonel Bowie, Commissioner of the Nerbudda Division, thus wrote to the Revenue Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces :—

'One of the chief reasons why the tenants show so little inclination to purchase the right of occupancy is that their position is so secure that they do not think it worth while to pay for such rights."

"Colonel Thomas, Commissioner of the Chhatisgarh Division, writes :—

'As a rule malguzars are not on the whole hard upon their tenants. Many of them realise fully that their own property depends upon that of their tenants, and it is altogether to their advantage that the tenants of the villages should, as a body, be in a position to cultivate all their lands fully each year, and to this end the aid that many tenants receive from their malguzars is by no means inconsiderable.'

"In view of this testimony there would seem to be no justification for undertaking fresh legislation to improve the position of the tenant at the end of every few years. Such a course can only unsettle the rural equilibrium, arouse jealousy and suspicion in the minds of the malguzar, raise unreasonable expectations in those of the tenants and plunge them both into needless litigation.

"As regards the necessity of legislation at the present moment, public opinion in my province is decidedly against it. In expressing my own individual opinion on the subject I most respectfully beg to submit that statistics might have been usefully employed to prove the necessity of the present measure. For instance, we might have been told how many suits have been instituted for enhancement of rent in the case of occupancy-tenants and ordinary tenants, and with what results; in how many of these cases the Government considers that the landlord has exercised his right of enhancement unfairly towards the tenant and beyond what is justified by the circumstances of the case; whether there has been any general tendency in many districts on the part of the malguzars to raise the rents of their tenants beyond what is fair and reasonable; in how many cases the Settlement-officers have characterized the existing rents as more than the land can bear; in how many instances decrees for ejectment have been passed and carried into effect; what statistical evidence is there to show that the money-lending classes have practically secured the privileges of tenants to a considerable extent.

"My Lord, I regret that my information on these heads is meagre and scanty. All that I have been able to gather from a study of annual revenue reports is that in ten years, from 1885 to 1894, there were only 319 cases instituted for enhancement of rent in the whole of the Central Provinces. When this number is divided between 18 districts, it comes to this—that in ten years there were on an average 18 such cases in each district—(i. e.) about two cases each year—a wholly insignificant number.

"I have also gathered that the number of decrees executed for ejectment in eight years, from 1887 to 1895, was 1,713; i.e., there were, on the average, about 12 eviction cases per year in every district.

"I consider these numbers far too small and insignificant to call for any alteration in the substantive law of the land.

"My Lord, the history of the Central Provinces may be very appropriately said to be marked by periodical fits of anti-landlordism. Every few years a cry is raised on behalf of the tenant and rights and privileges are showered upon him. So numerous had these rights become, and so strong, in consequence, was the position of the tenant, that in 1888-89 the Local Government discovered that it was the landlord and not the tenant who required protection. In writing to the Government of India for an abrogation of the half assets rule, limiting the Government revenue to 50 per cent., which had been until then regarded as the recognized principle of the settlement, Mr. Fuller, the then Junior Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, remarks as follows:—

'The enquiries which have been made in course of the settlement now in progress, and the more accurate agricultural statistics which the administration is now receiving, have made it clear that, except in a few well-marked tracts, there has been very little general enhancement of rent since settlement, and that what increase has taken place in rent-rolls is due for the most part to extension of cultivation, not to rent enhancement.

'The tenants have in fact been too strong for the malguzars, and have been able to keep to themselves the advantages arising from the opening of the province by railways and roads, and the general rise in the price of produce.'

"My Lord, this was the opinion of the Administration in 1888, when the principles of assessment for the revised settlement were under consideration. The malguzar then had to be propitiated; accordingly the Government thought it politic to declare that it was the malguzar who required protection. But the year 1888 is gone. The settement is over. In the interval, brief as it is, the opinion of the Government also has undergone a revolution. The cry is now for the tenant. Should this game of 'see-saw' be kept up, we may at the time of next settlement, when rents have to be raised, expect to hear a cry for the malguzar again. In accordance with the law of periodicity, a new set of experiments in legislation in favour of the malguzars will then be suggested. My Lord, these constant changes in the policy of Government, followed by a fresh instalment of legislation every few years, cannot be too strongly condemned. The people look upon any change in the land law with the greatest suspicion and anxiety, for it means the dislocation of existing relations and the filling of lawyers' purses. Just as the people are beginning to understand the old law, a new law with radically different principles is thrust upon them. We may create rights and privileges in favour of the tenant; but it will take years before he will come to know of them, and in the meanwhile money-lenders, malguzars and tenants will go on upon the footing of the old law, till some tenant bolder than his fellows, and probably living near the head-quarters, goes to a pleader and discovers a means of evading the tie of moral obligation. The new discovery will probably puzzle him at first and he will be sceptical as to its truth, till a Court of Justice decides in his favour. For a time the result will entail considerable hardship on the small money-lender and the impecunious malguzar. But after the period of transition the money-lender will devise some means of evading the law or making up for his losses by imposing harder terms on the borrower; and the sanction of public opinion, which has hitherto acted to some extent as a check on him, will cease to have any force. These observations apply with peculiar force to the Central Provinces, and in support of them I would crave Your Excellency's permission to quote what Mr. J. W. Neill, our late Judicial Commissioner, a gentleman who knew the Province much better than probably any other officer, has said on the subject:—

'So far as I know, there is no need to amend the law as yet, and it will be much better to wait for some years longer and see how things go The present law has only been in operation for eleven years and was amended in 1889. The papers which I have seen do not, in my opinion, make out a cause for immediate legislation.'

"It has been well said by the Hon'ble Mover of the Bill that measures, however, excellent, often take a long time to reach the understanding of the people. But will a wise Legislature accept this ignorance of the law as a ground for further legislation? What is wanted now is not fresh legislation, but that pains should be taken and time given to make the people understand the nature and the meaning of the existing law.

"It has been further said that—

'For fourteen years this (that is, the Tenancy Act of 1883) has been the law of the land, yet it has never sunk into the mind of the ordinary tenant that he can protect himself by purchasing the right of occupancy or by claiming compensation for disturbance.'

"This is considered by my Hon'ble friend the Mover of the Bill a sufficient ground for further changes in the law. My humble opinion is that it leads to a different conclusion, viz., to the fact that the existing law has done all it is possible for law to do to promote healthy relations between landlord and tenant, and that therefore further changes are unnecessary. The ordinary tenant has not bought the right of occupancy, for the simple reason that he is content with his present position, because he enjoys very nearly the same rights and privileges as the occupancy-tenant. He is well aware that the difference between his position and that of the occupancy-tenant is one merely of sentiment, and that it is not worth his while to buy a mere name or a title with his hard-earned money. In support of this statement I would beg leave to quote what Mr. Venning, late Commissioner of Jabalpur, says on the subject: 'Ten years experience,' writes Mr. Venning, 'has shown that the provisions of section 62 of the Act, which it was hoped would allow a sufficient means of acquiring occupancy-rights, are almost wholly inoperative. No evidence on this point could be much stronger than that of Khan Bahadur Aulad Hussein, who states that at the time of the recent revenue and rent announcements in the Jabalpur District great pains were taken by the Settlement-officer to explain the provisions of that section, only 22 tenants in some 1,750 villages came forward to purchase occupancy-rights.' This shows that it is not ignorance of the law that has deterred the tenant from acquiring occupancy-rights from the malguzar, but the fact that he finds his position safe and that the malguzar is kind and considerate to him. Then, again, cases of compensation for disturbance have been few, not because the tenant is not aware of the extent and value of his rights, but because he has been very seldom disturbed by his landlord, because the cases of ejectment or enhancement have been few. It is naturally impossible for a tenant to claim compensation when he is left in the undisturbed possession of his land. The Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill has also been good enough to observe that, in some instances, the greatest credit is due to the landholders, that when the oppressiveness of the rent was brought to their notice, they have invariably accepted the recommendations of the Settlement-officers. I would request Your Excellency's Council to consider whether the way to recognise the services of this body of men, who, according to the Hon'ble Mover of the Bill, have shown so much consideration for the well-being of their tenants, is to curtail their powers, to make their position more uncertain and embarrassing, and to place them more and more under the thumb of the Revenue-officers.

"The Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn has also said that in certain cases the landlords enhance rent by means which have been accepted by the ordinary tenant without complaint. Now, I have already shown Your Excellency's Council that in the early nineties the position of the tenant was much stronger than that of the malguzar, and have quoted the testimony of the administration of the then Chief Commissioner, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, to this fact. The settlement was then in progress. After the settlement revised figures of rent were announced to the malguzars, who received instructions from the Revenue-officers not to raise the rent for seven years, and to these instructions the malguzars have so far faithfully adhered. If any of them have been guilty of violation of these orders, will the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill tell us in how many instances the malguzars have found it possible to raise rents in spite of successive bad seasons from which the province has since then been suffering? As the Government, with its unlimited sources of information, has not thought fit to furnish us with any statistics on this point, we may presume that the number of those who have been guilty of enhancement is few. Will a change in the law be justifiable to punish these few? Will it be right to visit the sins of the offending few on the unoffending many?

"What, then, are the facts which justify the present Bill? It is said that tenant holdings have changed hands to an alarming extent and that this power of alienation should therefore be curtailed. But the number of transfers which have already taken place does not appear to be large. Moreover, the Settlement-officer of Nagpur has found that during the last thirty years 50 per cent. of these transfers were in favour of agriculturists. This healthy circulation of land, as some of our local officers have pointed out, ought not to be checked. In the Revenue Administration Report for 1895-96, Sir Charles Lyall, the present Chief Commissioner, observed that—'he had been giving his attention to the subject of transfers, and the results of the year were in full accord with his general conclusion that a large proportion of voluntary transfers are productive of good.'

"If that is granted, why has it been thought desirable to restrict the right of a tenant to borrow money on the security of his holding? What changes have taken place in the province within the last twelve years, in the condition of the agricultural classes, which call for such a stringent measure? A tenant borrows, and must borrow, till, by a process of natural selection, a better class of agriculturists come into existence, and in the meanwhile the problem is how to accelerate this natural process. The landlord, moreover, has the right to say that an improvident tenant ought not to be forced upon him when half the transfers take place in favour of agriculturists presumably better and more thrifty than the outgoing tenants. I confess that I for some time thought that it would be better to restrict the tenant's power of mortgage or sale, by law, but recent experiences have caused me to change my opinion. The necessity of resorting to the money-lender has been so forcibly brought home to one's mind by the famine and the continued scarcity of the last three or four years, that one must pause before giving support to any measure restricting the borrowing power of our tenants. That even the most deserving and thrifty tenant must borrow in such a year has been shown by almost every officer in the province, whose opinion was invited in 1894. Though many of these officers recommended some restriction of this power, their unanimous opinion was for the retention of some form of alienation by which the tenants with the help of the malguzars could borrow the necessary funds for cultivation, maintenance of their families and other necessary purposes. It has been said that this opinion of the officers has since 1894 undergone a change. It is alleged that opinion has 'advanced' in favour of total prohibition of all forms of alienation. My Lord, I am at a loss to understand how it could have been possible for the officers in question to change their opinions in the manner stated, when the experience of the last four years has forced on us the conviction that the saūkar is a necessary element in the village economy.

"The opinion of Mr. Carey, our Settlement Commissioner, on this point deserves careful consideration :—

'The experience of the past few years in Saugor and Damoh,' says Mr. Carey, 'has forced on me the conviction that the much-abused saukar is a necessary institution in a country such as India, with its insecure agriculture. We must have Josephs to store in years of plenty for seasons of deficient crops. In these districts during the three last years (I do not allude to the present year 1896-97) most of the land has been sown with the aid of the saukar, though each season brought increasingly heavy losses. The interests of the saukar are in this particular matter identical with those of the raiyat. If the land remains unsown, the money-lender loses all his venture. Is it to be accepted that the money-lenders would have done as much had the security which the cultivators had to offer been less? Possibly they would, as the last chance of recovering their past loans But will they be so ready to do so in future when the law of the land enables the cultivator to repudiate his liabilities, pocket the swag and retain his land?'

'It takes,' he adds, 'lakhs of rupees a year to sow any particular district, and it is impossible for Government to fill the place of the banya unless a grand system of Agricultural Land Banks was introduced. The present aid afforded by Government in the shape of the Agricultural Loans Act, beneficial as it is, really represents but a drop in the ocean.'

"To this statement of Mr. Carey I would add that the capital necessary to keep the tenant's family in food and clothes till the crops are sold in the market, is also a heavy item, which cannot be overlooked. Now, how can the tenant borrow all this money in a bad year? Under the proposed law he will be able to do so only at a rate of interest which will make it practically impossible for him to free himself from his embarrassments in the future. But the theorist will very likely rejoin and say 'Oh! the tenant can borrow under the Agricultural Loans Act at a very low interest.' The State, I take it, is not going to start an Agricultural Bank or become lender of money to the agriculturists on a large scale. I have the authority of the present Chief Commissioner himself for this statement. 'The Government,' says he, in his Revenue Administration Report of the Central Provinces for the year 1895-96, 'can never entirely supplant the natural and traditional agencies for the supply of seed to tenants who are not provident enough to store it for themselves, and it would be most injudicious to attempt to interfere with those agencies by too frequent advances, which can only have the effect of making terms harder for those whom Government cannot afford to assist.' Moreover, the formalities which must be gone through under the Loans Act are so elaborate that a simple peasant prefers his village-saukar, though his terms are less favourable than those of the Government. The very fact that the tenants have not largely availed themselves of the Act shows either that it is unsuited to the conditions of agricultural society in India, or that those entrusted with its working have been unable to satisfy those for whose benefit it is intended that in the long run, and taking everything into consideration, it is better to have the Government as their creditor than the village-saukar.

"Then, again, it has been said that the registration statistics show that 90 per cent. of occupancy and ordinary tenants continue to cultivate their land without pledging their holdings, and they will therefore in future be able to borrow, even in bad years, what is absolutely necessary for them. I regret that those who have made such statements have overlooked one or two broad facts. The reply to them is that the present law enables a tenant to sell or mortgage his land with the consent of the landlord, and, as landlords are interested in promoting cultivation and securing rents in their villages, and in helping their tenants for this purpose, it is generally from the malguzars, or with the security of the malguzar, that tenants have obtained money for the purpose of cultivation, maintenance of family and the like. Again, the power which the tenant has hitherto possessed of subleasing his holding for a number of years, with the consent of the malguzar, has enabled him to tide over times of scarcity and distress. My Lord, these are the two rights, coupled with the supposed power of the landlord over the land, which have often enabled the tenant to surmount his difficulties and embarrassments, and both these rights the present Bill proposes to take away.

"My Lord, I have said that tenants must borrow, for they must, at all cost, have necessaries of life. But what would be their position under the proposed law? Every year they would see their crops attached in lieu of their debts. Nothing would be left to them to maintain themselves or to spend for the improvement of their lands. They would, in the course of time, grow fraudulent. Driven by necessity, they would try and conceal their crops or make them over to another under a benami transaction. Failing this, they would pawn the last thing they possess. Their credit would be gone. The security of the malguzar, which has all these years helped the tenant to tide over times of want and scarcity, would also be gone, for the malguzar, having lost his hold on the land, would no longer go out of the way to help his tenants. The seed-grain and the food-grain which the malguzar has hitherto supplied would not be forthcoming, for he would have no remedy for the recovery of his money for the grain advanced by him as a loan. Besides this, the system of laoni, i.e., the selling of prospective produce at excessively low prices, would spring up and complete the ruin of the tenant. I would beg leave to quote here some very interesting observations from Sir Richard Jenkins, which give us a glimpse of the state of things in pre-British times when the tenant had no power of alienation.

'The patels,' says Sir Richard Jenkins, 'were in the habit of collecting the twelve annas of the rent on the first demand from the raiyats. Those who were able paid in cash, others borrowed from the patel or gave bonds on his security to saukars, who paid for them, the patel keeping the property of the borrowers under restraint until they liquidated their debts. These transactions often ended in the ruin of raiyats, who, when once involved, could seldom extricate themselves again.'

'The following were the modes of borrowing and repayment of debt in general use :—

first, the laoni, which consisting in making over to the creditor the grain of the crops on the ground at a rate considerably under the bazar price; secondly, a simple loan, which the borrower agrees to repay.

'When a raiyat failed in his agreements he was frequently obliged to obtain another advance by pledging his cattle and implements of husbandry as well as the produce of the fields. Should he still continue insolvent, the patel seized everything the tenant had and took a deed of sale from him, specifying the particulars of the property and declaring that the transfer had been voluntary and that he would never reclaim it.

'Patels to whom raiyats where indebted were permitted to place the property of the defaulters under restraint, but not to sell it without authority from the Superintendent.

If a raiyat left a village in debt to his patel, he was obliged to return and settle all revenue-demands before he was allowed to become a cultivator elsewhere.'

"I would leave it to Your Excellency's Council to consider if this state of things which existed prior to the annexation of the provinces to British territory, and to which the Government now wants to revert by taking away the landed power of alienation, was a particularly happy one.

"It is said that an occupancy-tenant in the North-Western Provinces has no power of transfer, and nevertheless is able to procure all the capital that is necessary. I am unable to understand how it is possible for him to do so. I would like some Hon'ble Member to tell me whether the law of the North-Western Provinces really prevents an occupancy, tenant from sub-leasing the land for a term of years; so far as I have been able to gather from a cursory glance at the North-Western Provinces Rent Act of 1881, I do not think that there is any restriction in the North-Western Provinces on the tenant's power of sub-leasing, or any provision to the effect that a tenant can only sublet from year to year, so that the tenants of the North-Western Provinces enjoy the right of transfer in substance, if not in name.

"The Bill proposes to allow a sublease for one year. In my judgment this is wholly inadequate, for it will place the new occupant in a precarious position; for without an ascertained interest in the land for a sufficient number of years, no one can have any inducement to venture his capital on cultivation. The fixing of an arbitrary limit to a sub-lease is always open to objection. But if the Council is not prepared to leave the law as it stands,—if, in fact, a choice has to be made between one and any other number of years,—I would prefer to take ten years as the maximum limit for the occupancy and seven for the ordinary tenant, which corresponds with the period for which his rents remain practically unchanged. In the present state of the Central Provinces, an agriculturist will hardly ever find it profitable to sublet an ordinary, or, for the matter of that, an occupancy, field, for the obvious reason that the demand in these days of distress is, as the Chief Commissioner very rightly observes in his Resolution on the Courts of Wards' Report, dated 20th February 1898, for tenants and not for land.

"The great objection to an annual sub-lease is that the tenant who wished to sublet part of his holding to pay off his debts would be unable to get as much by the annual sub-lease as by one sub-lease for ten years. In other words, one year's sub-lease of a part of the holding would hardly ever save a tenant, whereas a ten years' lease would often help him out of his embarrassments. This, I think, is the period for which subletting should be allowed with the consent of the malguzar, and to prevent this being abused a right of pre-emption should be given to the malguzar such as he enjoys in the case of absolute occupancy-tenants, except where the subletting has been caused by disabilities on the part of the tenant, such as minority, old age, etc.

"It is said that in Native States tenants can do without the right of alienation and can get enough money for the cultivation of the land. The answer to this argument is that in Native States subletting is allowed, so that the tenants, like those of the North-Western Provinces, have the right of alienation in substance, if not in name. Again, the facilities for the realization of the money advanced are more numerous in Native States than in British territory. A well-to-do man has not the same restraint and limitations put upon his power of realizing his dues as he has in British India. Owing partly to the comparative absence of legislative interference and partly to the imperfect way in which existing laws are executed, the raiyat in the Native States has not yet learnt to disregard the ties of moral obligation. There is not to be found in the Native States that disregard for persons of rank which is seen in British territories, where all men are equal in the eyes of the law. There are not so many lawyers there to teach the raiyats the fine distinctions of law. My Lord, there are so many radical differences in the economic conditions of the Native States on one hand and British territory on the other, that any argument by way of anology is likely to be fallacious.

"It would have been wiser, my Lord, if the experimental measure now before Your Excellency's Council had been first tried in tracts where the raiyatwari system of land-tenure obtains. The Government is the sole landlord in such tracts. Had the experiment failed, the loss would have been the loss of the Government, but the Government, probably, is rich enough to bear many such losses. The case, however, would be very different in the Central Provinces. Here, if the experiment failed to achieve the desired results, the poor malguzar would suffer heavy loss. It would add to the misfortunes he is already labouring under on account of successive bad seasons and heavy assessments. The Dekkhan Agriculturist Commission, while admitting that the evil of transfer is more prevalent in the raiyatwari tracts than in the parts of the country where the proposed legislation is to be applied, declared in their report of 1892 that there were several serious objections to an absolute prohibition of alienation, and that they would rather help the circulation of land amongst agriculturists. An experienced writer, well conversant with the system of land-tenure that obtains in Madras, says :—

'The absolute power given to transfer land by gift or mortgage is in itself excellent, and had the assessment always been moderate could not have worked harm. But, owing to heavy assessments and consequent inability to meet the Government demands, the raiyats have been obliged to exercise this power to such an extent as to place a large portion of the land in the hands of the saukars. The latter have enabled the raiyats to live on somehow. Had the land been tied, the raiyat would no doubt have been placed more speedily in an embarrassing position.'

"My Lord, I would here request my Hon'ble friend Mr. Nicholson, the official representative of Madras, to tell us what his experiences are on the subject, and whether, in his opinion, the proposed legislation would work smoothly in raiyatwari tracts.

"My Lord, I would bring this part of the discussion to a close by a quotation from Mr. Fuller, Commissioner of Settlements and Agriculture, one of the ablest Revenue-officers who have served in the province. He says :—

'I believe that the mortgage and transfer of raiyats' tenures have their origin in ideas which arose long before the British supremacy in India, and that in dealing with the question we are laying hands not on a recent custom of our own creation but on a custom which has its roots in the circumstances of long past years. If this view be correct, it will be exceedingly difficult to put a stop to all transfers by legislation, and I think that experience of these provinces bears out this view. Occupancy and ordinary raiyats have no statutory powers of transfer, but transfers are exceedingly common amongst both classes.' 'I am by no means persuaded,' continues Mr. Fuller, 'that the practice of transfer is as injurious in the agricultural interests of the country as it is commonly supposed to be. It is generally assumed that transfers of raiyati right admit the money-lender to the cultivator's heritage, and this is of course true in a large proportion of cases. But we must not lose sight of the very numerous transfers which merely substitute a good cultivator for one who is indolent or imprudent. The Settlement-officer of Nagpur, who has made inquiries into the question, has concluded that about half the number of transfers which have taken place in that district during the past thirty years have merely shifted from one cultivator to another. The Government is hardly in this matter concerned with individuals, and a transfer under which a man who cannot farm successfully gives place to one who can is in my opinion of much benefit to the country. It would be very risky to put a stop to all transfers of the kind simply in order to prevent those which bring in the money-lender.'

"My Lord, a provision exists in the present Bill making tenants' lands saleable for money advanced by Government. I do not see what difference the Government can possibly make between money advanced by Government for improvements and money advanced by saukars to tenants in times of distress, with the consent of the malguzar and at the same rate of interest as charged by the Government, either to pay off the Government revenue or to keep tenants upon the land. If money has been lent to the people by the saukars to pay the Government in times of famine or scarcity, is it not fair that the Government should protect these saukars in order that they may secure the money they have already advanced?

"Your Excellency's name will ever be cherished with gratitude by the people of my province for the able and sympathetic manner in which you have ruled over the Empire in its days of dire calamity, and I believe no one could better appreciate the difficulties which a future Administration will experience, in case of a similar visitation, if the powers of the tenant be reduced to a minimum by the proposed law.

"The elaborate provisions laid down in the Bill for preventing an illegal transfer seem to be unsuited for the Central Provinces. When the law has declared transfer illegal and has prevented registration of the document evidencing such transfer, I think as much has been done to deter people from lending money as is possible—a great deal more, in fact, than has been done in the North-Western Provinces. To invite distant collaterals to join in the fight for the land and to put it in their power to exercise this privilege at any distance of time, not later than the next following settlement, which may not take place for another fifteen years, would be necessarily increasing litigation and complicating the procedure by constantly changing plaintiffs and defendants in the course of a suit. If anybody is to get back the holding from the transferee, I think it should be either the landlord or the tenant. The wider circle of heirs now let in by the present Bill would lead, as Sir James Caird has observed, to increase of litigation, a great deal of land administration by an 'unrestrained subdivision of holdings amongst the male members of a family.' Sir James Peile also holds the same view. I may remark in passing that even the most ardent advocates of the proposed legislation have doubted the efficacy of the sections regarding collaterals. My Lord, the ultimate effect of all these changes would be that landlords would find it difficult to realise their rent, and would be constantly involved in law-suits. Nor would the tenant benefit; but the lawyer would be greatly enriched. I have the highest possible respect for lawyers, and I always desire that they may get rich and prosper, but I would prefer their doing so at any body's expense but my own.

"My Lord, the position of the malguzars, as it is, is not altogether an enviable one. There are cases, when tenants in bad years leave their lands fallow and surrender them to the landlord. The latter, in order to secure rents for such lands, gives them over to other tenants. This necessarily means a great deal of trouble and expense on the part of the landlord as well as the tenant, for cultivation of fallow land means extra cost. The present Bill will enable any heir of the tenant to claim the land without paying any compensation whatever to the ordinary tenant, and all the money which the latter, or the landlord, has spent on the land will then be entirely lost to them. It is needless for me to point out that this will inflict heavy loss on the malguzar, and when once the fact becomes known to the tenant it will be an instrument in his hand for the oppression of the malguzar. And, in all cases when the Revenue-officer would dispose of lands, it will also make it impossible for him to secure tenants for his land. No enquiry will be made as to whether or not the applicant has the capital or stock necessary for cultivating the land. No security of any sort will be taken, and there will be no penalty for early abandonment. Consequently, creatures of straw will take up land and live from hand to mouth, cultivating one or two acres in a miserable way, and absconding on the approach of the first bad season. This will necessarily in many cases throw obstacles in the way of those who, by reason of superior capital and enterprise, would make most out of the land and effect the greatest improvements. The malguzar has already to pay heavily on account of the revised assessments. And it is to his situation that the Bill contemplates adding further embarrassments.

"My Lord, I now come to another point. I allude to the provision for making the cultivating right in the sír-land absolutely inalienable. This is a radical innovation in the law of the province and the justification for such an innovation is that it is in the interests of the proprietors themselves. But any measure, however beneficent in its intention, can scarcely be said to be welcome when it proposes to take away an important privilege. The settlement of 1863 conferred full proprietary rights on the malguzars of the Central Provinces without any reservation whatsoever. The Local Government of the time suggested that certain restrictions on the alienation of malguzari villages should be insisted on. But the Government of India rejected this suggestion, and, in its letter dated 28th June, 1860 (cited in page 83 of Mr. Nicolls' Digest of the Laws of the Central Provinces), the right conferred is described in the following words:—

'In regard to the admission or creation of a proprietary right in malguzars, I am desired to state that the Governor General in Council is strongly in favour of the measure, so far as it can be carried out without prejudice to the rights of others. But His Excellency in Council is in favour of giving the proprietors thus created as large and absolute a control over the property vested in them as is consistent with local usages or feeling.'

"It will thus appear that, in sanctioning the bestowal of proprietary rights on the Patels of the Central Provinces, the Government directed that, subject to the condition of payment of the land-revenue, and subject to that condition only, every farmer should receive as nearly as possible a fee-simple in his estate with full power to dispose of his interest in the land by sale, gift, mortgage, bequest or otherwise, as he might think fit. The Bill now proposes to lay a rude hand on this arrangement, and it rests with Your Excellency's Government to consider whether, in spite of all the teachings of political economy, it would be a wise policy to take away a right already recognised and sanctioned by a codified Act of Legislature. Had this right of alienation never been conferred, it is possible that malguzars would never have felt the want of it. But once you have recognised the rights, once you have codified the law and allowed the legitimate expectations of all parties to be based on that law, a wise Legislature, I think, will hesitate to take the right away unless a very strong case is made out for such a drastic change.

"The question is, has a strong case been made out for taking this important privilege away? It is possible, my Lord, that a few foolish and improvident proprietors have been found who have not scrupled to sell their birth-right for a mess of pottage—who have parted with their village without leaving any means of subsistence for their family; but would Your Excellency's Government consider it right to take away a privilege from a whole body of men because a few have been found thoughtless? Would it be consonant with the principles of justice to deprive malguzars as a class of a much-prized right because half a dozen of them have been found guilty of abusing it? Moreover, I am by no means inclined to believe that the present body of malguzars, who have come into existence after a process of elimination has taken place, and who, it may be hoped, have profited by the lesson which the fate of their improvident brethren has taught them, stand in need of protection to such an extent as to justify this interference with a vested right? It must not be altogether overlooked that education has made some progress in the Central Provinces, and that, in the course of a few years, we shall have a body of malguzars who will at least have the benefit of 'the 3 rs.' The conduct of the old proprietors can hardly furnish a safe guide to an inference as to the conduct of a generation that has but recently succeeded them, or is about to succeed them, in the course of a few years. The Government ought at any rate to wait and see how these men behave before it proceeds to punish the innocent with the guilty.

"There is another point in this connection to which I would beg leave to draw Your Excellency's attention. It is that rendering the cultivating right in sir inalienable will tend to create two distinct communities in the village economy, namely, one that may be called rent-collecting, and the other cultivating, the former having no interest in the land—a state of things very severely condemned by all experienced Revenue-officers.

"There is another aspect of the question which deserves Your Excellency's careful consideration. If a man, as Justice Stevens, the late Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces, happily puts it, has bought an estate with the object of afterwards selling it at a profit, or if he wishes to part with one estate in order to secure another more profitable or situated more favourably for him, how does the proposed law help him? Will it not force him against his will, and to his inconvenience, to retain the cultivating rights in the sir land of the estate he is anxious to sell, and make it impossible for him to acquire the same rights in the sir land he is anxious to buy?

"The main objection to this proposal is that malguzars themselves, for whose benefit the provision has been introduced, are strongly opposed to such a policy. The Government, it has been shown, did not reserve a right to restrain alienation, when the fee-simple was given to the malguzars. Accordingly, villages have been purchased, and capital has been spent on them, under the belief that the malguzars are to have an unfetterred right of transfer. My Lord, the essence of property is its transferability. Is there any one who doubts that the market value of property will be sensibly diminished when the sale of a village in its entirety, or at any rate of the most valuable portion of it, is dependent on the will of another? The Bill substantially says that, if it be transferred at all, it must be to one who belongs to the agricultural classes. But the agricultural classes have not been defined. Revenue-officers must, in future, supply this information. An inquisitorial proceeding asking for proofs of such delicate matters as means of subsistence, occupation, etc., will have to be submitted to. An intending purchaser of a village under such conditions would certainly offer much less than its present market-value, because of the risk and annoyance attendant on this new procedure, which, I may at once say, is altogether unprecedented and wholly unsuited to the sentiments, habits and customs of the people of the province. My Lord, I cannot help observing that the tendency of the Bill seems to be to make a man an agriculturist in spite of himself. Proprietors are not to be allowed wholly to sever their connection with the land. Freedom of contract is to be altogether taken away. The relation of landlord and tenant inter se, and of both with the money-lender, will hereafter depend, not upon contract nor yet upon definite rules of law, but on the will of Revenue-officers armed with unlimited discretion.

"It is argued that the old body of proprietors are fast dying out, and are often left without means of subsistence. The Bill therefore proposes to make sir inalienable, except with the permission of the Chief Commissioner. The present law merely lays down what rights pass on a sale in the absence of an express agreement. In the case of a voluntary sale the proprietor becomes an occupancy-tenant unless he expressly agrees to transfer his right to cultivate the sir. In the case of an involuntary sale he is given occupancy-rights unless the sale takes place under a mortgage-decree, and in the mortgage the parties have expressly-hypothecated cultivating rights in sir. There is however an unfortunate oversight in the Act, which is more responsible for cases of hardship than the money-lender. The favourite form of mortgage in the Central Provinces is called the lahan gahan. It is a mortgage by conditional sale followed by foreclosure Now the Act is silent as to the rights which accrue under a foreclosure decree. The result is that in every case of foreclosure the proprietor loses his sir and all, even though there was no bargain for it. The Act was amended in 1889 and in another section the word 'foreclosed' was added after the word 'sold'. I understand that a similar suggestion was made for the amendment of section 42; but I have not been able to discover why it was not adopted. Instead of the drastic measures suggested by the Bill, it would, in my opinion, be wiser if the Government were to extend the principle of section 42 to mortgages by conditional sale, and wait and see how the present body of proprietors use their privileges of contracting themselves out of the Act.

"My Lord, whilst on this subject, I would beg leave to point out that any argument based on an appeal to the experiences of the North-Western Provinces is likely to prove fallacious, because there are radical differences in the economic conditions of the two provinces. Sir, it is said, forms a very insignificant portion of the village-area in the North-Western Provinces, whereas it forms a very valuable portion of the villages in my province, having regard to its area and to the peculiar advantages it gives to its possessor.

"In the Central Provinces there are no tenants-at-will paying competition rents under a heavy pressure of population on the land. Even the ordinary tenants there are privileged tenants whose rent is subject to certain checks, and under the Bill they will hereafter cease to pay competition rents. A fair and reasonable rent will be determined for the tenant by the Revenue or Settlement Officer. Sir, which may be as extensive as one-quarter of the occupied area, is the only land over which tenant-right is not allowed to grow up, and in respect of which the law gives the malguzar full liberty to take what rent he can get, if he chooses to lease it. It is the sir which goes to make up for short collection in years of poor harvest, and its loss is a serious loss where the State demands go up to 70 or 75 per cent. including cesses, or even to 80 or 85 when the very small drawback given for the realization of malik-makbuza revenue is taken into consideration. My Lord, the policy of encouraging the sale of our villages without the sir is highly dangerous, for the transferee practically becomes the holder of a more or less fixed rent charged very far short of the fee-simple. His ability to pay Government revenue in bad years may be very reasonably doubted. His one object, after buying the villages, will be to create sir, and this, I am afraid, will not be done by reclaiming waste-land; for the margin of profitable cultivation seems to have been reached in most districts. It will be done by selling up occupancy and ejecting ordinary tenants as far as the law will allow. What I wish to point out is this, that under the proposed law this motive will be far stronger than it is now.

"If the law of the North-Western Provinces be adopted in the Central Provinces, I have no doubt it will be evaded in many instances by the device of a surrender. In other words, the formality of two documents, with a decent interval between, will do what is now done by one document and with less chance of fraud.

"My Lord, I must take this opportunity of paying a well-deserved compliment to the Government of India and the Local Government for the good work they have done through the Court of Wards. Many an estate which would have been hopelessly in debt has been saved by the timely intercession of this Court. My humble suggestion is that Your Excellency's Government may be pleased to extend the operation of this Court in cases where the agriculturists are involved in debt. The Government, my Lord, would be conferring an inestimable benefit on the people if, instead of taking away a conferred right from the proprietors, it were to pass an Act framed on the principle of the Incumbered Estates Acts in other provinces.

"I do not see any necessity for section 92, which allows a Revenue-officer to reinstate a tenant illegally ejected. I believe there is ample remedy already provided for the tenant by the law in the Specific Relief Act. Nor do I quite understand why a Revenue-officer under section 34 is allowed to try a question of title, order of sucession, etc., involving difficult questions of law, local customs, etc., apparently without his decision being liable to be questioned in a Civil Court.

"The present Bill seeks to afford protection to sub-tenants holding land from tenants malik-mukbuzas. I need scarcely point out that this policy which reverses the policy of 1888 has been very severely condemned by the Revenue-officers. I may briefly observe that such a change would tend to make the task of the Revenue-officer at once arduous and complicated, and would initiate a policy of excessive interference.

"My Lord, I now come to the most objectionable portion of the Bill, namely, the part which says that the Bill is to have retrospective effect. Words fail to express the feeling of alarm created throughout the length and breath of the province by the absence of a saving clause in the Bill in favour of existing contracts. The sir land has been made inalienable, and the Bill says that whoever after the commencement of this Act loses his village shall become an occupancy-tenant of his sir land, and this though he may have specifically mortgaged his cultivating rights in the sir at a time when the law allowed it. In other words, a person who, under the existing law, has advanced money on the security of the sir as well as the village will, after the Bill is passed into law, be able to get a decree of the village only without the sir—that is, for considerably less than he bargained for. Again, an occupancy or ordinary holding can at present be mortgaged with the consent of the landlord, but after the passing of the Bill no decree whatsoever or sale can be given by our Courts, and this though the mortgage was a valid one at the time it was made.

"Need I point out the grave impolicy of such a measure? Need I say, my Lord, that this will be a severe blow to those who have advanced money to malguzars or tenants on the footing of the present law—money which perhaps has gone for the payment of Government revenue or has been most religiously employed for the maintenance of the family in these times of universal scarcity and want. Such money-lender will, after the passing of the Bill, be able to get a decree only against the village, or field, as the case may be; in the one case without the sir which formed their main security, and in the other without any cultivating rights in the field. Some will say, oh! it is the rich man or the comparatively rich man who is in question, and it is he only who will suffer from the effect of such laws. But is the sanctity of freedom of contract to be violated because it is the rich man who will suffer? Has he no right to claim protection of the law? But is it the rich man alone who will suffer?

"I would ask the Council to conceive for a moment the position of a minor whose parents in 1895 advanced the great bulk of the money he is heir to on the valuable security of both the sir and the village, and let it be supposed that the mortgage was for four years. On the expiry of this term in 1899, the poor minor finds himself bereft of his security, practically shorn of his inheritance, the accumulated wealth of his ancestors, for, in the meanwhile, the present Bill, having been passed into law, has at one stroke swept away all previous contracts and has deprived him of the security on which his whole fortune was staked? What would be left for him in that case but penury and misery?"

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS having asked if Government really intended giving retrospective effect to the Bill, SIR JOHN WOODBURN declared that the Government had no intention of giving retrospective effect to the provisions in the parent Bill.

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS thanked His Excellency and the Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn on behalf of the people for coming to this decision and assured them that this declaration would to a great extent allay the anxiety of the public mind arising out of the present Bill, and proceeded with his speech :—

"My Lord, I am afraid I have trespassed somewhat longer upon the patience of this Council than I should have done. The subject under consideration is abstruse and unfamiliar, and there is very little aid afforded as to the true understanding of the question by discussion in the Press. I have tried to show, in as plain a language as I can command, that the Bill before Your Excellency's Council proposes some very important and radical changes in the law of landlord and tenant in the province I have the honour to represent. I have endeavoured to lay before Your Excellency the views and sentiments of the landlords of the Central Provinces in respect of the most serious of the grievances they will have to complain of should the Bill be passed into law in its present form. Some of the sections appear so obnoxious and so far-reaching in their consequences that it appeared to me that I should be failing in my duty to my country and to Your Excellency's Council if I did not respectfully enter my protest against them. My Lord, I am aware that the Bill has not been conceived in a spirit of hostility to the landlord, but I feel bound to say that, under the influence of a laudable desire to strengthen the hands of the tenant, the rights of the laudlords have been somewhat cruelly ignored. But let not the Council misunderstand me. I do not grudge the tenant his good fortune. I have no quarrel with him. I would go the length of suggesting that his rent should be fixed for ever, or, that if that is not possible, it should be fixed for the duration of the settlement at least. But in other respects let the law of the land remain as it stands.

"My Lord, whilst submitting the views of the people of my province on the important question that is now engaging the attention of Your Excellency's Council, I should not disguise the fact that a feeling has gained ground that too irreconcilable and antagonistic principles have been brought into conflict by the introduction of the measure, namely, the principle of the private property in the land and its free exchange on the one hand, and that of State property and monopoly in the land on the other. And that, though inspired in the best of intentions, the Government favours and its policy is drifting towards the latter principle, that it intends to stifle to death, slowly but unmistakably, a child of its own creation. I mean the malguzari land-tenure of my province.

"My Lord, I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to take a fair and dispassionate view of the Bill both from the landlord's and the tenant's standpoint, but, if in spite of my honest endeavours I have not been able to rise above class-bias, my apology is that common fairness demands some recognition of the claims of other classes of the community than tenants.

"It is impossible to dispute the grave importance of the measure before Your Excellency's Council. It is the more important that legislation on similar lines will probably be introduced in other parts of India. In the debate on the Agriculturists Relief Act on the 24th January, 1895, the Hon'ble Sir Antony MacDonnell said:—

'I had not intended intervening in the debate, but I wish to say with reference to the remarks which have fallen from the Hon'ble Mr Mehta, in which he expressed his regret that Government has not in connection with the Bill grappled with the great question of agriculturist indebtedness throughout India, that the question has been before the Government. The Government is at present engaged in discussing that question in those parts of India in which it presents its most complex and difficult features and I trust that before this Council ceases its sittings in Calcutta I shall be able to introduce a bill in connection with one important aspect of the question in the Central Provinces. The other parts of India will follow in due course.'

"My Lord, this is the Bill referred to by Sir Antony. This is the experimental measure which is to be tried in other parts of India, and its adoption or rejection in those parts will depend on its success or failure in my province. This measure, in fact, is intended as the basis of a system pregnant with the most important results for all India in the future, and, as such, I have no doubt it will receive from Your Excellency's Council that careful consideration, that anxious deliberation, which it deserves."

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN said:—"I have listened with the very greatest interest to the remarks my Hon'ble friend has made on the question of land-transfers in the Central Provinces. This is a question of such undoubted gravity that it is right and fitting that the Government should have before it, and as well as the Government the Council, all that can be said against the proposals that have been made by the Government. I cannot say that I have been converted by the arguments used by my Hon'ble friend, but he may rest quite assured that all that he has to say on behalf of himself and the great class he represents in the Central Provinces will be studied and considered by the Select Committee of the Council with the greatest respect. He has said that the Bill which is about to be committed to the Select Committee puts the law in regard to tenants in the Central Provinces on a radically different basis. I think when he comes to consider the Bill again in the Select Committee he will admit that this is an exaggerated expression. Besides this matter of land-transfers there are only two issues which are vital in the Bill. One of these is the right of the tenant to get a fair rent fixed when the landlord puts on an enhancement which the tenant considers unfair, and the other is that the Settlement-officers should have the right of lowering rents which are too high. Upon these two points my Hon'ble friend has offered no remarks, and I am glad to gather from his silence that he is at one with the Government. With these remarks I beg to repeat my motion that the Bill be referred to the Select Committee."

The motion was put and agreed to.

CENTRAL PROVINCES LAND-REVENUE ACT (1881) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN moved that the Bill to further amend the Central Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1881, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, the Hon'ble Sir Arthur Trevor, the Hon'ble Pandit Suraj Kaul, the Hon'ble Mr. Chitnavis and the mover.

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN STAMP BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Stamps.

He said :—" When I had the honour of introducing this Bill, I pointed out that it was a matter which affected very closely the transactions of the daily life of both people of business and people engaged in agricultural operations. I explained a number of the detailed provisions of the Bill as it was then introduced, and I was not surprised that we received a vast body of suggestions with reference to the amendments of the law which had been made in the Bill, and suggestions for new amendments to be made in the Bill as it was introduced into the Council.

" I ask the forgiveness of the Council if I take a little time in describing some of the points which have been considered by the Select Committee, and in which they have altered the Bill as it was first introduced. I referred specially, when I introduced the Bill, to some changes which we proposed in the duties levied on certain classes of transactions. I pointed out that it seemed to me that in many cases the stamp-duties imposed by law had been evaded, by advantage being taken in carrying out transactions of forms which were not contemplated by the law itself. We made certain alterations in the existing law. In framing the Bill as it was first introduced, it was intended to meet these cases and to render impossible the evasions which had been commonly practised. When we came to consider the objections offered to our proposals it was shown that besides the respects in which the duties intended by the original law had been evaded, there were certain very legitimate and current business transactions with which our new provisions would interfere. It was from the first our intention to have every respect for current commercial practices, and as soon as it was shown that these provisions, which were intended to prevent evasions of duty, would also interfere with current commercial practices, we gave renewed consideration to the subject in the Select Committee, with the result that the original law has, in some of these cases, been re-introduced, the safeguards now proposed being different from those which were proposed at the time of the introduction of the Bill.

" The first of these cases is that of acknowledgment. Acknowledgments of debt have, under the existing law, to bear a very small stamp, namely, one anna. Now these acknowledgments customarily go very far beyond the intention of the one anna duty. As long as a person uses an acknowledgment for the pure purpose of acknowledging a sum due by him, we did not wish to alter the incidence of taxation upon the transaction. But when the acknowledgment goes to the extent of being really a bond, then we thought that it was desirable that the duty due upon a bond should be paid. We accordingly distinguished between acknowledgments which were ordinary acknowledgments, and acknowledgments which were attested. This distinction has been shown to us to be a very unfair one, and therefore we have now, in the form in which the Select Committee have reported the Bill, restored the original provisions of the law that a one anna duty is sufficient for an acknowledgment, but we have inserted a proviso that the acknowledgment must be an acknowledgment, pure and simple, and that the one anna stamp will not cover an acknowledgment, if the document also contains a promise to pay the debt or any stipulation to pay interest or to deliver any goods or other property. A document which contains these stipulations is more than an acknowledgment, and ought to pay the duty due upon another kind of document.

" So in the case of promissory notes. We there provided that a simple promise to pay should bear a duty like a bill of exchange not payable on demand. There also we found that the effect of the new provisions would be far beyond what the Government intended. We have therefore restored the original duty upon promissory notes, and we have simply provided that the duty upon a promissory note as it stands in the existing law and as it remains unaltered will be leviable only on a promissory note as defined in the Negotiable Istruments Act.

" Another peculiar class of instrument which is current in the presidency-towns, and which is specially provided for in the Transfer of Property Act, is what in our present Bill is called an equitable mortgage. We raised the duty upon an equitable mortgage to make it something more approaching the duty levied upon similar instruments in England. But we find that in this class of transfer also it is necessary for us to continue a special privilege which is provided for in the Transfer of Property Act, section 59, in which these peculiar mortgages made in the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karachi and Rangoon by delivery to a creditor or his agent of a document of title to immovable property with intent to create security thereon, are exempted from the common incidents of mortgage, or agreement to mortgage. The existing law, therefore, we propose in respect to these documents will remain unaltered.

"One valuable suggestion has been made to us from Bombay. It is with reference to a new class of insurances which has been recently introduced into this country, but which is now common enough in England, namely, insurance against accident or sickness. This class of insurance has not been specially provided for in the existing law, and the consequence is that it comes under the definition of life insurance, and pays a duty of six annas per Rs. 1,000. It seems to us legitimate to provide that the minor class of insurance policies issued as insurance against accident or sickness shall be relieved of the heavier duty due upon life insurance. We have, therefore, inserted a new provision providing for this class of insurance and levying upon it only one-third part—viz., two annas per Rs. 1,000—of the duty due upon life insurance.

"In another point we have corrected the duties upon insurance: it is provided in the existing law that when a Company having issued a policy of insurance re-insures with another Company, the duty payable in respect of that re-insurance shall be one rupee. But an examination of the case shows that in some cases the original insurance bears a duty of very much less than one rupee. We have therefore made this alteration, that instead of demanding a fixed duty of one rupee upon every case of re-insurance, we require the duty payable upon the original insurance, but not more than one rupee, so that, in any case in which the duty upon an original insurance is less than one rupee, the duty upon the re-insurance will also be less than one rupee.

"A difficult question arises in connection with insurance policies. It arises from the fact that the system of the transaction of business in Bombay is different from the system of the transaction of business in Calcutta. The duty upon insurance is by law levied upon the issue of the original policy. We levy no duty upon renewals. The consequence is, when an insurance policy is renewed, that is to say, if the original insurance policy is extended, then it bears no new duty, but if a person cancels his policy, and takes another policy on the same terms from another Company, he has to pay the additional duty. Now in Calcutta the system of insurance is this. The insurers transact their business directly with the offices. The consequence is that the policy is renewed year by year with the same Company, and bears no new duty. But in Bombay the whole of this business is done through insurance brokers. The insurance broker takes out his policy one year from one company, and the next he finds it more advantageous for himself either in respect of commission or by reason of better terms, or for some other reason, to take out the same insurance not with the same company but with another company. It is therefore a new policy, and is not a renewal of an old policy. The consequence is that these transactions have to pay a duty in Bombay which they do not pay in Calcutta. The Bombay Insurance Offices have made a proposal to us that we should reduce the insurance upon the original policy and demand payment of new duty upon renewal. This suits their system of business because they practically pay an annual duty upon their insurance. It does not suit the people in Calcutta because it imposes a duty upon them which they do not at present pay, viz., a duty upon renewals. We have found it impossible to make any alteration in the existing law. We can only say that where one large commercial body has adapted its business to the existing law, we do not wish to interfere with their getting the benefit of it. If another large commercial body pursues a commercial custom which renders them liable to a higher duty than they would otherwise have to pay, we can only say that it is open to them to adopt the practice current in the rest of India, but it is impossible for us by making a change in the law in their favor to subject the Calcutta practice of Insurance Offices to what would no doubt be a very grave inconvenience, viz., that of being under the obligation of having every renewal of a policy subjected to a new tax.

"I mentioned just now a case of duty on re-insurance being reduced from one rupee to 'one rupee or such smaller sum as may be due in respect of the original insurance.' We have adopted the same principle in respect of two or three other articles of the schedule, such, for example, as the revocation of a settlement, the revocation of trusts and transactions with regard to trust-property. In these cases the duty levied is a fixed one, and being a fixed one it is sometimes a larger duty than that which is levied upon the instrument of which revocation is made, or upon a conveyance of trust-property which is not a conveyance between trustees. In these three cases and in one or two others, we have adopted the same principle of making the present fixed fee the maximum duty, but giving to the smaller transactions the benefit of a smaller duty when the amount involved is that which is appropriate to a smaller duty.

"In the case of partitions we have had to make a somewhat peculiar provision. In the Bill as it was first introduced, the duty payable in respect of partition was a duty levied in respect of the value of the whole property partitioned, but at the same time authority was given to the Revenue-officer or the Court under whose directions the partition was carried out, to relieve from its share of the duty that portion of the property which remained outside the partition, or continued to be held undivided. Well, in this instance the duty is beyond doubt a rather heavy one in the case of the separation of only a small share of a very large estate, and we have assumed, therefore, that the duty should be remitted on the principle under which under section 29 of the Bill we have given authority to the Revenue-officer or the Civil Court to remit it; and we have, therefore, levied the duty not upon the whole of the property, but only upon that part of it which is separated off. The result of the existing law would be that if several partners, holding a 12-anna share agreed to let a 4-anna partner separate off his share, they would have to pay upon the value of the whole 16 annas. If afterwards the 12-anna share again had to be partitioned that 12-anna share would again have to pay upon the whole of the value of it. By arranging that the duty shall be only levied upon that part of the estate which is partitioned off from the rest, we prevent that which seems to be an injustice, namely, the demand of duty in respect of both of the partitioned and of the unpartitioned portion of the estate. Although we levy duty only in respect of the value of the separated-off portion of the estate, it must be remembered that the duty as a whole is a burden upon the whole estate, so that the partners who remain undivided have got to bear their share, although the share they bear is a much smaller one than they have to bear under the existing law.

Some remonstrances have been made regarding our provision of duty upon perpetual leases being based upon the duty due upon the conveyance. The Select Committee have not seen sufficient reason to depart from the proposals originally made in this respect. A perpetual lease is practically a permanent transfer of the property affected, and if a person takes a perpetual lease and agrees to pay, say, Rs. 1,000 a year in respect of his perpetual lease, he is having property conveyed to him subject to the payment of Rs. 1,000 a year. We must take for granted that he is prepared to pay Rs. 1,000 a year as the value of the property. He is afflicted with no greater hardship in respect to the payment for duty than if he had paid a lump sum of, say, Rs. 10,000—ten years' purchase. The duty proposed has been levied upon this principle. A consideration, if it is a consideration of Rs. 1,000 a year, is equal to a consideration of, say, ten years' purchase, or Rs. 10,000, and we levied the duty just as if the transaction was that of a conveyance of property for Rs. 10,000. A great part of the objections which have been raised to this demand have been raised on what seems to me a false principle. When property is conveyed from A to B, we levy duty at a certain percentage upon the total amount of the consideration paid. We do not regard in the least degree the question of how much profit B or A is to make out of the transaction. It is possible that the property may not be worth Rs. 10,000 although B consents to purchase it for Rs. 10,000. It may be possible that after he has purchased the property he will find that he is worse off than he was before; his money perhaps was more profitably invested before he spent it in this way. Such questions lie outside the question of the duty to be paid upon an instrument of conveyance, and in a similar manner, the question of the profit B expects to make out of his perpetual lease seems to me to lie outside the question of the consideration that is to be paid in respect of a perpetual lease.

"There have been one or two points on which the remarks which we have received indicate some misapprehension of the intention of the Bill. For example, the Bill introduced contained a provision which levied upon a power-of-attorney in certain cases the same duty that would be levied upon a conveyance. The reason of this was that it was found as a fact that what amounted to a conveyance was sometimes effected by means of a power-of-attorney. A in selling B property, instead of conveying it to him by a regular deed of conveyance, simply transferred it to him without any conveyance at all, but gave him a power-of-attorney authorising him to sell the property. This, so far as B is concerned, enabled him to dispose of the property to the same extent as if he were the owner of it. We therefore provided that if a power-of-attorney was given for a consideration, and gave authority for the sale of the property affected, the duty should be levied in the same way as upon a conveyance. In the objections that have been made to this provision apparently some persons have thought that we levy this duty upon a power-of-attorney given for effecting a sale, and they fail to observe that it was levied purely upon a power-of-attorney given for a consideration.

"So an objection has been made in respect of our levying a duty upon a deed of adoption. It has been pointed out that adoption is a religious ceremony, and under these circumstances it ought to be free from any duty. We perfectly admit it, but what I desire to point out is that we do not in any way levy a duty upon adoption So far as adoption is a religious ceremony it goes free, naturally and inevitably, but if a deed of adoption is drawn up which is a conveyance of property, and is to be used as a document of title to property, it is then, and then only, that the duty is levied, not upon the adoption but upon the deed which records it, and which is meant to be effective as an instrument creating a right to property.

"We have had from one or two different quarters some objections raised what is really a commercial practice independent of the Stamp Act, that is to say, the system of transferring debentures and shares by blank transfer deeds. When a person transfers debentures or shares by a deed, a duty amounting to a certain percentage of the consideration is levied upon this deed. The practice, however, is that the deed is filled up blank and passes with the shares or with the certificate of the shares from hand to hand until occasion arises to make use of it, and then the person in whose hands at the time the certificate happens to be, fills up the transfer deed in his own favour, and the transfer deed then becomes effectual. It may thus cover a very large number of transfers. Some objections are made to this kind of transfer, but they are objections which lie outside the purview of the Stamp Act. In the first place Companies make objection to the practice on the ground that if the certificate of the shares is in this manner passing from hand to hand, they do not know who their shareholders are, and they therefore desire that this practice of transfer by blank transfer deed should cease, and that we should impose a limit of time upon such deeds and compel a transfer deed to be executed within a certain time and the transfer to be thus completed. Some persons have raised questions of revenue with regard to this, and pointed out that it would be desirable even in the interests of the revenue to reduce the duty upon a transfer deed but to limit its operation in point of time, so that it might cover not a dozen or even 50 or 100 transfers, but only cover one. The practice, however, of transfer by blank transfer deed is a common one both in England and in this country, and it does not seem to us possible as a matter of regulation of stamp-duty to interfere with it. We have therefore not made any alteration in the levy of duty upon this class of document, but I intend to make a reference to the Chamber of Commerce and to other commercial bodies in order to find out whether they desire that any legislative provisions should be made either in the Stamp Act or in any other way which would have the effect of altering the practice in respect of transfer deeds. In the meantime, as I say, we shall not interfere with it.

"Another important point which the Select Committee considered was the question of duty to be levied in the case of a sale of property subject to an encumbrance. There have been inconsistent decisions of the High Courts in this respect.

In some cases they have said that the encumbrance forms a deduction from the value of the property. In other cases they pointed out, what I think was the original intention of the Act, that if a person bought a property subject to an encumbrance, the consideration he paid for it was not merely the amount he paid down now, but included the amount which he undertook to pay down afterwards for the release of the encumbrance. We have made this point clearer. We have made it clear that the consideration in respect of which duty is levied when a property of this sort is transferred includes not only the amount which is immediately paid, but the amount which is afterwards to be paid before the property completely passes into the hands of the transferee. There is only one case in which this arrangement may seem unfair, and that case we provide for by a proviso, namely, the case where the mortgagee himself buys the property from the mortgagor. In this case the first transaction of mortgage is really part of the final transaction of transfer, and therefore we have provided that in this particular case the duty which would be levied when the property is completely conveyed from the mortgagor to the mortgagee shall be reduced by the amount which has been paid in respect of the first transaction, the first transaction being taken as really a part payment.

"In many cases the operation of the Bill as it was first introduced and as it is now reported by the Select Committee, is a relaxation to some extent of the provisions of the existing law. We have had suggestions for carrying these relaxations still further. For the most part we have not seen our way to carry them further and maintain the law as it at present stands with the relaxation at first introduced. I mention this because some of those who have been good enough to favour us with suggestions may think that their demand for a further relaxation logically follows from the concessions which have already been made in the Bill. I can only express my regret that sometimes it is not possible to carry out in matters of legislation logical consequences of previous concessions. We must stop concessions at some point. Take, for example, the case provided for in section 26, where we give a certain concession in respect of mining leases, and limit that concession by the sum of R20,000. Of course it is impossible to say why R20,000 instead of R15,000 or R19,000 should have been selected. We can only say we have given a concession at the limit of R20,000, and we do not see our way to carrying it further.

"There is one important change we have made which is greatly, I think, to the benefit of the public, and that is that in various cases in which under the law the Collector gives a certificate that the duty is sufficient, that certificate shall not afterwards be questioned in any Court. It seems to us that if a document passes muster formally with the revenue-authorities, it should be considered to be properly stamped even though some subsequent revenue-authority or a Court subsequently dealing with the same matter may think that the first decision is erroneous. It is only fair that when a person has taken all the trouble to have the duty upon the instrument certified by an authority representing the Revenue, he should be secured from any further contention that the document has not been properly stamped.

"Section 37 was a new section which we introduced, of which the object was to give the Governor General in Council power to lay down provisions for properly stamping a document which had been properly stamped so far as regards the amount, but not properly stamped so far as regards the class of stamp used. The section has been remarked on by several officers who have pointed out to us that it is extremely vague in its purport. It was vague in its purport, but it was vague out of deliberate intention. It was merely an enabling section which laid down no substantive law whatever, but only authorised the Governor General in Council to provide for certain cases by a new rule. We have made this clearer in the form of wording that we have now given to the section, and if it is borne in mind that it merely enables the Governor General in Council to make a rule, and lays down no rule or system by itself, it will be seen that it is not liable to the objections which have been made to it.

"In another small matter, perhaps, but one that appears not unfrequently to arise, we have made provision which will give some facilities to people who have the misfortune to draw up documents on insufficiently stamped paper. It is not clear in the law as it at present stands whether it is open to a person who under these circumstances has an entirely new document drawn up upon new paper sufficient in value, to get a refund of the old paper. The practice in two or three provinces is in this respect different, but we have made it clear that a person who throws aside an insufficiently stamped deed, and gets a new deed in the same terms drawn up and properly stamped, is entitled to get a refund made to him of the duty which he first of all paid upon the insufficiently stamped, and now superseded, deed.

"Some of the revenue-officers have in their remarks to us made objections to a class of transactions which not unfrequently take place, and which they apparently think is a fraud on the revenue. It is, namely, that of a conveyance of a large property which consists both of movable and immovable property; a conveyance for example of a tea estate with all the machinery, houses, furniture and various other properties connected with it. The usual form of a conveyance of that kind is to recite that the movable property has been transferred, and the immovable property alone is made the subject of the deed. This is considered by some to be a fraud upon the revenue, because they tell us the document is effective for the transfer of both the movable and the immovable part of the property. We do not take that view. It seems to us that movable property can be transferred by delivery, and it is not necessary that it should be transferred by a deed which has to be preserved in the same way as a document of transfer of immovable property. We have, therefore, not seen our way to make any provision in this respect, and we consider that a document of that sort pays its proper duty if it is regarded purely as a document creating a right in the immovable part of the property, and that it is not necessary to further tax it in respect of its reciting that the movable part of the property, furniture and so forth which happens to go with the estate has already been delivered.

"Some objections also have been made to one of our sections in which it is provided that all the transactions of the revenue-authority are subject to the revision of the chief controlling revenue-authority. It has been pointed out that under these circumstances the Civil Court when it sends a stamped document to a revenue-authority to be properly stamped would have its whole procedure stopped because the person from whom the duty has been levied would intimate to the Court that he is taking an appeal to the chief controlling revenue-authority. We can only say with reference to this that the conduct of a civil suit is a matter for the Judge of the Civil Court. We cannot reject provisions in the Stamp law which are suitable in themselves, on the ground that they may be made by a weak judge an excuse for postponing his cases.

"I do not think I have any further remarks to make except this; we had hoped to be able to pass this Stamp law during the current session, but there have been considerable modifications in points of detail in the Bill as reported by the Select Committee. The Select Committee considered that in a matter so far-reaching, one in which people are so very largely concerned, it is not desirable that the law should be passed without giving some opportunity for further consideration of the amendments. They have therefore in their Report stated that the measure has been so altered as to require republication, and they recommend that it should be republished in the Gazette of India. The date from which the Act will come into force as shown in the Bill reported by the Select Committee is the 1st of July next. I am afraid it will not be possible to bring it into force by that date, because, even if the measure be passed at Simla, we shall have to put off the date of its coming into force for a sufficient time to enable the Local Governments to publish it and translate it into the various vernacular languages; but I think the Bill as it has been reported by the Select Committee has so largely met the objections raised to its first form that it may be considered to a very large extent a non-contentious measure, and it may possibly be open to the Council even during the Simla session to consider it and to pass it. That, however, is a matter we shall hereafter consider when we see what remarks are made with reference to it as now reported; but inasmuch as we have met substantially all the objections which were raised to it as first introduced, I think it may be possible, even though it is a commercial measure, to proceed with its consideration during the Simla session.

PETROLEUM ACT (1886) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to further amend the Petroleum Act, 1886. He said :—" I have no remarks to make in connection with this Bill. The only amendment we have made is with the object of reassuring the commercial community that there shall be no alteration of the tests for petroleum without previous notice to and consultation with them."

POST OFFICE BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Post Office in India be taken into consideration. He said :—" I have no further remarks to make on the subject of this Bill."

The Hon'ble PANDIT SURAJ KAUL said :—" My Lord, in supporting the Post Office Bill, now before the Council, carefully drafted by the learned Member in full detail, I wish to say that it will prove beneficial to the public and the postal administration as well.

" I have read in certain Vernacular papers that there is a danger to the public in regard to section 6 of the amended Bill, in that the Government having exempted itself from liability for loss, misdelivery, delay or damage to the articles delivered to the Post Office for despatch, will encourage the postal employés and will be productive of more injury to the public. But to this misapprehension section 52 of the amended Bill is a perfect safeguard."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND said :—" I would only point out with reference to the remarks of the Hon'ble Pandit Suraj Kaul that the law on the subject is not altered by the provisions of this Bill, and I think the public may take it for granted that the Post Office officials will exercise their usual care, for which they have been distinguished hitherto."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur ANANDA CHARLU moved that in clause 26 (1) of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, for the words " to be disposed of in such manner as the Governor General in Council may direct ", in the last two lines, the words " to be returned to the sender or the addressee, with the words ' opened by authority ' written on the cover " be substituted. He said :—" As Macaulay has said, the sole purpose—I may add, the sole justification—of the monopoly given to the Post Office of carrying letters is their safe transmission. Either this object must be carried out or the sender and the addressee must be told that the Post Office declines to be a party to the transmission of this objectionable thing or that. To smother or to spirit away what is entrusted to the Post Office, leaving the sender and the addressee in the lurch, can find no warrant in reason. The object of my amendment is to give the Post Office this full power to decline, and no more."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND said :—" I am afraid I must oppose on the part of the Government the proposal which has been made by the Hon'ble Member. I ought to say that the Hon'ble Member, with that commonsense which distinguishes him in considering and giving advice on any question of general principle, told us in the Select Committee that he thought the power given under section 26 to the Governor General in Council to be exercised in cases of public emergency or in the interests of public safety or tranquillity was a necessity to the Government, but I think that in making this amendment he has forgotten that the power which is to be exercised under section 26 is only to be exercised on the occurrence of any public emergency and in the interests of the public safety or tranquillity. It is something entirely apart from the ordinary functions of the Post Office. It is intended to give the Government power to override the ordinary operations of the department in order to prevent the Post Office being used as a method for pursuing designs which are not conformable with public safety or tranquillity. Now, for example, I may give one or two illustrations of the sort of thing which is intended. We have had recently some disturbances on our frontiers, as all Hon'ble Members know. Supposing that the gentleman who is commonly called the Mad Mullah had sent documents to some of his friends in India asking them to rally to his standard or give him assistance of some kind in pursuing his warfare against Her Majesty; are we to understand that he can use the services of our Post Office for purposes of that sort? We are obviously entitled to intercept any communications of that kind, and to say that we do not admit the obligation either to return the documents to the sender or to forward them to the addressees. So also if a packet of cartridges is being sent for use (say) against the public tranquillity, is the Government to be considered bound to deliver that packet of cartridges to the person to whom it has been sent, or if it does not do so to return it? Is it to be bound to return it to the sender and say 'Here, you have tried this on this time, but we have prevented you. We have found you out and give you back the packet of cartridges; but of course you can go to-morrow, and post it over again and put everybody to the same trouble all over again?' When the document or article which is being passed through the Post Office can be used by the Government to pursue the offender, that document ought to be used for the purpose of pursuing him, and ought not to be sent back to the sender or, to be sent forward to the addressee. It must be taken for granted that the Post Office is being used on these occasions for purposes for which it ought not to be used and for which it is the business of the Government to see that it shall not be used, and the case is probably one in which there is some offence which it is the business of Government as soon as possible, and as effectually as possible, to put a stop to. Under these circumstances I think the section should remain, and that the power should be given in the terms in which it is given, namely, that the document or article which is intercepted ought to be disposed of in such a manner as the Governor General in Council may direct."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH said :—"The first illustration given by the Hon'ble Sir James Westland supposes an extremely violent case which would be met by any other provision that may be found within the four corners of the Bill, to that effect. The other supposed case, I submit, does not fall under the scope of section 26 (1), but would come rather under the terms of section 20 of the Bill, which we are not discussing now. The amendment is merely a verbal one. It proposes a simpler and rather a lenient course. The words 'disposed of, in such manner as the Governor General in Council may direct' are very comprehensive, and evidently indicate that the procedure contemplated to be pursued generally in dealing with all cases falling within the mischief admits of no qualification. It is desirable, therefore, that the amendment should be adopted."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. CHARLU said :—"My Lord, I should like to say one word on the amendment. I did not ask that the thing should be sent to the addressee as a matter of course. I say it should be returned to the sender or sent to the addressee. I have put it that way for this reason. It will be returned to the sender if it is thought inadvisable to send it to the addressee. If upon examination of it, and after a sufficient time has elapsed for the authorities to decide, it is found safe to send it back to the addressee, it may be sent to him, but the parties would receive sufficient notice that the thing contains something which the authorities have thought open to objection and I believe that that guarantee will be sufficient to stop the practice."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. CHARLU also moved that to the same sub-clause the following proviso be added, namely :—

"Provided that, prior to the issue of any order under this section, a statement shall be prepared under the hand of a Secretary to the Government of India or to a Local Government and placed on record, setting forth the grounds for believing that a public emergency has arisen or that the Act is required in the interest of public safety or tranquillity.''

He said:—" The power taken under this section postulates bad men. I venture to think that it is not altogether beyond the range of possibility to conceive of instances of bad Governments exhibiting an abnormal propensity to misuse the power possessed. Possession of power, like the possession of an abundance of everything else, creates the temptation to use it, and such a temptation often leads one to fancy occasion for its exercise, where there is none or none adequate. I may say at once that this is not a mere ideal fear. Instances are not wanting of bubbles, ominous at first, showing a mere vacuum of reasons or a ridiculous paucity of reasons when they burst. This risk is one of the besetting moral dangers of enacting unnecessary laws, or laws which admit of being evoked into action with impunity or on an impulse of panic or temper. On such a risk, and on persons liable to a proneness to go astray or to lead astray, the anticipation of publicity and of possible judicial scrutiny will operate as a sobering influence A strong and just Government, above all others, must not shrink from daylight. The power in question is one which, it seems to me, must be as abhorrent to good Governments as to the public; and good Governments should themselves provide effectual checks and safeguards to render it impossible for bad Governments, that might come after them, to readily resort to arbitrary or high-handed proceedings They might also need some such preventive to guard themselves against the passion of a moment running away with their judgments, leaving them to repent of their conduct when cooler times return.

" I know that responsible Governments would put forth a power such as this very very seldom indeed. But I know also that instances of the Government being challenged would be rarer still. There is this best guarantee, viz., the guilty conscience of the wrong-doer as his accuser, and as making a coward of him. Such wrong-doers would find it to their own interest to hold their tongues and be only too glad to have their wickedness hushed up and not exposed to the open glare. There may, nevertheless, be an occasional instance to the contrary, but, as the saying goes, one swallow makes not summer. As I remarked in my minute of dissent, the Government would be absolutely impregnable with a bonâ fide case. The Government is fully armed to initiate proceedings. Before it takes action, there must surely be some degree of deliberation and some materials to work upon. Where is the difficulty in embodying those materials and the results of that deliberation in a statement and placing it on record? Such a course will be highly re-assuring and go a long way in enlisting the sympathy of the public and allaying irritating suspicions of all sorts. A mutual confidence, such as this, is an inestimable advantage to the people and Government alike, and it should be secured, I venture to think, at all cost of personal feeling or personal importance "

The Hon'ble Sir JAMES WESTLAND said:—" I am again obliged to join issue with my Hon'ble friend and to oppose the amendment he has proposed. In the first place, he is under a complete misapprehension in thinking that the Government are proposing to take some entirely new authority they do not possess at present. The Government do possess this authority at present, and if the Hon'ble Member will refer to the last section of the Bill he will see that it is very carefully said:

'Nothing in this Act shall derogate from or affect the provisions of the East India Company Act, 1780, or any enactment amending or extending the same.'

"That is to say, 120 years ago a statute was passed which gave the authority which the Hon'ble Member is now quoting as an entirely new and exceptional one, and one which ought not to be exercised. The difficulty, my Lord, in dealing with the Hon'ble Member's amendments is that sometimes he lives in the pure serene atmosphere of Madras, where no ripples ever disturb the placid surface of political waters. He cannot therefore imagine that any such thing as a public emergency can exist in any other part of the Empire, and the consequence is that he considers, when the Governor General in Council acts on an occasion of public emergency, there is time for a Secretary to Government to sit down and formulate all sorts of reasons, setting forth why Government thinks that there is an occasion of public emergency, and why it is convinced that it ought to take steps in consequence of that state of public emergency. He tells us he does not trust the Governor General in Council in these matters, and that there ought to be an appeal from the Governor General in Council to a village-munsif and a couple of wrangling pleaders in a small Civil Court. It seems to me, my Lord, that the one thing that is wanted in a public emergency is rapid action and not prolonged consideration. We have had some instances of it only within the last week or two when a case of public emergency arose in Bombay. When riots broke out there the Government put aside the ordinary law and called for the military and sent them into Bombay to put down the rioting. The Hon'ble Mr. Charlu would have it that it was necessary in the first place for the Secretary to the Government of Bombay to sit down and indite a long minute telling people generally how he came to suppose that there was a disturbance going on in the city of Bombay, and how it came to be necessary that the military should be called for from a distance, and unless Government are prepared to take all those elaborate red-tape measures, they ought not to be allowed to take effective measures for ensuring the public safety. It seems to me that one of the primary functions of Government is to ensure public safety, and one of the first things to be done in case of a public emergency is to come down upon it with a strong hand—a hand which should not be restricted by the consideration that some red-tape forms have to be gone through beforehand, and that the Government will have to justify its action afterwards before some petty Court. Under these circumstances, my Lord, I think that the public will concede to the Governor General in Council quite as large a discretion as the Hon'ble Mr. Charlu is willing to concede to his munsif and pleaders, and the Council will, I trust, reject the Hon'ble Member's amendment."

The Hon'ble BISHAMBAR NATH said:—"In spite of the citation of a very ancient statute by the Hon'ble Sir James Westland as an authority for opposing the second amendment, I submit that the introduction of section 26 (1) in its present form into the Bill is open to objection. The provision embodied therein is apparently a new one. It is, I believe, analogous to section 5, Act XIII of 1885, mutatis mutandis. Any letter, post-card, newspaper, or a book, which the definition of the expression 'postal article' includes, may be intercepted, detained or delivered to the Government, and disposed of in accordance with that provision. The net result of the measures passed into law in the present session of the Council has, I notice, proved, on the whole, in favour of strengthening the hands of the Executive and Magistracy as regards the suppression or prevention of certain crimes and misdemeanours. Any further attempt at restraining unduly the freedom of action of the people allowed to them with respect to the transmission of communications or papers by post would be regarded as rather arbitrary, unless due publicity were enjoined to be given to the occurrence of any 'public emergency' as contemplated by the section in question. As the amendment moved by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Ananda Charlu practically amounts to a reasonable compromise in so far as it concedes the necessity for exercising the power given by section 26 (1), it is desirable, I submit, that the proviso, for the addition of which he contends, should be adopted. Sub-section (2) provides that 'if any doubt arises as to the existence of any emergency or as to whether any act done under sub-section (1) was in the interest of the public safety or tranquillity, a certificate signed by a Secretary to the Government of India or to the Local Government shall be conclusive proof on the point.' What is required, I think, is a previous warning, or a notification of the 'emergency' after due enquiry, and not a certificate for validating an act done, or removing any doubt that might arise subsequently as to its propriety."

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. CHARLU said:—"I don't want prior publication, but only a prior record of such information as the Government acts upon. The position I have taken is very clear from the opening lines in my minute of dissent, which I shall read to the Council—'As to the power taken under section 26 (1).' I recognise the necessity for it to meet an emergency in the first instance, but I do not see why after the action shall have been taken the grounds for it should not see the light or the action itself should not run the gauntlet of a judicial investigation if necessary. Thus it strikes me that the whole of the attempted refutation fails."

The motion was put and negatived.

The following amendment, of which the Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU had also given notice, was subsequently withdrawn :—that in sub-clause (2) of the same clause, for the word "doubt," in line 1, the word "question" be substituted; after the word "arises," in the same line, the words "in respect of action taken under this section" be inserted; and for the words commencing with the words "or as to," in line 2, to the end of the clause, the words "the statement mentioned in the proviso to sub-section (1) shall be primâ facie evidence on the point," be substituted.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

PRESIDENCY SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT (1882) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers moved that the Bill to further amend the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, be taken into consideration.

The motion was put and agreed to.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said :—"I understand that the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur will move the amendment standing in the name of the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans."

The Hon'ble MR. ALLAN ARTHUR said :—"If the Hon'ble Legal Member's Bill means anything at all, it means that at some time or another the Government anticipate that in one or other of the Indian Small Cause Courts there may be no Subordinate Judge competent to take the Chief Judgeship. Otherwise it is not apparent why Government should wish to take powers to go outside the Small Cause Court for an acting Chief Judge. So far as Calcutta is concerned, the Chamber of Commerce, who have recently been giving particular attention to the working of the Small Cause Court, would much prefer to see the appointment of the Chief Judge confined to the Judges of the Court, and to ensure efficiency every Judge in the Court, who is also an advocate, should be competent to take the important position of Chief Judge. If an advocate, after some experience as a Judge in a Small Cause Court, is not competent to act as Chief Judge, he should never, in my opinion, have been a Judge at all. I am convinced that men who have had a Barrister's training should form at least a large proportion of the Judges of a Presidency Small Cause Court, and I think Government quite recognise this fact. It is also obvious that, unless the pay of a Judge bears some comparison to the income of successful men at the local Bar, Barrister Judges of a Small Cause Court must ordinarily be recruited from the Junior Bar, and a young man with energy and commonsense is a suitable person to be appointed a Judge of a Small Cause Court. The remedy for the evil, which the proposed amendment attempts to hide, viz., the incompetency of Barrister Small Cause Court Judges, seems to be perfectly clear. It is to raise the pay of the appointments to such a degree that the Local Government would be able to select their men instead of having to put up with any one they can get. In the Calcutta Small Cause Court all the Judges are advocates, and I am sure that Government has in every instance procured the best men available. This is rather a delicate matter to touch upon, because I do not wish to appear to suggest that the gentlemen who are now acting as Judges in the Court are not competent Judges; but I am convinced that, if the pay of the appointments were raised, the efficiency of the Court would be greatly increased. The Calcutta Court has yielded an annual net profit to Government of over 1½ lakhs of rupees steadily for the past six years—last year the profit was R1,81,000—and

I think the mercantile community have a right to ask that the efficiency of the Court be raised to as high a state as possible. The present pay of the appointments in the Calcutta Small Cause Court is as follows: Chief Judge, R2,000 rising to R2,500; Second Judge, R1,400; Third Judge R1,300; Fourth Judge R1,125; and Fifth Judge, R1,000, while the Registrar, who is also an advocate, gets R750 rising to R900. First, I would remark that I can see no reason why the Third, Fourth and Fifth Judges, who do the same work, should not receive the same pay, and it is inconceivable to my mind that a junior at the Calcutta Bar would accept any of the ordinary Judgships unless perhaps there was a reasonable chance of his succeeding to the Chief Judgship and of earning the Chief Judge's pension.

"The Government seem to show a disposition to effect what cannot but be called doubtful economies in cutting down the privileges and salaries of Judges in the presidency-towns. Under the Civil Service Regulations of 1st of May, 1897, the period of active service which a Chief Judge has to serve before earning his pension of £750 a year has been extended from 11½ to 14½ years. This I think is a mistake. His period of service for pension should be 11½ years as formerly, and it would probably be better in the interests of efficiency that the minimum pay of a Judge of the Calcutta Small Cause Court should be R2,000 a month. I have pointed out what seems to me to be the proper remedy to meet the case of the Calcutta Small Cause Court, and, as the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers' Bill is all in the direction of allowing the present condition of things to continue, I am not in favour of it. The amendment which stands in the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans' name has my approval, and with your permission, my Lord, I beg to move the amendment, viz., that for clause 3 of the Bill as introduced the following be substituted, namely:—

'3. In section 8A of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, as amended by the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1895, after the words "Chief Judge," the second time they occur, the words "or if none of the Judges of the Court are duly qualified some other duly qualified person" shall be inserted.'"

The Hon'ble Mr. CHALMERS said:—"I am afraid I must oppose this amendment. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Arthur has correctly stated its object. A difficulty arises at times when the Chief Judge goes on leave. The Madras Government has in very strong terms called our attention to that difficulty. The opinion of the Madras Government is that the gentlemen who may be qualified under the Act to act as Chief Judge in the Court are not always fit persons to hold the appointment, and of course it may often happen that you may have a Small Cause Court of five Judges, but the junior Judge would be the person who would have the qualification for the Chief Judge, and it might be very objectionable to put a junior Judge over the heads of all the others when the Chief Judge was on leave. Therefore, on the advice of the Madras Government, the Government of India came to the conclusion that they ought to take power, where there was, so to speak, any personal objection to a junior Judge of the Court acting as Chief Judge, to appoint an outsider. I quite agree that the only proper and ordinary course would be to appoint a Judge of the Court to act as Chief Judge. It is far more convenient that the man who knows the practice of the Court should in the absence of the Chief Judge naturally so to speak slip into his place, but as matters stand we have the opinion of the Madras Government that this cannot be done. Well, then, my Hon'ble friend says if it cannot be done it is the fault of the system, and he suggests that Small Cause Court Judges should be chosen with more regard to efficiency, and in order to ensure their being competent that they should be better paid. That is no doubt a matter for careful inquiry. It is one which my Hon'ble friend opposite (Sir James Westland) will take note of. He knows what my opinions on that question are. But on Saturday last my friend Mr. Arthur told me that he might raise this question, and it occurred to me that if it was going to be raised I should like to compare the work and the efficiency of the Presidency Small Cause Courts here with the English County Courts at home, and certainly on comparing the figures of the last year it seems to me that if the Presidency Small Cause Courts here were armed with the English County Court's procedure—with the powers of an English County Court—a smaller number of Judges could get through a great deal more work, and that perhaps, without any increased demands upon my Hon'ble friend Sir James Westland, the ends which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Arthur has in view could be obtained. Now, I find that there were five Judges in the Calcutta Small Cause Court, and that last year these Judges by working very hard—and I am told that they do work very hard—got through about 24,000 cases; that is to say, each Judge would get through about 5,000 cases in the course of the year. Well, I compare those figures with the English County Court figures, and I find there are 15 Judges in England who dispose of more than 20,000 cases apiece. I find, for instance, that in circuit No. 8, the Judge has two Courts in his circuit and two Registrars, and that he disposes of 41,000 ordinary cases and over 200 bankruptcy cases as well. I find also that in circuit No. 21, one Judge with two Registrars disposes of 52,000 ordinary cases, 6,000 judgment-summonses, 130 bankruptcies, and a large number of High Court cases besides. It is quite clear that the English procedure is far more summary and far more efficient. You cannot, of course, always compare cases in England with cases in India. On the one hand, no doubt a good deal of time is lost here owing to the necessity of interpreting the evidence, and the practitioners are slower in doing their work than at home; but, on the other hand, you must take into account that the County Courts at home have equity, jurisdiction, jurisdiction in actions of tort and in bankruptcy cases and so forth. On the whole, one would think that with an efficient procedure, setting these considerations one against another, that the Indian Small Cause Court Judge ought to dispose of nearly as many cases as the English County Court Judge and, if that were so, one Judge and two Registrars ought to be able to dispose of all the business in the Calcutta Small Cause Court. But that is a matter which may stand over for future inquiry. Last night I had various other amendments on the Bill suggested to me which I have not had time to consider —a telegram from Bombay and also a note from Sir Alexander Mackenzie who has been unable to be present to-day. I propose, therefore, not to proceed with the Bill to-day, but to let it stand over in order to have time to consider the various suggestions that have been made.

"As regards this amendment, I certainly cannot accept it to-day."

The Hon'ble MR. ALLAN ARTHUR :—"I am willing to allow the amendment to stand over, as my Hon'ble friend Mr. Chalmers suggests."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP said :—"I have in more than one instance had to consider comparisons between the work done in English Courts, and especially the County Courts in England, and the Courts in this country, and I have always realised that the difficulties with which the Courts in this country have to contend have not received proper consideration. When I hear the Hon'ble Legal Member who has had great experience of the County Courts in England, but who has had little or no experience of the Courts in this country, compare the work of the two classes of Courts to the disparagement of our Indian Courts with a view to show that those Courts do not decide a sufficient number of cases, I venture to state that any such comparison cannot fairly be made on mere statistics. The class of legal practitioners in the Courts in England and in Courts of Small Causes in presidency-towns are very different; the habits of thought and the intelligence of the witnesses are also very much against the rapid despatch of business in this country and lastly the fact that all evidence has to be interpreted—both the question put and the answers given—is a most serious drawback, and without any undue disparagement to the Judges of our Small Cause Courts I do not suppose that it will be denied that they are inferior both in experience and in knowledge of their business to those who obtain appointments as County Court Judges. There is a greater area of selection in England, the salaries are higher and therefore the office is more attractive; while on the other hand, the standard of pay offered in India is so low on comparison with the income of an advocate or pleader in fair practice that it fails to induce those who are at all likely to be successful in the profession of law to become Judges, and this applies even to Judges of the High Court. At the same time I agree entirely with my Hon'ble friend the Legal Member that a great improvement may be made in our procedure here by assimilating it more to the practice of the County Courts in England, but I maintain that in the comparisons that have been made the difficulties of the Indian Courts have been sufficiently taken into account."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND said:—"I feel almost obliged to intervene in the debate by reason of my having been called upon to do so by the Hon'ble Mover of the amendment and the Hon'ble Member who has answered him. I was not aware that these financial questions were to arise upon the discussion of what seemed to me a pure question of legal procedure. But I would say with regard to them, in the first place, that I have always found hitherto, when examining these questions of the comparative income and the comparative expenditure of the Civil Courts in this country, that the whole of the income, and sometimes more than the income, is taken into account, and that a very large proportion of the expenditure is left out of the account. My Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep challenged me upon the subject a short time ago, and I was obliged to answer him to the same effect, namely, that the figures he gave, left out a very large proportion of the expenditure. I have every reason to believe that the Small Cause Court is a very paying institution in Calcutta, but I hope, if the Chamber of Commerce takes up the question of the paying institutions in Calcutta, they will also have their attention directed to those Courts which do not pay. As a financial question we have in this country to see that the Courts as a whole pay their way. They do so very nearly, taking the whole country together. In Bengal they more than pay their way, but the curious feature is that the higher the Court, the less does it pay its way. The Hon'ble Member has also referred to a question of the pay of the Judges and their privileges. I think he is under some misapprehension if he quotes the date of 1st of May, 1897, as the date from which the extension of the period of service required for pension took place. I believe it took place at a very much earlier period than that, because I do not think that during my tenure of office there has been any change in these conditions. I quite agree that, if we want justice adequately administered, we ought to pay the Judges well. I think some of them we do pay well, but I confess some of them I would be glad to see more highly paid. The difficulty is that unfortunately we have judicial work of very different degrees of importance done by the same class of Judges, but we are nevertheless compelled to pay them at the same rates. If you take the High Court Judge in this country, you will find that by far the greater portion of his time is occupied in petty work which no Judge of the Supreme Court in England would look at. I have it on the authority of Sir Barnes Peacock that, so far as regards a very large number of the cases which are tried on appeal in the High Court in Calcutta, it would be cheaper for the Government to pay the whole amount of the claim, to pay the costs of both parties, and to give each of them a bonus besides, rather than to maintain such an establishment as the High Court for disposing of these cases. As long as the laws of procedure are as they are, so long will there be difficulties in providing high and adequate salaries for the Judges engaged in the judicial work of the Supreme Court. In the same way, in the case of the Small Cause Court, there is no doubt that there is a large amount of petty work as well as a large amount of important work; if the remuneration given to the Judges could be based in any way upon the proportion or the importance of the cases they try, the matter would be financially a more easy one than it at present is. I think it desirable to mention these things, because the Hon'ble Mr. Arthur has said that these questions are being considered by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce at present, and I would like him to understand that, whatever our general opinions may be on the subject, there are practical difficulties in meeting the claims he has justly put forward on the part of the Judges. The truth is that financially speaking the whole system of civil justice in the country is based upon a wrong principle, that is to say, we make our litigants pay by the piece and we pay our Judges by time; the consequence is that the litigants waste an indefinite amount of time and spin out their cases interminably, because having once paid their institution-fees it is practically of very little importance to them how long the cases take. I believe that according to the English practice the costs of litigation to litigants are in some way proportionate to the length of time the case takes, and in that case the litigants have some interest in pushing the cases on towards completion, instead, as I am afraid is far too much the case in India, of spinning them out over long periods."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT :—"I understand that the Hon'ble Member proposes that the further discussion on this amendment should be postponed and that the Hon'ble Member who moved the amendment has no objection."

The further discussion of the amendment was accordingly postponed.

INDIAN CONTRACT ACT (1872) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Contract Act, 1872. He said :—"As the Council is aware, the question of the indebtedness of the agricultural community, and whether, in view of what has been so generally alleged as to the ignorant peasantry of this country being at the mercy of the more astute money-lender in their monetary dealings, legislation should be undertaken to give them additional protection, has been for some time under the consideration of Government. The Commission which reported in 1892 upon the working of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act of 1879 recommended, in addition to certain amendments of that Act which were duly carried out, the enactment of a general law for the protection of agriculturists capable of being applied to any tract in which a problem similar to that which led to the enactment of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act has presented or may present itself. A Bill was drafted with this object and circulated for the opinions of Local Governments and Administrations. The replies which have been received to this reference display a considerable amount of hostility to this Bill, and the question whether it shall be proceeded with is now being discussed by the Government of India. But there is another portion of the recommendations of the Commission which has been separately discussed and considered. These proposals related to modifications of the general law regarding contract. The first point upon which the Commission suggested that the general law should be modified was in regard to section 2 of Act XXVIII of 1855 which repealed the usury laws. The terms of this section, which require the Court to adjudge or decree interest, in any suit in which interest is recoverable, at the rate (if any) agreed on by the parties, and, if no rate has been agreed upon, at a rate deemed reasonable by it, have led to contractual interest being decreed by the Courts when it is exorbitant and crushing. Many instances have come to the notice of the Government of India in which the Courts have, in some cases where the defendant has been a member of the agricultural classes, and in others where he has not, decreed extortionate rates of stipulated interest. The Commission suggested that the Act should be amended so as to make it clear that, in considering the validity of the agreement to pay interest at the stipulated rate, the Courts are bound to take into consideration the possibility of undue influence, coercion, fraud or misrepresentation ; and that the definitions of these reasons for holding contracts invalid given in sections 15 to 18 of the Evidence Act might also require some reconsideration so as to include the taking of undue advantage of a debtor's simplicity or necessities.

"They also suggested certain amendments of the Evidence Act in regard to the burden of proof. The intention of these amendments was that no Court should be required to go behind a bond or open up the past history of the transaction until some unfairness or inequality has been established, or at least made probable, and that, where such unfairness or inequality has been established, it should be part of the general law that the party which had the advantage should prove the fairness of the transaction.

"The Government of India have been in communication with Local Governments about these suggestions, and much time and attention has been devoted to discussing them. After a full consideration of the subject, the Government have determined—for reasons which will, I have no doubt, approve themselves to this Council—not to propose any amendment of Act XXVIII of 1855. They fear that any attempt to alter the law so as to enable any Court to decree in any case the rate of interest which it may deem reasonable would lead to endless litigation, interfere largely with legitimate trade, and probably, in the long run, make the state of those who have to resort to money-lenders worse than it is now. They, therefore, determined to look for a remedy not in an amendment of the law regarding interest, but in an amendment of the substantive law of contract.

"It is no part of our intention to interfere with freedom of contract in cases in which both parties enter upon an engagement in equal terms, and there are, of course, frequently cases in which high rates of interest are perfectly legitimate, and should be decreed. What we do propose is to give the Courts more discretion than they have at present in the direction of varying the terms of a contract which appears to them to be inequitable, so that they may not be required, as is not infrequently the case at present, to give a creditor judgment for sums which they actually consider to be unconscionable, and the Bill then empowers a Court, in a case in which a contract is induced by undue influence, either to set it aside absolutely, or upon such terms and conditions as the Court may think just. The definition of 'undue influence' in the Indian Contract Act is at present incomplete. It is confined to a statement that undue influence is employed in two specific sets of circumstances. The Bill enlarges the definition so as to make it embody the general principle that a contract is induced by undue influence when the parties to it do not contract on a footing of equality, but one of them is in a position to dominate the other, and makes use of that position to obtain an unfair advantage over the other, or to make him agree to terms to which he would otherwise not have consented. It also adds to the specific instances of undue influence which are cited in the existing law words to show that a person is in a position to dominate another when the latter is by nature feeble-minded as well as when his feeble-mindedness has been induced by old age, illness, mental or bodily distress or other special circumstances.

"Provision is made that when a party to a contract was in a position to dominate the other, the burden of proving that the contract entered into between them is fair and reasonable, and was not induced by undue influence, shall lie upon the person who was in the position of superiority.

"We have taken the opportunity of the proposed amendment of the Contract Act to remove doubts as to the construction of section 74 of the Act. Different High Courts have given conflicting decisions as to whether a provision in a bond, that in case of default in payment an enhanced rate of interest shall run from the date of the execution of the bond, is or is not in the nature of a penalty and therefore not recoverable under the section. The section has now been amended so as to provide that in cases in which a sum is named as the amount to be paid in the event of a breach of contract, or if the contract contains any other stipulation by way of penalty, the party complaining of the breach shall only be entitled to receive reasonable compensation, which shall not exceed the penalty named in the contract.

"The changes proposed in the Bill involve matters of great public interest, and we are anxious that the public should be given every opportunity of discussing the Bill. We, therefore, propose not to proceed with it till the next session of the Council at Calcutta. It will meanwhile be circulated to Local Governments and Administrations for their opinions, and other members of the community who may wish to make criticisms and suggestions in respect of it will have full opportunity of doing so. I now beg to ask leave to introduce the Bill."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES said:—"I would just like to say one word, my Lord. I wish to congratulate Your Lordship's Government on this Bill, which appears to be the first instalment of the legislation which is necessary to put a stop to a state of things which is extremely unsatisfactory over a very large part of rural India. I hope that the Hon'ble Member will be successful in carrying a good sound measure."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the Gazette of India in English and in the local official Gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments think fit.

The motion was put and agreed to.

INSOLVENCY RULES BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved for leave to introduce a Bill to make provision for certain matters connected with Insolvency. He said:—"The Bill is a very simple one, and consists of two clauses. Its object is to remove some doubts which have arisen as to the extent of the powers of the High Court to frame rules under section 76 of the Indian Insolvency Act of 1848 and at the same time to confirm certain rules which were made by the Bombay High Court in 1878 under those powers and which have been acted upon ever since, but with respect to the validity of which doubts have arisen from time to time."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in English in the Gazette of India, the Fort St. George Gazette, the Bombay Government Gazette and the Calcutta Gazette.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Monday, the 28th March, 1898.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT FOR 1898-99.

PART I.

INTRODUCTION.

The year now closing has been marked by a singular succession of calamities. When it opened, the famine due to the drought of 1896 was becoming more and more intense both in Northern and in Southern India, and plague was raging in some parts of the Bombay Presidency. Before the first three months had expired, the eastern side of India was shaken by an earthquake which caused much damage to the buildings and the Railway works in the districts which were affected by it. During the rest of the year we were engaged in meeting a series of fanatical attacks by the tribes on our North-Western Frontier, and repelling them by military operations conducted under conditions of very great physical difficulties and necessarily great expenditure.

2. These circumstances are necessarily reflected in the Financial Statement which I have to lay before the Council, in which I shall have to declare for the closing year a deficit of larger amount than any since 1859-60.

3. But there is also a brighter side in my statement. The harvests of 1897 have been more bountiful than any within recent memory, and the recovery from the effects of famine and scarcity promises to be a very rapid one. The Revenue returns of January were sufficient in themselves to shew that the crisis had passed, and gave hopes of early return of prosperous times. And at the present moment there are signs of peace on our frontiers and of the submission of the still outstanding tribes to the General Commanding our forces. Our financial position for the year that is about to open will therefore, I trust, be a reflection of times of returning peace and prosperity, although as peace is not yet assured to us, I am obliged to include in my estimates of expenditure a considerable provision not only for the return of our troops from the theatre of war, but also for the possible resumption, before their return, of military operations.

Accounts of 1896-97.

4. A couple of months ago I announced that the accounts of 1896-97 had been closed, and that the results, as is usually the case, closely corresponded with, and were slightly better than, the revised estimate presented to Council in March last. The comparative figures are as follows :—

	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Deficit.
	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.
Estimated in March 1897 .	93,803,800	95,790,700	1,986,900
By actual accounts . .	94,129,741	95,834,763	1,705,022
Improvement . . .	325,941	—44,063	281,878

The improvement in Revenue was mostly due to somewhat short estimates of Land Revenue and of Railway earnings. Under all other heads the estimates were very closely followed except under Civil Works, under which the short expenditure, being nearly all Provincial or Local, merely gives rise to a cross-entry under "Provincial adjustment."

Revised Estimates of 1897-98.

5. For the year 1897-98 we have to announce a deficit of Rx. 5,283,100 being greater by Rx. 2,819,100 than that which was anticipated in the Budget Estimates. This result is entirely due to the expenditure on famine being about 50 per cent in excess of our estimates, and to the outlay involved in the military operations on the North-Western Frontier. Separating out the figures connected with these two subjects, the results of the year compare as follows with the Budget Estimates :—

	Budget. Rx.	Revised. Rx.	Difference. Rx.
Excluding Famine and War—
Revenue . . .	95,676,800	96,479,200	802,400 Better.
Expenditure . . .	94,499,600	92,547,000	1,952,600 Better. (a)
Famine Relief . .	3,641,200	5,391,800	1,750,600 Worse.
Warlike Operations . .	...	3,823,500	3,823,500 Worse.
Deficit .	2,464,000	5,283,100	2,819,100 Worse.

(a) Mostly by reason of improvement in Exchange.

It is perhaps worthy of note that the deficit of the year is actually less than we have spent on Famine Relief; in other words, if we had had no famine expenditure to meet, our ordinary revenue would have been sufficient to meet our War expenditure and to leave a small surplus over. This is important only as indicating our general financial position apart from the calamities that have fallen upon us during the year.

6. The comparison between Budget and Revised Estimates set out in greater detail in the form I have adopted on previous occasions is as follows :—

Estimates of 1897-98.

		Budget.	Revised.	Revised Better.	Revised Worse.

Surplus (+) Deficit (—) .		—2,464,000	—5,283,100		2,819,100

(a) Including Interest and Receipts under Civil Works.

(b) This entry in the Indian portion of the accounts is a minus one, as the interest passed to the charge of Railways and Irrigation is greater than the whole amount of interest payable in India.

7. Of the increase in English expenditure, £161,500 occurs under the head of Interest (including discount on Loans raised), and is due to the increased loan operations which were rendered necessary by reason of our inability, to which I shall presently allude, to keep the Secretary of State in funds to the extent we anticipated at the time of the Budget Estimates. Another large item, £51,600, is due to stores sent out for military works in India and is met by the corresponding reduction under the same head in the Indian Accounts. And a further special demand for £23,100 worth of stores was made in connection with the military operations on the North-Western Frontier. No other differences in the English Account are large enough to be mentioned here.

8. It will be seen that by the improvement in the rate of exchange at which the English transactions are brought to account, our Revised Estimates shew, even with the somewhat increased expenditure, a result better than Budget by Rx. 1,488,700. The Budget Estimates were drawn up on the basis of a rate of 14·46 pence; whereas the rate actually realized has been 15·38 pence.

9. In the Account of Revenue in India, the Revised Estimates shew an improvement under Land Revenue of Rx. 286,100 which may be put down as the effect of the excellent harvests; but there is against this a heavy loss on opium due to the falling-off in prices in China. The price realized for Bengal opium has been R1,023 per chest only against R1,075 taken in the Budget Estimates, and in Bombay the falling-off in the trade was such that we had to reduce the pass duty from October 27, 1897, to R500. The other heads of Revenue produced, as a whole, a very little less than we estimated.

10. The improvement under Departmental Receipts is accounted for by the excess received in the shape of Post Office Revenue, Rx. 42,200, and of Telegraph Revenue, Rx. 219,500.

11. Under Railways we have received Rx. 482,900 more than we estimated, the important items being:—

		Rx.
1. East Indian Railway	Better	600,000
2. North-Western Railway	Better	500,000
3. Burma Railways	Better	85,000
4. Indian Midland	Better	80,000
5. Rajputana-Malwa	Worse	290,000
6. Bombay, Baroda and Central India (net earnings)	Worse	180,000
7. Great Indian Peninsula (net earnings)	Worse	330,000
Net of the above	Better	465,000

Of these, the first and largest is due to movements of grain towards the famine districts, and the second chiefly to the movements of troops in connection with the war. Plague and scarcity account for the losses on the three Railways which run towards the Western Presidency.

12. The very high receipts from Irrigation occur mostly in Northern India, and are due to the dryness of the earlier part of the year and the consequent high demand for water. The impressions produced on the people by a year of scarcity, no doubt, tend in themselves to stimulate the use of irrigation-water.

13. Passing to the Expenditure side, we have first a saving under Opium of Rx. 289,200, which for the most part means that the crop for which we had to pay fell short of our expectations; our custom is to assume, in the Budget, an average crop at least.

14. The extra expenditure under Civil Departments amounts to Rx. 275,800, and is caused by plague operations, Rx. 279,900, the head under which it is mostly shewn being Medical. There is an excess also under Jails, amounting to Rx. 84,700, and due partly to high prices and partly to increase of jail population, one of the side-effects of the general scarcity.

15. The saving under Military Works I have already explained as meaning merely a transfer of the expenditure to the English Account.

16. Under Army, apart from the warlike operations, we have a saving of Rx. 538,400. There has been a saving of about Rx. 200,000 on Commissariat and Transport services which would have had to be spent if the troops had not been absent on field service; Rx. 66,500 has been saved in exchange compensation by the rise of rates, and Rx. 77,400 in pay and allowances; the despatch of a British regiment to Natal and a Native regiment to Mombassa brings a saving of Rx. 52,200. Against these savings we have had to meet excess expenditure of Rx. 65,800 arising out of increase of prices, and Rx. 10,900 on account of Jubilee concessions to the troops. The other items of difference do not call for special mention.

17. The excesses of Rx. 1,747,800 under Famine and Rx. 3,869,800 under Warlike operations will be separately dealt with.

Famine Relief.

18. The effects of the famine upon our accounts extend far beyond the mere cost of famine relief. Even the administration of famine relief, taken by itself, necessitates increase of establishments charged under the heads of District Administration (Land Revenue), General Administration, Police, Medical, and others; but besides that, the high prices which accompany a period of famine increase the expenditure on jails, on petty establishments, and, above all, on the army. Our revenue, moreover, is seriously affected, the Land Revenue and Provincial Rates and Forests directly, and such revenues as Salt and Excise, by the general pressure on the people.

19. The total cost, direct and indirect, of the famine is estimated as follows:—

	1896-97. Rx.	1897-98. Rx.
Spent on Famine Relief	2,079,500	5,391,800
Remissions and losses of Land Revenue (independent of suspensions)	871,600	576,400
Loss of Salt and Excise Revenue	417,800	357,600
Loss under other principal heads of Revenue	337,800	391,300
Loss of Railway Revenue	1,504,100	1,477,400
Charges for compensation for dearness of provisions, and other increases due to high prices—
Under Army	506,400	604,100
Under other heads	183,000	321,000
Other charges arising in connection with famine	76,700	123,400
Total	5,976,900	9,243,000
Deduct—Increase of Irrigation Revenue due to drought	424,900	556,700
Net cost, direct and indirect, of famine and scarcity	5,552,000	8,686,300
	14,238,300

These figures omit the suspensions of Land Revenue amounting to Rx. 1,856,500 which, if the seasons are good, will be recovered.

20. As regards the direct expenditure on Famine Relief, the following figures shew the general results in Rx.:—

	1896-97.	1897-98.		Total of
	Accounts.	Budget.	Revised.	1 and 3.
India	1,213	1,300	8,200	9,400
Central Provinces . .	303,271	680,000	1,340,000	1,643,300
Burma	55,524	66,600	62,700	118,200
Bengal	244,208	1,004,800	889,400	1,133,600
North-Western Provinces . . .	993,330	850,000	1,069,000	2,062,300
Punjab	86,149	167,800	125,600	211,700
Madras	56,285	200,400	928,600	984,900
Bombay	325,659	670,300	965,500	1,291,200
England	8,360	...	1,800	10,200
Exchange	5,524	...	1,000	6,500
TOTAL	2,079,525	3,641,200	5,391,800	7,471,300

21. The great excess of expenditure, as compared with Budget Estimate, has, it will be seen, occurred in the Central Provinces and in Madras. As regards the first of these, it became evident very early in the year that, though the Chief Commissioner had provided a proportionally larger amount than any other province, the people were in a more poverty-stricken condition than even he had anticipated. In some parts of that province there had been a long succession of bad seasons, and the population had nothing whatever to fall back upon. When the time came at which in other provinces the beginning of recovery was apparent, the people of the Central Provinces were as poor and as hardly pressed as ever, and it will be seen that in 1897-98 more money has been spent on famine relief in that small province than in any of the others.

22. As regards Madras, we are still in communication with that Government on the question of its failure to foresee the extent of the demands it would have to meet. Twelve months ago I stated on the authority of the latest estimates received from the Government of Madras that the province was only slightly affected by famine, that its revenues had suffered very little, and that it would be able to meet, without assistance from Imperial Funds, the whole or nearly the whole of its famine expenditure. It must be remembered that the harvest in that province largely depends upon the rains of December to February, so that, so far as realization of the actual condition of things was concerned, Madras was not until May in the same position in which the other Governments were in January. But the demands of the province in respect of famine expenditure came upon the Government of India in June with a severity which we had not anticipated.

23. The North-Western Provinces spent somewhat more, and Bombay a good deal more, than was anticipated at Budget time; but I explained last year that I could not put forward the estimates of famine expenditure with anything approaching to an assurance that they would prove sufficient.

24. The following figures will be of interest as shewing, both in money spent and in people relieved, the history of famine relief in the several provinces of India. The figures do not include famine operations in Berar, or in the Native States of the Central India Agency :—

	Expenditure in Rx. Quarter ending December 1896	March 1897.	June 1897.	September 1897.	December 1897.
India . . .	200	1,000	2,100	3,700	1,800
Central Provinces .	23,100	277,200	515,800	580,800	328,900
Burma . . .	20,500	35,000	24,600	32,400	7,800
Bengal . .	1,700	239,500	530,700	352,000	26,300
North-Western Provinces . .	42,800	919,000	781,200	309,800	7,000
Punjab . .	9 600	76,500	62,800	48,000	12,700
Madras . . .	3,400	52,800	260,300	589,500	80,600
Bombay . .	26,500	299,100	314,600	456,600	174,600
TOTAL .	130,800	1,900,100	2,492,100	2,372,800	639,700

The expenditure in all India in January 1898 was only Rx. 32,000, of which more than half was in the Central Provinces, famine relief operations had practically come to an end.

25 The following is a statement of the units relieved, stated in thousands, a unit being one person relieved for one day :—

	Thousands of units relieved Quarter ending December 1896	March 1897	June 1897.	September 1897.	December 1897.
Central Provinces .	2,105	29,190	52,458	54 404	23,483
Burma . . .	1,489	2,524	1,472	2,208	518
Bengal . . .	1,480	36,438	68,131	32,444	287
North-Western Provinces . .	21,246	112,367	110,097	39,984	716
Punjab . .	1,233	9 389	8,513	2,433	4
Madras . . .	1,451	5,619	52,313	53,092	1,764
Bombay . .	3 135	33,179	39,924	37,742	6,061
Total .	32,139	228,706	312,908	222,307	32,833
TOTAL .	828,893,000 units, being an average of 1,814,000 per day for 15 months.

The number on relief was highest in May and June 1897, during which period about 3,650,000 persons were relieved each day.

26. Besides the direct outlay upon Famine Relief, the famine operations affect also another portion of our accounts, as the Governments in India have to meet part of the necessities of the population by a liberal extension of the system of agricultural advances The ordinary operations under this head of our accounts amount to advances a little in excess of Rx 250,000 and recoveries somewhat short of this amount, the duration of the advances being only one or two years in some cases (such as advances for seed) to five or ten years and sometimes still longer periods in cases of advances for permanent land improvements In 1896-97, however, the amount advanced came to Rx. 1,104,335 against recoveries amounting to Rx. 287,095, that is, a net amount of Rx. 817,240 ; and the net advances of the current year are about two-thirds of this amount.

27. The figures stated by provinces are as follows, the minus sign indicating cases in which the recoveries exceeded the amounts advanced :—

Net Loans to Cultivators and the like.

It is worth while to observe that we recently made special enquiries about the punctuality of repayment in the case of these advances to cultivators, and were assured on all hands by the Local Governments and by the Revenue authorities subordinate to them, that the cultivators habitually observed the obligations which they accepted in respect of the advances, and that the outstandings were sound and good debts.

28. The figures which I have so far set out include only the operations of the Government in the matter of Famine Relief; but it would not be becoming in me if I were to pass from the subject of the contest with famine, without reference to the large measure of assistance which was given, in supplement to the operations of Government, by the munificent subscriptions to the Charitable Relief Fund. The Honourable Mr. James who has had much to do with the direction of the operations of that Fund, has been good enough to give me, in anticipation of the Central Committee's formal report, the following summary of its appropriation :—

The Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund was founded at a public meeting held at the Dalhousie Institute, Calcutta, on the 14th January 1897. Followed up by a meeting at the Guild-hall in London on 16th January, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, and by meetings in other parts of the United Kingdom, the Fund grew rapidly till it reached a total of Rx. 1,670,000. Of this, Rx. 300,000 were subscribed in India, and Rx. 1,370,000 were received from countries abroad, principally from the United Kingdom which contributed the splendid sum of Rx. 1,230,000, the exchange equivalent of £773,000.

That sum was divided as follows :—

Mansion House	543,000
Lancashire	131,000
Glasgow	54,000
Liverpool	26,000
Edinburgh	17,000
Miscellaneous	2,000
	773,000

B.

These contributions from the United Kingdom exceed those made for the famine of 1877-78 by nearly £150,000, and form indeed a signal and beneficent manifestation of national benevolence. Of the balance of foreign subscriptions, amounting to Rx. 140,000, mostly remitted in Indian currency, Canada remitted Rx. 57,000, the Australian Colonies Rx. 15,500, Ceylon Rx. 14,700, China Rx. 14,000, Russia Rx. 9,800, the Straits Settlements Rx. 6,800, Japan Rx. 5,000, and the remainder came in smaller sums from New Zealand, Natal, America, Mauritius, Fiji, and other countries, Indian emigrants to British Colonies sending numerous contributions.

The fund was divided, as subscriptions came in, amongst the distressed provinces, and the following are the sums which each received, including its own local receipts :—

	Rx.
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	518,500
Central Provinces	370,000
Bengal	215,000
Bombay	165,000
Madras	157,500
Punjab	122,000
Central India	42,500
Burma	30,000
Berar	20,000
Baluchistan	2,000
Rajputana	2,000
	1,644,500

Expenditure is still going on in the Madras Presidency owing to the failure of the north-east monsoon, and in Bombay, where plague has been superadded to famine, but the Central Committee expect to wind up with a balance of between Rx. 40,000 and Rx. 50,000, consisting chiefly of moneys returned by Provincial Committees which will be invested and form the nucleus of a fund against the next famine.

Over two-thirds of the fund have been spent in giving a fresh start in life to those who had lost all in the struggle, principally to peasant farmers whose bullocks had died from want of fodder, and who had neither plough-cattle nor seed, nor credit on which to procure them. The bulk of the residue was spent upon doles to pardanashin women and respectable persons or tradesmen, who were unable from social custom to work or accept Government relief, accompanied as that must be by official enquiry into and by some kind of test of the reality of the destitution to be relieved, and a comparatively small amount has been devoted to supplementing the Government ration in poor-houses and on relief works, by small gifts of food and clothing, and to the maintenance of orphans. The Famine Fund has thus distributed in relief nearly one-fifth of the direct expenditure from the State, and as it has in no way displaced Government relief (which was not confined within predetermined financial bonds, but was limited only by certain tests), the Fund has been extremely valuable in softening the sharpness of distress, and it has restored to prosperity a vast number of families. Statistics shew nearly 1¼ million heads of families relieved by grants of cattle, seed and implements, nearly 1 million of respectable persons fed, and 1¼ millions of relief workers assisted, at the expense of the Charitable Fund, while provision has been made for the maintenance and education of about 4,000 orphans whose relatives or friends cannot be found. The Government of India contributed to the Fund by giving an officer for the duties of Vice-Chairman and Honorary Secretary, by a grant of Rx. 1,800 towards office expenses, and by allowing the Committee the free use of the Government Press. Numerous concessions of a similar nature have been made by Local Governments, firms and individuals, so that the total expenditure from the Fund on establishments and offices comes to less than one-half per cent.

Military Operations.

29. The military operations on the North-Western Frontier, which have added so much to the expenditure of the current year, may be divided into four parts, and I may state the facts in a tabular form which I admit to be better suited to a Financial Statement than to a military history:—

	I. Tochi Field Force.	II. Malakand Field Force.	III. Mohmand Field Force.	IV. Tirah Field Force.
Origin of the expedition and its date.	Attack at Maizar, 10th June.	Attack on Malakand, 26th July.	Attack on Shabkadr, 7th Aug.	Attack on Khyber Forts, 23rd Aug.
Date of formal sanction of expedition	19th June	30th July	2nd Sept.	8th Sept.
Expedition against Buner sanctioned		1st Jan.
Field Force broken up . .	18th Feb.	4th Feb.	6th Oct.	Still standing.
Fighting men engaged * . .	7,306	10,421	10,624	32,161

* Besides 3,776 in Reserve Brigade at Rawalpindi.

30. Our estimates of the expenditure on military expeditions are, I may explain, made under three heads,—(1) Initial charges, (2) Monthly charges, and (3) Terminal charges. The second of these is necessarily somewhat problematical; we can say how much any given expedition will cost per month, but the question how many months it will last is determined only by events.

31. Our estimate of the cost of the above expeditions was made in the beginning of October, and made on the assumption that they would last till the end of December. That estimate amounted to Rx. 3,720,000. This is not the place to explain what events necessitated the prolongation of the expeditions, and chiefly of the largest one, the Tirah expedition. The result, with reference to the estimate above mentioned, is that the total expenditure on account of the monthly charges has exceeded what we anticipated, but there has been a large saving on terminal charges, only however by reason of their passing into the accounts of 1898-99. We estimate now that we shall spend Rx. 3,823,500 in 1897-98 and a further sum of Rx. 1,488,500 in 1898-99. This last estimate has been drawn up on the supposition that there would be a spring campaign lasting three months, followed by what I have called the terminal charges of the expedition. Although preparations continue to be made for that three months' campaign, the prospects of peace being concluded without it are, at the present time, very favourable, and, if so, there will be some saving upon the expenditure now estimated for 1898-99.

Loan Operations.

32. In the Budget Estimate for 1897-98 I announced the intention of the Government of India to raise a Rupee loan of four crores; but when the usual time approached for our entering the market, it became very doubtful whether it was wise to try to borrow so large an amount. The Bank rate in India remained unusually high, having been 10 per cent for the first 5½ months of 1897. On June 17th it was reduced to 9 per cent, and a week later to 8 per cent.

33. The price of 3½ per cent Government Paper was 99, 100, and 101 per cent during January, February, and March 1897; it rose to 104 about 20th May, and thereafter till the end of July gradually fell back to a little over par.

34. I took the opportunity of visiting Calcutta at the end of June to make enquiry into the state of matters, and I desire to convey my acknowledgments to my banking and mercantile friends for the advice they then gave me and the information they placed at my disposal. The result of my report to His Excellency in Council was that the Secretary of State sanctioned our reducing the amount of the loan to Rx. 3,000,000, and in July we called for tenders for this amount to form part of our ordinary 3½ per cent loan, the time being unpropitious for a continuation of our 3 per cent loan of 1895. In the result the loan was taken up at an average rate of R98-5-3 and a minimum rate of R98-1 per cent.

35. The Secretary of State's loan transactions were as follows:—

(1) In accordance with Budget Estimate he raised permanent debt in May to the extent of £3,500,000, namely, India 2½ per cent stock. This he obtained at an average price of £96-15-11.

(2) In his Budget Estimate he proposed to pay off £1,000,000 of temporary debt outstanding on March 31st, and to raise new temporary debt to the amount of £2,000,000. The suspension of drawings to which I shall presently allude compelled him to enhance this last amount to £6,000,000, which he obtained as follows:—

Date.	Amount.	Rate of interest.
	£	£ s. d.
September 14 . .	2,500,000	2 11 8
November 30 . .	2,500,000	2 15 2
January 17 . .	1,000,000	2 4 5

Council Bills and Rate of Exchange.

36. The rate of exchange at the close of last year when the Estimates were brought before the Council was about 15 pence, and it remained at that rate throughout April. It fell during May, and in the end of that month the Secretary of State drew at 14$\frac{5}{16}$ pence. It then rose till the beginning of August, being then above 15 pence.

37. During July we were obliged to reconsider our position as regards Ways and Means. The suspension of the rains throughout the month of June destroyed our hopes of the early closing of the Famine Relief Works, and at the same time sudden and unexpected demands for money for Famine Relief were made from Madras. In July the position became more difficult as hostile attacks by the tribes on the North-Western Frontier made it obvious that military operations would have to be undertaken. These demands came upon us at the most difficult time of the year, so far as the supply of funds is concerned, for under ordinary circumstances our Cash Balances, even including Loan Receipts, run down throughout the five months July to November. A careful re-examination shewed that, in the face of the new demands upon us, we would be obliged to ask the Secretary of State to greatly reduce his drawings; and as the military operations became more extensive, he not only stopped them altogether, but remitted back to us a crore of rupees out of the amounts he had already drawn.

38. With the aid of this crore of rupees which reached us in the beginning of October, we just managed (as we had calculated) to pass through the low-balance period, our Cash Balances being as follows:—

	Rx.
Last day of August	8,504,300
September	7,620,000
October	8,079,300
November	8,076,400

I ought to add here a word of acknowledgment to Mr. Barrow, the Officiating Comptroller General, who accomplished the extremely difficult task of meeting the demands upon the Government Treasuries throughout this period with such inadequate resources, and that at a time when they included those of a war on the frontier, and of famine relief on an extensive scale in five of the largest provinces of India. I had asked the Local Governments to instruct the District Collectors throughout India to lend their special aid in the management of the Cash Balances; and with their assistance the arrangements worked with perfect smoothness.

39. The result of the suspension of drawings was to maintain the rate of exchange at over 15½*d.* till the middle of November, but it then began to fall through a belief, which turned out to be quite unfounded, that it could not be maintained when the Secretary of State recommenced drawing. It fell just below 15 pence in the middle of December, but as soon as the Secretary of State resumed his drawings, it became apparent that the demand had been quite under-estimated. His last drawing in December was at the rate of 15 $\frac{1}{16}$d., and the rate has since that date maintained itself at and above this rate, the average rate of the drawing of the month of January having exceeded 16*d.* The demand for money has recently been much greater than the supply, and the Banks' rate has risen from 5 per cent in the beginning of December to 12 per cent in the beginning of March. At one time the tension was so severe that it was deemed prudent to introduce a legislative measure, which would have the effect of enabling gold in England to be placed at the immediate disposal of trade in India. No operations have actually taken place under it, though we have received about £150,000 in gold in India, but it had the effect, which we intended, of allaying the anxiety of the market.

40. The drawings for the year necessarily fell far short of the amount estimated in the Budget, £13,000,000, and we estimate that for the whole year they will stand as follows :—

	£	Rx.	Rate.
Council Bills	9,378,000	14,585,400	15·4*d.*
Less Re-remittance . . .	669,400	1,000,000	16 $\frac{1}{16}$d.
Net Remittance .	8,708,600	13,585,400	15⅜*d.*

41. This rate of 15⅜ pence (or rather R15·6 for each £ sterling) is accordingly taken as that at which the English Revenue and Expenditure are brought to account in the Revised Estimates of 1897-98. And following my usual practice of avoiding any speculations upon the future of Exchange, I adopt the same rate for the Budget Estimates of 1898-99.

Budget Estimates, 1898-99.

42. The result of the Budget Estimates for 1898-99 is that, after providing for the full amount Rx. 1,500,000 of the Famine Grant, and also Rx. 1,488,500 for the continuance of military operations on the frontier, we have a surplus of Revenue over Expenditure of Rx. 891,400.

43. Except for this provision for possible war, there are no special features in the year's account. We do not intend to alter our revenue or the rates at which we collect it; we shall have to incur some special expenditure upon the suppression of plague, and the measures, which have been announced in England, for improving the pay of the British soldier will also involve some expenditure in India. How much this may be it is impossible, in the present inchoate state of the communications on the subject, to say, but we have thought it wise to provide in the Estimates a sum of Rx. 200,000 "on account."

44. There is therefore little to say but to explain the details of the Estimates; and the following statement shews in the usual condensed form the comparison between the Budget Estimates now presented and those of the preceding two years. I have included, for purposes of comparison, the figures of the Budget

Estimates of 1896-97 as well as those of 1897-98, because the latter were in some respects peculiarly affected by the prevalence of scarcity and famine:—

(a) Including Interest and Receipts under Civil Works.

45. The principal difference in the expenditure in England is an addition of £171,400 to the interest there payable, which is due to the fact that the Secretary of State has had by borrowing to make up for the short drawings of Council Bills during 1897-98. The real increase of interest chargeable upon the ordinary account of the Government is a good deal less than the amount just named, as it will be found that in the Indian portion of the accounts a considerable portion of the addition is passed on to the charge of the Railway account.

46. In addition to this increase of English expenditure on account of interest, there are the following which may be regarded as normal increases:—

Superannuation Allowances	41,500
Interest on Railway Companies' Capital	24,100

There is an offset of £11,100 against this on account of reduction of rate of interest.

	£
Payments to the War Office for effective and non-effective charges of British Forces	12,000
Other non-effective Army Charges	24,000

There is also a special provision of £38,200 on account of stores required for warlike operations on the frontier, and an increase in the payments of the Indo-European Telegraph Department of £21,900.

47. Passing to the account of Revenue in India, we first of all expect a large increase of Land Revenue. Last year's estimates were estimates of the revenue of a year of scarcity; the present are estimates of the result of a bumper harvest, in which we expect to receive not only the revenue of the year itself, but something on account of revenue suspended during the famine—suspended, that is, in distinction to remitted. The following figures compare the expected receipts with what I gave last year as the standard of the annual Revenue as it stood in 1896-97,—a standard which has of course somewhat advanced since then:—

	Standard of 1896-97.	Expected receipts in 1898-99.
	Rx.	Rx.
India	150,000	150,500
Central Provinces	844,800	920,000
Burma	2,571,300	2,637,000
Assam	614,200	626,000
Bengal	3,902,100	4,087,300
North-Western Provinces	6,110,900	6,667,900
Punjab	2,464,000	2,614,100
Madras	5,600,000	5,856,100
Bombay	4,816,400	4,961,300
	27,073,700	28,540,200

This amount is shewn thus:—

Under Land Revenue	27,568,200
„ Irrigation	972,000
TOTAL	28,540,200

48. As the annual increase of the Land Revenue has on the statistics of the last ten years been 31 lakhs, the standard figure for 1898-99 may be stated at Rx. 27,690,000, and the revenue we expect is, it will be seen, Rx. 850,000 in excess of this.

The chief advance is in the North-Western Provinces. In that province very liberal remissions and suspensions of revenue were granted during the evil times of 1896-97; and the revenue of the two years 1896-97 and 1897-98 has fallen short of the standard figure of 1896-97 by about Rx. 1,200,000.

49. Under Opium we are unable to anticipate a revenue even equal to that of the current year 1897-98: and the figure is therefore much less than the Budget Estimates of 1897-98.

50. Under Provincial Rates there is a considerable increase for the same reasons as explained in the case of Land Revenue.

51. Under Departmental Receipts the improvement, as compared with the Budget of 1897-98, is mainly under three heads, namely, Interest Rx. 81,200, due partly to the interest on the addition of Rx. 2,000,000 made to the Currency Reserve Investment in December 1896, and partly to the large advances and loans we made during the period of scarcity; Post Office Rx. 65,900, Telegraph Rx. 144,400, due in both cases to expansion of business.

52. Under Famine Relief and Insurance the figures necessarily entirely differ from those of the Budget Estimates of 1897-98. We restore the Famine Grant of Rx. 1,500,000, distributing it as follows:—

	Budget, 1897-98. Rx.	Budget, 1898-99. Rx.
Famine Relief	3,641,200	85,100
Famine Insurance	...	325,800
Protective Railways	...	668,300
Protective Irrigation	25,000	20,000
Add—Interest on Indian Midland and Bengal-Nagpur Railways under "State Railways"	456,500	400,800
TOTAL	4,122,700	1,500,000

The expenditure in the second line is the amount available for famine insurance after meeting the prior claims on the grant and the portion of the Railway construction expenditure charged against it.

53. The difference under Railways it will be convenient to explain along with the difference under the same head on the Expenditure side, and the remaining heads require no remarks.

54. On the Expenditure side the first difference calling for notice is under "Interest," and this has, as mentioned above, to be considered along with the same entry in the English part of the accounts. The English estimates provide, as already stated, for an additional interest charge of £171,400, say Rx. 267,000; but as in our Indian accounts there is an additional transfer of Rx. 167,000 from the ordinary account of Interest to the Railway and Irrigation accounts, the net burden of interest is enhanced by only Rx. 100,000.

55. The principal portions of the increase under Civil Departments (Rx. 321,000), are Medical Rx. 149,800, due to provision for plague expenditure which, though not sufficiently provided for in the Estimates of 1897-98, had nevertheless to be incurred; and Superannuations Rx. 46,200, a continually increasing charge.

56. The statistics of the Revenue and Expenditure of Railways in India may conveniently be thus stated:—

	Budget, 1897-98. Rx.	Revised, 1897-98. Rx.	Budget, 1898-99. Rx.
STATE RAILWAYS—
Gross Earnings	18,023,400	18,994,700	19,382,600
Working Expenses	9,027,300	9,299,100	9,770,500
Net Earnings	8,996,100	9,695,600	9,612,100
Interest Charges	4,089,600	4,089,200	4,319,800
Net Return	4,906,500	5,606,400	5,292,300
GUARANTEED RAILWAYS—
Gross Earnings	5,740,000	5,360,000	5,690,000
Working Expenses	3,110,000	3,200,000	3,266,000
Net Earnings	2,630,000	2,160,000	2,424,000
Payment of Profits, Interest, etc.	310,200	154,600	321,600
Net Return	2,319,800	2,005,400	2,102,400
Land and Miscellaneous Charges	296,200	134,400	310,300
Net on the whole account	6,930,100	7,477,400	7,084,400

Under State Railways it is mainly on the following lines that the traffic is expected to be better in 1898-99 than it has been in 1897-98:—

	Budget, 1897-98. Rx.	Revised, 1897-98. Rx.	Budget, 1898-99. Rx.
Rajputana-Malwa . . .	2,250,000	1,960,000	2,200,000
Bengal-Nagpur . . .	650,000	590,000	680,000
Bengal-North-Western . . .	620,000	620,000	675,000
Oudh and Rohilkhand . .	880,000	900,000	1,000,000

Provision is made for larger working expenses corresponding to the increasing traffic and for special renewals of permanent-way and rolling-stock.

Under Guaranteed Railways, the Great Indian Peninsula and the Bombay, Baroda and Central India are both expected to recover from the low figures of the current year.

57. The Army expenditure in India, excluding the account of military operations, is estimated at Rx. 343,100 less than the Budget for 1897-98. The better exchange brings a saving of Rx. 228,300 and the fall in prices Rx. 272,600. There s also less provision for ordnance stores to the extent of Rx. 41,200, and a further deduction is made in India of Rx. 64,900 for certain demands provided for in the English Estimates, but not now required. Against these savings, of which the total is Rx. 607,000, we have to provide for an increase of Rx. 27,400 for pensions, the addition being larger than usual owing to the grant of extra pensions in consequence of the military operations of the year, and Rx. 11,500 for providing medals. We have also, as already mentioned, provided Rx. 200,000 for possible improvements in the British soldiers' pay.

Railway Construction.

58. I referred last year to a systematic programme of Railway construction which had been sanctioned by the Secretary of State. It amounted to 28 crores (afterwards extended to 29⅝ crores), and was intended to last over three years, 1896-97 to 1898-99. I divided it, for convenience sake with reference to our accounts, into four categories, namely:—

First.—State Railway Construction; money found by Government, but also by debentures in the case of the East Indian and Assam-Bengal Railway Companies.

Second.—Construction by Companies, out of funds raised by them or advanced by Government to them (including a small advance for a Native State Railway).

Third.—Construction by Companies outside the accounts of the Government, and also construction by Branch Line Companies.

Fourth.—New construction by the old Guaranteed Companies.

59. The programme of 29⅝ crores did not include the Railways of the third category, and no arrangements had yet been made for any construction under the fourth category. The estimate for expenditure under the first and second categories, that is, the expenditure falling within the "programme" during 1897-98, came to Rx. 10,130,000. But the revision of Ways and Means imposed upon us by the difficulties which began in June and July, alluded to in paragraph 37 above, compelled us to reduce the amount by one crore, and it stood therefore at Rx. 9,130,000. For similar reasons the Government of India have thought it advisable to curtail the intended expenditure of 1898-99, as the strain through which the country has passed during the past two years, renders it inadvisable to raise money at the rate which was contemplated before the Famine and the Frontier war were within our calculations. The expenditure for 1898-99 was therefore at first fixed at Rx. 10,121,300; but as for various reasons, including the engineering strike in England, even the Rx. 9,130,000 will not be worked up to in 1897-98, these two amounts are now redistributed between the two years, and thus the estimates now stand at Rx. 8,414,400 for 1897-98 and Rx. 10,836,900 for 1898-99.

64. The estimate under the fourth category provides mainly for the Calicut-Cannanore, Amalner-Jalgaon, and Chalisgaon-Dhulia Railways.

Irrigation.

65. The usual annual amount of Rx. 750,000 is provided for expenditure on Irrigation in 1898-99. The similar grant for 1897-98 has not been fully worked up to, owing chiefly to certain recoveries and writes-back not provided for in the Budget.

The principal works under this head are at present—

Remittance and Debt.

66. The following account shews in a shortened form the requirements of the Secretary of State; the figures are drawn up so as to shew separately the transactions on account of Government, and the transactions arising out of the operations of Railway Companies:—

	Revised, 1897-98. £	Budget, 1898-99. £
Requirements on Government Account—
Excess of expenditure on Revenue Account	16,099,000	16,286,500
Expenditure not charged to Revenue .	834,600	1,119,900
Net payments on Remittance Accounts, etc.	187,700	191,300
Total Requirements .	17,121,300	17,597,700
Transactions of Railway Companies—
Net receipts on account of Capital . .	1,170,300	1,676,000
Payments for Stores, etc. . . .	1,919,000	2,619,000
Net Outgoings . .	748,700	943,000
Net Funds required . .	17,870,000	18,540,700

67. The following figures shew the manner in which the above requirements have been or are to be financed:—

	Revised, 1897-98. £	Budget, 1898-99. £
By Council Bills (net Remittance) . .	8,708,600	16,000,000
By addition to Permanent Debt . .	3,497,300	2,615,300
By addition to Temporary Debt . .	5,000,000	Nil.
By reduction of Cash Balance . . .	664,100	...
Deduct—Addition to Cash Balance . .	...	74,600
	17,870,000	18,540,700

It will be seen that the Secretary of State opens the year with outstandings of temporary debt to the extent of £6,000,000, and this he intends to renew. Under the head of Permanent Debt he intends to discharge India Debentures to the extent of £3,000,000 and Oudh and Rohilkhand Debenture Stock to the extent of £384,700, giving a total of £3,384,700. For the discharge of this amount, and for generally supplementing his resources, he intends to raise permanent debt to the extent of £6,000,000. His further requirements will be met by drawing Council Bills to the extent of £16,000,000.

68. We propose in India to raise a Rupee Loan of Rx. 3,000,000.

69. These announcements of the amounts of Council Bill drawings and of debt to be raised are made with the usual reservation of entire liberty to the Secretary of State to vary the amounts as he may find occasion.

Currency Policy.

70. I regret that I am not in a position to make any further pronouncement on the part of the Government, on the subject of the Currency Policy. Since the date, January 14th, on which I informed the Council that the matter was having the anxious consideration of the Government of India, we have communicated to Her Majesty's Secretary of State our views on the present position. We are now also sending home to him a copy of the Honourable Mr. Arthur's address to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and of an important communication we have received from the Bombay Chamber. We are confident that Her Majesty's Government will give the subject their early attention.

Review of twenty years' Finance.

71. I conclude my statement with a short review of twenty years of Indian finance, 1878 to 1898.

72. Twenty years ago the experience of a severe famine in Northern India, followed after a short interval by another in Southern India, brought home to us the effect upon our finances of such periodically recurring disasters, and obliged us to lay down a financial policy intended to have the effect of increasing our capacity for dealing with similar calamities in the future. We have now passed through another and a severer famine, and it will be useful to look back over this period and to see whether our financial policy has, as a whole, been successful, and whether, taking the twenty years together, a period covering both the financial preparation for, and the actual experience of, disaster, we have paid our way and can give a good account of what financially we have accomplished. These twenty years include, it must be remembered, the war in Afghanistan, the annexation of Upper Burma, and the recent wars in Chitral and on our North-Western Frontiers. They include the outlay entailed by a programme of expenditure on 'special defences' which began in 1886-87 and is only now being closed; and they include the large increase of the army effected after the occupation of Upper Burma.

73. I present on the opposite page a statement in a compressed form, which includes every transaction which during the period in question has passed through our accounts. I think the form is as devoid of technicalities as a statement of so complicated and comprehensive a subject can be, and is such as to be easily followed. I summarize the result as follows.

74. Taking first the Revenue Account, and reckoning as ordinary expenditure everything except the cost of our large wars, of the 'special defences' just alluded to, of actual famine relief, and of Railway construction so far as met out of revenue, the result is that our revenue has exceeded our ordinary expenditure by Rx. 50,988,294. Distributed into four quinquennial periods this figure is made up as follows:—

	Rx.
1878—83	22,294,539
1883—88	5,513,331
1888—93	13,472,520
1893—98	9,707,904
TOTAL .	50,988,294

75. Of this excess of revenue, we have spent Rx. 21,223,424 on War (our smaller military expeditions are not included in this term, but are taken as ordinary expenditure); we have spent Rx. 4,589,664 on special defence works; we have spent Rx. 8,138,478 upon Famine Relief, and we have spent Rx. 13,659,867 upon Railway construction. The balance of Rx. 3,376,861 remains over, to the good, on the whole account. We have, in the twenty years, by this amount more than paid our way.

76. On our borrowing and investment account we have raised debt to the extent of £65,786,082 sterling (including £1,542,500 East Indian Railway Debentures) and Rx. 48,815,586. This is mostly increase of permanent debt, but it includes Rx. 8,632,573 obtained by extending the advantages of Savings Banks all over India. Of this large sum, it will be seen, we have spent £19,448,516 and Rx. 53,518,033 mostly on the construction of Railways, but partly also on Major Irrigation works (Minor Irrigation works are paid for from Revenue); we have used £33,542,776 and Rx. 10,675 to buy up the undertakings of the East Indian Railway and other similar Companies, as they fell in under the purchase clauses of their contracts. We have lent Rx. 16,473,480 to Port Trusts for the construction of Docks and Harbour works at Calcutta, Bombay, Madras and elsewhere, to Municipalities for expenditure on projects of water-supply and drainage, and to cultivators for promotion of agriculture. But as Rx. 11,211,096 has, during the same time, been repaid to us by our debtors, the net burden upon us in respect of these lendings has been only Rx. 5,262,384.

77. A further sum of £6,734,900, included in our borrowings, has been placed at the disposal of Railway Companies for expenditure on Railway construction under their contracts with us.

78. Passing to the accounts of these Railway Companies, we find that, in addition to the sum of £6,734,900 just mentioned as lent to them by us, they have raised, either under our guarantee or under pledges of assistance from us, capital to the extent of £31,647,425 sterling plus Rx. 1,527,904. Their capital expenditure, during the twenty years amounts in sterling or its equivalent to £39,658,227 besides Rx. 1,098,145 on account of Branch Line Companies.

79. As to the effect on our revenues of all this expenditure on Railway Construction, it may be stated in this way. At the beginning of the twenty years' period the annual loss on Railways after meeting all interest charges was about Rx. 1,500,000, whereas it is now, except in good years, nearly Rx. 2,000,000. This is an apparent loss of Rx. 500,000 a year; but it has to be remembered that by reason of the depreciation of the rupee, it requires now more than Rx. 1,000,000 net earnings to pay the interest charge on the sterling capital as it stood in 1878; so that our Railway Revenue account has, after the expenditure of the twenty years, so far improved that it not only provides the whole of the interest charge which that expenditure has imposed, but meets in addition thereto Rx. 500,000 of the burden which the fall of the rupee has intermediately added in respect of the capital as it stood in 1878.

80. Stated shortly therefore the result of twenty years' finance is this. So far as Revenue goes we have, even after charging off Rx. 13,660,000 spent from Revenue account on Railway construction, more than paid our way, including all expenditure on war, special defences, and famine. So far as capital transactions go, we have raised under various conditions and spent upon Railways, Irrigation, Harbour Works and Docks, Municipal projects, and Agricultural Improvements a sum equal (at 16 pence the rupee) to Rx. 198,820,000; and we are, after all this expenditure better off by Rx. 500,000 a year than before we undertook it. I am dealing, it must be remembered, with direct financial returns only; the effect of all this expenditure on development of Revenue and its economic and administrative aspects lie outside my present purposes. As mere episodes in these transactions, we have spread Savings Banks and Money Order offices over the country; we have received in the former a net sum of Rx. 8,630,000 in deposit, and we carry out remittances in the latter to an annual extent of about Rx. 25,000,000.

81. One of my objects in setting out this general review of our finances is to point out how little occasion there is for our seeking assistance from Her Majesty's Government in aid of our revenue account. This course has been suggested in many quarters, both in England and in this country, but the Government of India have never wavered from the position taken up by Sir John Strachey in his Financial Statement for 1880-81, from which I quote the following paragraph:—

43. I can imagine few greater misfortunes to India than the loss of her financial independence, and the acceptance by England of financial responsibility for her Indian Empire. It would signify to India the loss of control over her own affairs in every department of her administration, the possible subordination of her interests to those of a foreign country, and the substitution of ignorance for knowledge in her Government. Although some rare instances may be quoted in which, when there seemed to be a conflict between English and Indian interests, it may perhaps be doubted whether India has been treated with perfect fairness, there can be no question that, on the whole, the Government of India has been carried on with as honest and thorough a regard for Indian interests as if India had a separate national existence of her own. England may rightly be proud of the way in which she has treated her great dependency. These fortunate results have, however, been due not only to her justice, but also to the wisdom with which she has left to India a separate financial responsibility. England has felt that it would be no kindness to take upon herself burdens which India now bears, to guarantee Indian debts, pay for Indian wars, and relieve Indian famines. England has also felt that it was wise, in her own true interest, to refuse to take into her own hands the control of the £67,000,000 which now constitutes the revenue of India. England does not choose that there should be grounds for even a suspicion in regard to the purity of her motives. I say this in the belief that India has before her a future of increasing wealth and prosperity; but if this anticipation should not be verified, and her future should be one of financial embarrassment, the loss of her financial independence would bring with it other misfortunes. I trust that the people of England may never find cause for believing that the maintenance of their Indian Empire means the imposition of heavy burdens on themselves.

82. The record of twenty years' finance which I have displayed in the above figures is a better one than can be shewn by almost any country in the world but the United Kingdom. As Sir J. Strachey said, we ask for no charity from England. As a mere matter of our financial credit, we consider it infinitely more profitable to us to shew that we are able with our own resources to rise from our accumulated misfortunes of last year to new energy and new prosperity, than to present ourselves before England as a poor relation seeking help out of her abundant wealth. We have every prospect, as the Budget Estimates for next year have shewn, of wiping out, within a single year, so far as our financial condition is concerned, the evil effects of the year of calamities through which we have just passed.

Appended Minutes.

83. The Honourable Major-General Sir Edwin Collen and the Honourable Sir Arthur Trevor append to the Financial Statement separate Minutes, dealing respectively with the subjects of Military Expenditure and of Railway Extension.

PART II.

DETAILS OF THE ACCOUNTS AND ESTIMATES.

Section I.—The Accounts of 1896-97.

84. The Revised Estimates of 1896-97 anticipated a deficit of Rx. 1,986,900: the deficit of the year in the closed Accounts is somewhat smaller, being Rx. 1,705,022. Accounts of 1896-97.

Explanations of the variations under the several heads of the Account figures from those of the Budget and Revised Estimates will be found in the Appropriation Report published in the Gazette of India of the 19th instant. The following is a general comparison of the Revised Estimates with the Accounts of the year:—

85. The Expenditure in India fell short of the amount taken in the Revised Estimate by Rx. 33,255, and the Revenue in India exceeded that taken in the Revised Estimate by Rx. 312,871. The division of these two improvements between Imperial and Provincial was— 1896-97. General Result.

the improvement in the Imperial section being Rx. 141,263. The average rate of exchange for the year, 14·45*d.* the rupee, was very slightly lower than that taken in the Revised Estimate, 14·46*d.* the rupee. The Revenue in England, including Exchange, exceeded the Revised Estimate by Rx. 13,070, while there was a saving in Expenditure in England, including Exchange, of Rx. 127,545. The two last-mentioned amounts, being both on the Imperial section of the Account, added to the improvement in India, Rx. 141,263, make up the total improvement of Rx. 281,878 in the Accounts as compared with the Revised Estimate.

1896-97. Revenue in India.

86. The Land Revenue collections exceeded the Revised Estimate by Rx. 275,289. The famine made it specially difficult to foretell what Land Revenue would be collected in the month of March 1897: the anticipations of the Local Governments proved too low by Rx. 190,176 in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, by Rx. 116,424 in Bombay, and by Rx. 75,165 in Madras, while in other Provinces the realisations fell short of the estimate by smaller amounts.

The allowance made for the effect of Famine and Plague on the Railway Revenue of March last was too great, and the Railway Revenue exceeded the Revised Estimate by Rx. 138,686.

The variations under other heads of Revenue were smaller, the net result being to reduce somewhat the improvements in Land and Railway Revenue.

1896-97. Expenditure in India.

87. The expenditure on Famine Relief in the closing weeks of the year was greater than anticipated, and the Actuals exceeded the Revised Estimate by Rx. 114,441. Under Army Expenditure there was also an excess of Rx. 55,643. Under other heads there was a saving from the Revised Estimate, the only important item being Rx. 233,563 under 45.—Civil Works, representing for the most part the sums by which the expenditure of Provincial Governments in March fell short of their intentions.

1896-97. Revenue and Expenditure in England.

88. The small increase of £7,707 (or with Exchange added Rx. 13,070) in the Revenue in England occurred in the fines and penalties imposed on contractors for the supply of stores. The saving in sterling expenditure of £84,764 occurred mainly under Army, £59,865, and Special Defence Works, £15,132: the expenditure on stores in March was less than anticipated by the Secretary of State.

1896-97. Expenditure not charged to Revenue.

89. The expenditure not charged to Revenue amounted to Rx. 4,984,422, as compared with Rx. 4,557,400 entered in the Revised Estimate.

Section II.—Revised Estimate of 1897-98.

1897-98. Statement of the gross figures.

90. The following is a general comparison of the Budget Estimates with the Revised Estimates of 1897-98:—

		Budget.	Revised.	Revised, better.	Revised, worse.
REVENUE.
India	Rx.	95,389,600	96,262,000	872,400
England	£	173,000	192,000	19,000
Exchange	Rx.	114,200	107,500		6,700
TOTAL	Rx.	95,676,800	96,561,500	884,700
EXPENDITURE.
India—
Imperial, Provincial, and Local	Rx.	72,623,900	77,136,300		4,512,400
Adjustment of Provincial and Local Surplus or Deficit	Rx.	−1,190,000	−705,700		484,300
NET	Rx.	71,433,900	76,430,600		4,996,700
England	£	16,088,500	16,291,000		202,500
Exchange	Rx.	10,618,400	9,123,000	1,495,400
TOTAL	Rx.	98,140,800	101,844,600		3,703,800
DEFICIT	Rx.	2,464,000	5,283,100		2,819,100

91. The chief features of difference between the Revised and the Budget Estimates of the year are the following: there has been a fair increase in Revenue, chiefly under Railways and Land Revenue: the expenditure on Famine Relief has considerably exceeded even the large amount for which the Budget Estimate provided, the main reason being that the monsoon rains, though ultimately very favourable, were a little late; the military operations on the North-Western Frontier have involved a heavy expenditure: there has also been a recrudescence of plague necessitating expenditure on preventive measures in every Province, but especially in Bombay; and lastly, the rate of exchange has risen more than three farthings in the rupee above the rate taken in the Budget Estimate and thus caused a large saving. Excluding the heads affected by the causes above mentioned, the Expenditure as a whole has been kept within the Budget grant. 1897-98. Main features.

92. The Revenue in India is expected to exceed the Budget Estimate by Rx. 872,400, but there will be an excess in Expenditure of Rx. 4,512,400, the two large items accounting for this being Rx. 1,747,800 under Famine Relief and Rx. 3,331,400 under Army. The Expenditure in England will also exceed the Estimate by £202,500 in consequence mainly of unanticipated interest and discount charges on loans and of higher Telegraph payments; but the important feature connected with the sterling figures is the rise in Exchange which reduces the net charge in the Exchange column of the Estimates by Rx. 1,488,700. The final result is an increase in the deficit of the year by Rx. 2,819,100 from Rx. 2,464,000 to Rx. 5,283,100. 1897-98. General results.

93. While Assessed Taxes, Forests, Registration, Post Office, and Minor Irrigation Works all shew satisfactory increases, the more important increases of Revenue in India are— 1897-98. Increase of Revenue in India.

	Rx.
Railway Receipts	501,300
Major Irrigation Works, Direct Receipts	467,000
Land Revenue, including that due to Irrigation	270,700
Provincial Rates	55,600
Telegraphs	219,500
Mint	104,300
Marine	54,100

94. The Railway increase is divided thus:— 1897-98. Railway Revenue.

	Rx.
State, Gross Receipts, Increase	971,300
Guaranteed, Net Receipts, Decrease	470,000
Net Increase	501,300

The Railways this year may be divided into two categories, those leading to Bombay and those in other parts of the Continent. Speaking generally, the former have done badly under the combined effects of plague (with the stringent preventive precautions entailed) and of famine; while the other Railways have done well and shew satisfactory increases over the Budget Estimate. Those increases are ascribed partly to general development, partly to the movements of troops and materials in connection with the North-Western Frontier operations, and partly to the movement of grain into districts affected by famine, though the widespread extent of the famine tended to reduce the latter movement below that which would occur in a partial famine, with scarcity in one Province and plenty in another. The more important increases have occurred on the following lines:—

	Rx.
East Indian Railway	600,000
North-Western Railway	500,000
Burma Railway	85,000
Indian Midland Railway	80,000
East Coast Railway	50,000
Madras Railway (net)	40,000
Mysore Railway	40,600

And the more important decreases on the following:—

	Rx.
Great Indian Peninsula Railway (net)	330,000
Rajputana-Malwa	290,000
Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway (net)	180,000
Bengal-Nagpur Railway	60,000

1897-98. Irrigation Revenue.

95. The increase of Rx. 467,000 in Irrigation Revenue is distributed thus:—

	Rx.
Madras (decrease)	—900
Bombay	4,400
Bengal	35,000
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	180,500
Punjab	248,000

Part of the increase in the Punjab is due to the extension of irrigation from the Chenab Canal and the realisation of some outstanding balances on the Western Jumna Canal. The rest of the increase in the Punjab and the whole of that in other Provinces is a small set-off against the Famine Relief expenditure, being due to the large demand for water caused by the failure of the rains.

1897-98. Land Revenue.

96. Madras is the only Province in which the Land Revenue collections are expected to fall seriously below the Budget Estimate. There, in consequence of the partial failure of the north-east monsoon on which several Madras districts depend more than on the south-west monsoon, allowance is made for a falling-off of Rx. 196,000. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and Assam there are smaller deficiencies of Rx. 50,000 and Rx. 14,600: in the former the effect of the famine in diminishing the collections this year has been somewhat greater than was assumed in the estimate of March last: in Assam the decrease is ascribed to the effects of the great earthquake and of floods. In the other Provinces the collections are expected substantially to exceed the Budget Estimates, which were cautiously taken in view of the famine: the larger half, Rx. 38,800, of the increase in Bengal is due to faster progress in the recoveries from landlords and tenants of their share of the cost of the survey charges in Behar, Rx. 68,800 being now expected to be recovered as compared with Rx. 30,000 entered in the Budget Estimate. The excesses are—

	Rx.
Burma	177,100
Punjab	171,300
Central Provinces	70,000
Bombay	53,000
Bengal	65,000

1897-98. Provincial Rates.

97. The increase under Provincial Rates occurs in Bengal, Rx. 66,000,—revaluations are in progress in this Province which have secured an increase in Revenue this year—and in the Punjab Rx. 33,100,—these rates rise proportionately with the Land Revenue in the Punjab. There are decreases of Rx. 28,500 in the Central Provinces and of Rx. 10,400, in Bombay, and smaller variations in the remaining Provinces.

1897-98. Telegraph Revenue.

98. The improvement in the Telegraph Revenue has been unusually large this year: this is attributed to the great use of the telegraph in connection with the frontier operations.

1897-98. Mint Receipts.

99. There have been large tenders of silver for coinage into British dollars, and the mint receipts have consequently been high. The Government of India has, at the request of the Bhopal and Kashmir Durbars, who were anxious to improve their currencies, undertaken to receive Bhopal rupees and Kashmir Chilkies and to coin the bullion in them into Government rupees. The Native State coins are taken over at a rate of exchange rather more favourable to them than the market rate between them and Government rupees, and rupees are issued to the Durbars at those rates. The bullion in them, however, is more than sufficient to coin the number of rupees payable to the Durbars, as our rupee bears a much higher value than that of the silver in it. This excess is brought to account as a gain on coinage.

1897-98. Marine Receipts

100. Of the increase of Rx. 54,100 under Marine, a rise in the pilotage receipts in Calcutta accounts for Rx. 13,000, and recoveries in connection with the employment of Royal Indian Marine vessels on Imperial services for Rx. 32,600.

1897-98. Decreases of Revenue in India.

101. The improvements above mentioned are partially counterbalanced by decreases in the Revenue in India under some other heads, of which the more important are—

	Rx.
Opium	573,900
Excise	171,800
XXIV.—Exchange	100,000
Salt	109,000

1897-98. Opium Revenue.

102. The price for Bengal Opium taken in the Budget Estimate was R1,075 a chest: the average price realised has been only R1,023 a chest; and the receipts in Bengal fall short of the Estimate by Rx. 200,200.

The Malwa Opium export trade continues to languish. In view of the state of the trade the pass duty was reduced by R100 a chest from October 27, 1897. This has caused a loss of Revenue, as the reduction so far has not had the effect of raising the exports to their former level. There is a decline in the receipts in Bombay of Rx. 374,000.

1897-98. Excise Revenue.

103. The decrease in the Excise Revenue occurs in Madras (Rx. 60,000), Bengal (Rx. 60,000), the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (Rx. 50,000). These are ascribed to the famine. There are smaller decreases in Assam, the Central Provinces, and the India Provinces, and small increases in the Punjab, Burma, and Bombay.

1897-98. XXIV.—Exchange

104. The difficulties in the way of accurately estimating the receipts under the very variable and uncertain head XXIV.—Exchange have been fully stated in previous Financial Statements.

1897-98. Salt.

105. The falling-off under Salt is not a real decrease in Revenue: it occurs in Madras, where the receipts are expected to be less than the Budget Estimate by Rx. 115,200, and is merely a postponement of the realisation of revenue from this year to next, the low price of Government paper inducing a continued resort to the six months' credit option instead of cash payment. The Revised Estimate in Bengal also falls short of the Budget Estimate by Rx. 30,400; but this is more than made good by increases of the receipts in the Northern India Salt Department and in Burma.

1897-98. Increases of Expenditure in India.

106. There have been appreciable, though comparatively small, excesses over the Budget Estimates of Expenditure in India under the following heads:—

3.—Land Revenue, in Madras, the Central Provinces, and Bombay, caused by the famine, with plague added in Bombay;

Mint, larger expenditure being necessary to coin into dollars the large amount of silver tendered, and to recoin the Bhopal and Kashmir coins, see paragraph 99;

Police, chiefly in Bombay and Bengal, caused in both Provinces by the famine and the plague; and Major Irrigation, Working Expenses, larger collection charges and greater repairs being entailed by the increase in Revenue and the increased irrigation which earned it.

The more important increases of expenditure in India are—

	Rx.
Army	3,331,400
Famine Relief	1,747,800
State Railways—Working Expenses	271,800
Medical	232,800
Jails	84,700

1897-98. Army Expenditure.

107. The increase in the expenditure on the Army is caused by the field operations on the North-Western Frontier. These are expected to cost in the current year no less than Rx. 3,869,800. But for them there would have been a saving from the Budget Estimates under the head. The only other substantial increases are about 6½ lakhs of rupees in the cost of food caused by the famine, the high prices having lasted somewhat longer than was assumed in the Budget Estimate, and about a lakh, the cost of Jubilee concessions to troops; while the following reductions have occurred:—

	Rx.
A reduction in the payments of Exchange Compensation Allowance, owing to the rise in Exchange	66,500
The saving secured by the despatch to Mombassa of the 27th Bombay Infantry	10,000
The saving secured by the despatch to the Cape of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers in May 1897	42,200
The transfer to the Civil Estimates of the charge for the pay of officers on plague duty	14,700
A saving from the short strength of the Army	12,000
A saving under Camps-of-Exercise, owing to the absence of troops in the field	8,100
The decision not to purchase camels for which a special grant was provided	10,100
A reduction in the charges for Commissariat Establishments—Supplies and Services	190,000
This for the most part is nominal only, representing a transfer to, or a set-off against, the field charges; but a small part of it is secured by a reduction in the price paid for malt liquor under a new contract running from January 1, 1898.
A reduction in the charges of the Remount Department
A smaller number of remounts and young stock than intended has been purchased, and the prices paid for Australian remounts have been lower owing to the rise in exchange, the prices being fixed in sterling	22,700
Savings now expected with reference to the actual expenditure to the end of January, in the provision made for establishments and supplies under the heads "Army and Garrison Staff," "Regimental Pay and Allowances," "Clothing," "Barracks," "Medical," "Ordnance," "Miscellaneous Contingencies" and "Volunteers."	129,500

1897-98. Famine Relief.

108. In stating the amounts provided for Famine Relief in the Financial Statement of last March it was said that the difficulty of any accurate forecast was very great, and that experience alone could show whether the estimates of the Local Governments were excessive or insufficient. They have proved sufficient only in Burma, the Punjab, and Bengal; there are considerable excesses in the other Provinces.

The following statement gives the comparison for each Province:—

	Budget Estimate. Rx.	Revised Estimate. Rx.
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	850,000	1,069,000
Bengal	1,004,800	889,400
Central Provinces	680,000	1,340,000
Bombay	670,300	965,500
Punjab	167,800	125,600
Madras	200,400	928,600
Upper Burma	66,600	62,700
TOTAL	3,639,900	5,380,800

The amounts in Burma and the Punjab are comparatively small. The Bengal Government had framed its estimate on a more liberal scale than any other Government, and although the relief of distress was prolonged there for the same reason as in other Provinces, the Budget provision proved more than sufficient.

The excess is greatest in Madras. Very soon after the beginning of the year it became apparent that the Local Government had seriously under-estimated the probable extent of the distress in that Province; and expenditure on a much larger scale than assumed in the Budget Estimate became necessary.

In the Central Provinces also the extent to which, and the time over which, relief would be necessary proved greater than was at first anticipated. The people of the Central Provinces had experienced a series of bad seasons before the great famine of 1896-97 began, and their capacity to withstand that great calamity had been much impaired. Owing to this and other causes the relief operations had to be continued on a considerable scale in the Central Provinces for some months after they had practically ceased in most other Provinces. In Bombay also the relief had to be continued on a large scale up to December 1897.

The short delay in the establishment of the south-west monsoon also increased the amount of expenditure in Madras and the Central Provinces; and it is to this cause alone that the excesses in the North-Western Provinces and Bombay may be ascribed.

The famine caused by the failure of the rains in 1896 may be said to have come to an end in December 1897 although relief on a small scale has continued in Bombay till now. The partial failure of the north-east monsoon this cold weather has given rise to fears of another famine on a small scale in some districts of Madras, and there has been some expenditure on famine relief and test-works in that Province in January, February, and March; but the amount is small, under half a lakh.

The figures above relate to the Provinces only. In addition, there is some expenditure brought to account on the "India" books. The Budget Estimate provided Rx. 1,300 for the supervision of relief officers in Native States. The number of officers employed on that work was larger than anticipated: Mr. Higham was also deputed to inquire into the working of famine relief operations in all Provinces; and the Government of India paid the salary of Mr. H. E. M. James when acting as Vice-President of the Charitable Relief Fund. The charges on the "India" books are now expected to amount to Rx. 8,200.

1897-98. State Railway Expenses.

109. The increase in the Working Expenses of State Railways was required to earn the increase of Revenue mentioned in paragraph 94.

1897-98. Medical.

110. The large increase under Medical is caused by the plague. Almost every Local Government has thought it necessary to incur expenditure on measures to guard against the spread of the plague, and where the pestilence has broken out still heavier expense has been necessary to stamp it out. As was to be expected, the cost has been much heavier in Bombay than elsewhere; and that Province accounts for Rx. 208,700 out of the total increase of Rx. 232,800. Nor is the cost of preventive and remedial measures against the plague confined to the one head "Medical." The following table gives an estimate of the cost to the Government under all heads in each Province in 1896-97, 1897-98, and 1898-99; Municipalities and other Local Bodies have, in addition, had to incur considerable expenditure:—

Expenditure connected with plague.

1897-98. Jails.

111. The increase under Jails is a consequence of the famine, the high prices have increased the cost of rations; and the prison population has been large, as is usual in years of scarcity.

1897-98 Decreases of Expenditure in India.

112. In partial set-off against the heavy increases of Expenditure in India above set forth, there are some decreases, of which the more important are—

	Rx.
Opium	289,200
Civil Works	226,100
Guaranteed Railways—Surplus Profits, Land, etc.	157,200
Military Works	143,500
Subsidised Railways, Land, etc.	125,400
Salt	98,700
Forest	69,000
Telegraph	53,300

1897-98. Opium Expenditure.

113. Under Opium, the Budget Estimate, as usual, provided for the expenditure entailed by a normal crop on the area sown with the poppy. The crop was again, for the seventh year in succession, a short one, and the payments will fall short of the estimate by Rx. 289,200.

114. The larger part of the decrease of Rx. 226,100 under Civil Works occurs in the Local section of the Estimates. The total expenditure on Civil Works from Incorporated Local Funds is expected to be less than the Budget Estimate by Rx. 189,900. All Provinces contribute to this, the largest amounts being Bengal Rx. 88,200, Madras Rx. 30,700, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Rx. 25,100, and Burma Rx. 22,400. 1897. Civil Works.

In the Provincial section also, there are savings in most Provinces, the largest being Bombay Rx. 36,700, Madras Rx. 35,300, the Punjab Rx. 38,100 and Burma Rx. 20,700. But the saving in the total Provincial expenditure is reduced to a small amount in consequence of a large excess of Rx. 86,400 in Assam. This excess is due to the great earthquake which wrecked very many buildings and damaged many roads in the Province, and these have to be reconstructed and repaired.

In the Imperial section of the Civil Works Estimate there is an excess of Rx. 35,800. This is caused by the charge under this head for the Bangalore Water-Works. That charge is divided between Military Works and Civil Works in the proportion of 1 to 2: excessive provision was made in the Budget Estimate under the former head and deficient provision under the latter.

It may be convenient to give here an estimate of the total expenditure likely to be caused by the earthquake. It is as follows:—

	1897-98.	1898-99.	TOTAL.
	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.
Railways in Bengal and Assam	85,000	80,000	165,000
Other Imperial Expenditure in Bengal and Assam	26,800	24,300	51,100
PROVINCIAL EXPENDITURE—
Bengal	45,700	53,300	99,000
Assam	101,200	105,800	207,000
LOCAL EXPENDITURE—
Assam	3,200	8,700	11,900
TOTAL	261,900	272,100	534,000

The very large expenditure in Assam from Provincial Revenues being beyond the power of that small Province to bear, the Government of India has sanctioned an assignment from Imperial Revenues of Rx. 160,000, half in 1897-98 and half in 1898-99, to aid the Chief Commissioner in repairing the effects of the great calamity.

115. The decrease in the payments on account of Guaranteed Railways is due to the falling-off in the traffic receipts of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, which reduces the Company's share of surplus profits, and to the payments for land for the Calicut-Cannanore, Amalner-Jalgaon and the Chalisgaon-Dhulia Railways being less than were anticipated. 1897-98. Guaranteed Railways.

116. A large part (nearly Rx. 80,000 including Exchange) of the reduction in Military Works Expenditure in India (Rx. 143,500) is merely a transfer of expenditure from India to England. The remainder represents the actual saving from the grant: it has been secured partly in consequence of the orders, of 1897-98. Military Works Expenditure.

which the low balances necessitated the issue, asking all departments to curtail expenditure as much as possible until the month of January, when the period of low balances should be past.

1897-98. Subsidised Railways.

117. The arrangements for starting the construction of the Brahmaputra-Sultanpur, the Mymensingh-Jamalpur, and the Tapti Valley Railways were not completed soon enough to allow of the acquisition of land to the extent provided for in the Budget Estimate and the provision for the Bhagulpore-Bausi-Baidyanath and Tinnevelly-Quilon Railways could not be utilised owing to construction not having been started as was anticipated during the course of the year.

1897-98. Salt Expenditure.

118. The manufacturing charges have been small in the Northern India Salt Department and Bombay, and savings of Rx. 22,300 and Rx. 4,600 are anticipated there. In Bengal the intended preventive establishments have not yet been sanctioned, and a saving of Rx. 10,600 is secured. In Madras the reduction is Rx. 61,200; but of this Rx. 36,400 represent merely a transfer from the Salt to Excise: there is a joint establishment in Madras for the two Departments, and the proportion in which the total should be divided was altered during the year from $\frac{3}{4}$ and $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{5}$ and $\frac{2}{5}$.

1897-98. Forest Expenditure.

119. The decrease under Forests is distributed over all the provinces. It represents partly the usual over-estimate by Local Governments of the probable expenditure under this head, and partly the effect of the orders mentioned in paragraph 116.

1897-98. Telegraph Expenditure.

120. The decrease in Telegraph Expenditure is partly the result of the orders just mentioned, and is partly due to the restriction of the Railway construction during the year—itself a consequence of the need which led to those orders—and a smaller mileage of Railway telegraph lines being consequently required.

1897-98. Exchange Compensation Allowances.

121. One cause of saving which affects almost all the Expenditure heads in India, is the rise in the rate of exchange above that assumed for the calculation of the cost of Exchange Compensation Allowances. The average rate taken for this purpose in the Budget Estimate was $14\frac{3}{4}d.$ the rupee: the four quarterly rates with reference to which the Exchange Compensation Allowances have been paid are $15\frac{7}{32}d.$, $14\frac{13}{16}d.$, $15\frac{5}{16}d.$, and $15\frac{15}{32}d.$, yielding an average for the whole year of $15\frac{13}{64}d.$ The consequent saving amounts to Rx. 155,600.

1897-98. Revenue in England.

122. The Revised Estimate of sterling receipts in England does not differ appreciably from the Budget Estimate, the improvement being £19,000, the larger part of which occurs under Interest: the rate of interest obtained on the temporary investment of the cash balances was higher than estimated during a portion of the year.

1897-98. Expenditure in England.

123. The sterling expenditure will exceed the Budget Estimates by £202,500. The chief items in this increase are—

Interest £161,500

Of this, £117,800 is the discount on the loan of £3,500,000; and the remainder is the increased interest charge on the temporary loans on the security of India Bills: the suspension for a time of the sale of Council Bills, and the purchase of drafts for Rx. 1,000,000 on India to strengthen the rupee balances depleted by famine and war expenditure, necessitated the issue of India Bills to the amount of £6,000,000 as compared with £2,000,000 entered in the Budget Estimate.

Indo-European Telegraph Payments . . . £37,400

The payments in respect of Revenue exceeded the Budget Estimate, owing to an increase in the homeward traffic and in the percentage carried by the Indo-European route.

Military Works £51,600

There were larger demands for stores, chiefly water pipes: this increase is counterbalanced by a decrease in the expenditure in India, see paragraph 116.

124. The charge for Exchange on net Sterling Expenditure is less than in the Budget Estimate by Rx. 1,488,700. The net Sterling Expenditure is greater by £183,500, and the exchange on this difference at 14·46*d.* the rupee, the rate of the Budget Estimate, is Rx. 121,100. The direct saving in Exchange on sterling transactions from the rise in the rate of exchange from 14·46*d.* to 15·38*d.* the rupee is therefore Rx. 1,609,800. 1897-98. Exchange.

Section III.—Budget Estimate of 1898-99.

126. The absence of famine and the presence of provision for war on a considerable scale are the two broad features of difference in the Estimates of 1898-99 as compared with those of 1897-98. 1898-99. Main features.

With the exception of Opium, nearly all heads of Revenue show satisfactory progress: the Land Revenue and Provincial Rate collections are expected to be specially high, as the Local Governments hope to realise considerable arrears the collection of which was suspended during the famine.

In Expenditure there is a large reduction, Rx. 3,556,100, under 33.—Famine Relief, while warlike operations require a provision of about Rx. 1,517,600 to which there was nothing corresponding in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98, and the recrudescence of the plague necessitates expenditure on preventive and repressive measures, mainly under Medical. Most other heads of Expenditure exhibit moderate increases, the general position having necessitated the closest restriction possible of the grants in the present year.

The rise in the rate of exchange secures a large saving.

A surplus of Rx. 891,400 is expected as compared with a deficit of Rx. 2,464,000 in the Budget Estimate and of Rx. 5,283,100 in the Revised Estimate of 1897-98.

1898-99. Increases of Revenue in India.

127. The more important increases of Revenue in India are—

		Rx.	Rx.
Land Revenue, including that due to Irrigation			1,953,500
Provincial Rates			238,300
Railways—
State, Gross Receipts, Increase	1,359,200	}	1,153,200

Telegraph			144,400
Customs			98,600
Interest			81,200
Post Office			65,900
Major Irrigation, Direct Receipts			63,900

1898-99. Land Revenue and Provincial Rates.

128. The following table shows the distribution of the increases expected under Land Revenue and Provincial Rates:—

	Land Revenue. Increase. Rx.	Provincial Rates. Increase. Rx.
India, General	—2,600	—100
Central Provinces	320,000	5,500
Burma	234,100	5,500
Assam	11,400	—400
Bengal	162,300	79,000
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	740,400	120,100
Punjab	252,200	33,100
Madras	80,100	—400
Bombay	155,600	—4,000

In the above sums, arrears which the Local Governments intend to collect are included to the following extent:—

	Rx.
Central Provinces	85,200
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	496,500
Punjab	98,600
Bombay	50,000

The Bengal figures include Rx. 75,100 for the recovery from landlords and tenants of their share of the cost of the Survey charges in Behar, compared with Rx. 30,000 in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98. There is another feature of the Bengal Estimate which is worth mentioning. Hitherto the Land Revenue receipts in that Province have been practically stationary, the great bulk of it being permanently settled. But the long term settlements in Orissa having come to an end, Settlement operations have been in progress there for some years: the new assessments are now coming into operation, and an increase of Rx. 40,000 on that account is entered in the Estimate of 1898-99.

The estimates are high in all Provinces, but the Local Governments all expect to realise the amounts entered.

1898-99. Railway Receipts.

129. The estimates of Railway Revenue anticipate some recovery from the temporary depression which diminished Railway receipts during the famine: they have been cautiously framed, and if prospects continue as favourable as they now appear, there is good reason to hope that the actuals of the year will exceed the amount now taken.

1898-99. Telegraph Receipts.

130. The increase in Telegraph Revenue has been unusually large this year, and, as part of it is due to a special cause (see paragraph 98) which will not operate to the same extent next year, it is not considered safe to assume that the improvement will be fully maintained next year. The Estimate accordingly, while higher than the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by Rx. 144,400, is lower than the Revised Estimate of that year by Rx. 75,100.

1898-99. Customs Revenue.

131. The improvement taken under Customs occurs mainly in the export duty on rice and the import duty on cotton goods. Both these items have been specially low this year and last for reasons connected with the famine, the Burma rice having been diverted to India by the high prices, and the ability of the people to pay for cotton goods having been diminished by the pressure of the famine. The Burma rice crop of this cold weather is a very fine one, and it will not be diverted to India: nor will the whole of it be exported in the current year as the exports continue into April and even May, while we may for the purpose of estimates assume an average crop next cold weather, regarding which we as yet of course know nothing. Our information is that a considerable revival in the import of piece goods will take place next year.

1898-99. Interest.

132. The main cause of the increase in the Interest receipts is the increase in the investment of the Currency Department by Rx. 2,000,000 made in December 1896 under Notifications Nos. 5366 and 5367, dated December 18, 1896. The first year's interest on that investment was partially taken against the discount incurred; and the profit will be fully brought to account for the first time in 1898-99. The considerable loans granted during the famine also increase the receipts under this head.

1898-99. Post Office.

133. The increase in Post Office receipts represents the usual annual increase in the Revenue of a progressive department.

1898-99. Irrigation Receipts.

134. The Irrigation Receipts in the Punjab are placed higher than in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by Rx. 96,200: this is, mainly, due to the development of irrigation from the Chenab Canal. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh on the other hand there is a decrease of Rx. 39,200: the estimate of 1897-98 was placed specially high because of the drought.

1898-99. Decreases of Revenue in India.

XXIV.- Exchange.

Opium.

135. Apart from the uncertain head XXIV.—Exchange under which the receipts are taken lower than in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by Rx. 60,000, the only head of Revenue which shews an important decline is Opium. The prices of Bengal opium have declined during the year; the price at the sale this month was only R948 a chest, and the average for the twelve months of this year R1,023. The price for next year has been taken between those two rates at R1,000 a chest. This results in the receipts in Bengal being less than in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by Rx. 290,300. As the Malwa export trade still shews no signs of revival, it has also been necessary to estimate for a further decline in the receipts in Bombay, amounting to Rx. 200,200: it is assumed that the number of chests passed for export will be about the same as the number taken for the Budget Estimate of 1897-98: so that this decrease may be ascribed entirely to the reductions in the rate of duty.

1898-99. Decreases of Expenditure in India.

Famine Relief.

136. On the Expenditure side the largest difference between the Estimates of the two years is under 33.—Famine Relief, which shews a reduction of Rx. 3,556,100. The famine had attained large dimensions and was increasing in severity last March, and a large provision was required for the obligatory measures of relief, and the amount which had actually to be spent was still larger. The favourable rains brought by the south-west monsoon of 1897 happily brought to an end the dire distress of the people as well as the necessity for further expenditure by the Government. The cold weather rains have also been generally favourable, and there is a good prospect of magnificent rabi crops in Northern India and of fair crops in the Central Provinces and Bombay, though to this prospect there is one exception in some districts of Madras which depend on the cold weather or north-east monsoon. That was much delayed and in some parts partially failed. The Madras Government consequently anticipates the possibility of having to re-establish relief works in three or four districts, and has provided a sum of Rx. 85,000 for the purpose It cannot yet be said whether the full amount will be required.

1898-99. Other decreases of Expenditure in India.

137. The only other important reductions in Expenditure in India next year are—

Interest charges.

Interest on Debt	Rx. 143,300

This represents chiefly the interest on the difference between the Capital Expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works and the amount of the borrowing in India.

Military Works.

Military Works	Rx. 71,500

This is secured by the decision not to make additional provision for the works required at the recently established outposts on the North-Western Frontier—Chitral, Malakand, Gilgit, Tochi, Samana—and to require the Military Works Department to meet the cost of those works within its fixed grant.

Salt.

Salt	Rx. 50,700

Of this, Madras accounts for Rx. 42,100, due partly to the change in the distribution of establishment charges mentioned above in paragraph 118 and partly to a reduction having been made in the estimates prepared on the same basis as those accepted in previous years, past experience having shewn that they overestimated the requirements. There are also small reductions of about half a lakh each in the expenditure in Bombay and the Northern India Salt Department.

1898-99. Exchange Compensation Allowances.

138. The rate assumed in the Budget Estimate as the average rate, with reference to which Exchange Compensation Allowance will be paid, is 1*s.* 3⅛*d.* the rupee. As the rate for this purpose in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 was 1*s.* 2¾*d.*, there is a considerable saving under most heads on this item of expenditure, amounting in all to Rx. 235,700.

1898-99. Increases of Expenditure in India.

139. There are a considerable number of increases of expenditure, some of them, like those under Superannuations and Jails, unavoidable, others allowed because the extreme restrictions required last year are no longer necessary. But the only increases of importance are—

		Rx.
34.—Construction of Protective Works	Rx. 668,300	994,100
36.—Reduction of Debt	Rs. 325,800
Army		1,114,900
State Railways, Working Expenses		743,200
Railway and Irrigation Interest on Debt . . .		197,800
Civil Works		303,900
Medical		149,800
Major Irrigation, Working Expenses		58,800
Interest on Advances to Railway Companies . .		52,300

1898-99. Protective Railways and Reduction of Debt.

140. The first of these increases represents the amount required to raise the total of the Famine Insurance Grant to Rx. 1,500,000. In 1896-97 and 1897-98 the expenditure on direct famine relief charged under head 33 was so large that there was no room for any charge under the two heads which are used to make up the total of the group of heads included in "Famine Relief and Insurance" to the prescribed amount. In 1898-99, on the other hand, there is fortunately reason to expect that the direct charges for famine relief will be insignificant. The Famine

Expenditure of the last two years necessitates the restoration of the Famine Insurance Grant to its former amount of a crore and a half of rupees. The method of effecting this restoration is to charge under 34.—Construction of Protective Railways as much of the Capital Expenditure of the year on Railways as is incurred on Railways which have been classed as Protective, and to charge the remainder of the balance required to make up Rx. 1,500,000 under 36.—Reduction of Debt.

141. The warlike operations on the frontier in which we have been engaged since August last have not yet fully effected their object,—a small section of the tribes having still to complete their final submission and compliance with terms. It was accordingly thought that it might be necessary to continue the operations over a short part of next year, and the estimated cost has been entered in the Estimates: it includes all the terminal charges involved in the return of the troops to cantonments and the breaking-up of the force, as well as some charges incurred but not paid in the concluding months of this year, and amounts to Rx. 1,355,000. In addition, some extra expenditure is involved in keeping the outpost garrisons—from Kohat to the Kurram Valley, in the Tochi Valley, and at Malakand—at a greater strength than ordinary until the frontier has quite settled down: the amount of this is Rx. 160,900. 1898-99. Army Expenditure.

The only other item involving increase which need be mentioned is that to which the recent decision of Her Majesty's Government to increase the pay of the British soldier gives rise. The increase will have to be given to the soldiers serving in India and paid for from Indian Revenues. The exact terms of the concessions to be made in India are still under discussion. And a round sum of Rx. 200,000 has been entered to provide for the probable cost next year.

Apart from field operations, the Army charges are less than in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98; the more important items of decrease being—

	Rx.
The fall in prices from the famine level of this year	272,600
A saving in the pay of British Troops from the rise in the rate of exchange at which it is issued from 14½*d.* to 15¼*d.* the rupee	129,500
A saving in Exchange Compensation Allowances consequent on the rise in exchange	98,800
A reduction in the provision required for Ordnance Stores and camp equipage	41,200
The withdrawal of two Native Infantry Regiments from Burma and a reduction in the strength of the Mounted Infantry in that Province	14,800
A saving in the purchases of malt liquor partly owing to a reduction in the price under a new contract	29,500
An expected saving in the cost of moving troops and stores and in miscellaneous Commissariat charges	34,500

142. The increase in the Working Expenses of State Railways is required to earn the additional receipts taken on the Revenue side: moreover, repairs and renewals were restricted as much as possible this year under the orders mentioned in paragraph 116, and there are also some damages caused by the earthquake to be made good. 1898-99. State Railways

1898-99. Railway and Irrigation Interest.

143. The increase under Railway and Irrigation Interest is the interest on the new Capital Expenditure.

1898-99. Civil Works.

144. The increase under Civil Works is due to the fact that the general position allows a larger expenditure on useful works than was possible in March 1897.

1898-99. Medical.

145. The measures to be taken for the repression and the prevention of the spread of plague in all Provinces, but especially in Bombay, account for the considerable increase in Medical expenditure.

1898-99. Irrigation. Working Expenses.

146. The construction every year of new canals and extensions necessarily increases the amount of repair and maintenance charges which, with the cost of collecting the increasing revenue, make up the Working Expenses of Irrigation Works.

1898-99. Interest on Advances to Railway Companies.

147. The increase under this head is mainly due to the charges to the Bengal-Nagpur and Indian Midland Railway Companies of interest on the Capital Expenditure of the extensions of those Railways.

1898-99. Revenue in England.

148. The small increase of £15,300 in the Sterling receipts in England is distributed between Interest receipts—the experience of this year having justified a somewhat higher estimate of the profit derived from temporary investments of the cash balance—and Army receipts, the recoveries of the value of accoutrements, etc., and the subscriptions towards family pensions having increased.

1898-99. Expenditure in England.

149. The Sterling expenditure exceeds the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by £386,300.

Of this, larger Interest payments account for £171,400. The net permanent Sterling borrowing is expected to amount to about £2,600,000. It will also be necessary to renew or replace the full amount of the India Bills for £6,000,000 issued this year (see above paragraph 123). The programme of Railway construction described in last year's Financial Statement, paragraphs 74 to 84, involved borrowing in sterling, but the heavy expenditure this year on famine and war has necessitated a much larger increase than was intended.

The Superannuation and Pension charges, and the Non-effective Army charges shew increases of £41,500 and £44,000 respectively. These increase from year to year with the addition of officers and widows and children to the pension lists.

The Effective Army charges are increased by £71,900, while the payments to the War Office are less by £8,000 and miscellaneous payments by £7,600; the charges of the Indian Troopship Service and for passages otherwise than in troopships are higher by £28,800, and those for stores by £58,700. Of the last item, the sum of £38,200 is for stores for the frontier operations.

The payments of interest on capital deposited by Railway Companies shew an increase of £13,000. This is due to further deposits of capital by the Bengal-Nagpore Railway Company, the East Indian Railway Company, and the Southern Mahratta Railway Company, partly counterbalanced by the reduction on renewal in the rate of interest on debentures of the Indian Midland Railway Company and the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway Company.

1898-99. Exchange.

150. In 1898-99 the charge for Exchange on the net Sterling expenditure is less than in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by Rx. 1,383,700. The net Sterling expenditure is more than in the Estimate of 1897-98 by £371,600, and the exchange on this difference at 14·46*d.* the rupee is Rx. 244,900. The direct saving from the rise in the rate of exchange from 14·46*d.* to 15·38*d.* the rupee is therefore Rx. 1,628,600.

151. The above figures shew the effect of the famine on the most important of our Revenue heads. In ordinary years the Land Revenue increases from year to year, as resettlements are made and cultivation extended. In the five years ending with 1895-96, the increase had been as shewn in the following table. Though the year 1895-96 was itself a year in which the progress of the Revenue had been retarded by failure of the cold weather rains in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, in the Punjab, and in the Central Provinces, the increase in those particular five years was higher than what we can assume as the normal rate of increase :—

	Increase in five years.	Average annual increase.	Decrease in 1896-97.
	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.
India, General . . .	—4,686	—937	+ 1,760

Bombay	448,381	89,676	481,180
TOTAL .	2,268,414	453,682	2,176,322

The last column of the above table shews the decrease in each Province in 1896-97 compared with 1895-96, the total amounting to Rx. 2,176,322. This falling-off represents the amount of remissions, suspensions, and short collections caused by the famine. The loss in 1896-97 is much greater than in 1897-98 because in the former year the suspensions affected both the main instalments in which the Land Revenue is collected, whereas in the latter the plentiful harvests admitted of the collection of the full normal amounts in the second half of the year.

152. When the famine began, the Local Governments at once realised that large suspensions and remissions of Land Revenue were required, but it was not possible or desirable for them to decide at once how much should be finally remitted and how much merely suspended. They delayed the decision on that point till after the famine should have ended, and in some Provinces the question is still under consideration. The amounts finally remitted on account of the famine cannot therefore yet be completely stated. But the amount of those remissions either sanctioned or about to be sanctioned are approximately given below, so far as they are as yet known :—

	Rx.
Central Provinces	187,000
Bengal	20,000
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	640,000
Madras	375,000

153. These sums are a final sacrifice of Revenue made because of the famine. The bulk of the remainder of the loss in the two years will be made good by arrear collections in 1898-99 and subsequent years. The arrear collections which Local Governments intend to make in 1898-99 are set forth in paragraph 128 above.

The expenditure under Land Revenue increases from year to year with the progress of the country and improvements in administration. But the famine has caused a special increase in 1896-97 and 1897-98, establishments being strengthened temporarily to deal with it and the plague, and the lower-paid servants having received compensation for the dearness of provisions.

154. Detailed explanations regarding Revenue will be found in paragraphs 102 and 135, and regarding the Expenditure of 1897-98 in paragraph 113: the estimate of expenditure for next year is, as usual, based on the assumption that there will be a normal crop. The general remarks made in paragraph 166 of the Financial Statement of March last apply to the present estimates also.

155. The anticipation in paragraph 167 of the Financial Statement of March last that the Salt Revenue would recover from the check experienced in 1896-97 because of the famine has been realised. As explained in paragraph 105, the falling-off in the total Revenue this year is not due to the consumption of salt having diminished, but represents only a postponement of Revenue from this year to next.

The issues of Kohat salt have not been so high as they were taken: the stocks cleared before the enhancement of the duty from 8 annas to R2 a Lahori maund (of 102 seers) lasted longer than was expected: the other issues of the Northern India Salt Revenue Department have, however, more than made good this deficiency. Issues of Kohat salt have been resumed in the latter part of the year, and the Budget Estimate assumes that in 1898-99 the former normal quantity of Kohat salt will be issued and duty realised on it at the enhanced rate. It has been decided to abolish the Indus Preventive Line, but at the same time to impose certain restrictions on the conveyance of salt on the river Indus, and to forbid the transport of Kohat salt in quantities in excess of five seers from the right to the left bank of the Indus and on land on the east side of the Indus. As the difference between the duty on Kohat salt and the general duty is now reduced to one rupee a maund, it is believed that those restrictions will be sufficient to prevent any loss of revenue by the displacement of ordinary salt by the lower-taxed Kohat salt, and it is hoped that it will not be necessary to make any further increase in the duty on the latter.

The Revenue for 1898-99 is taken at what is believed with reference to the statistics of past years to be a moderate total. The amount is below the duty on the quantity which may fairly be accepted as the normal consumption of the country at the present time.

156. The Stamp Revenue continues to increase, but the increases in 1896-97 and 1897-98 are very small: this may be connected with the famine and the plague, but it is very difficult indeed to assign specific causes for variations in Stamp Revenue. While it is safe to say that that revenue over a series of years will yield a considerable increase, it is not safe to make that assertion in regard to any one year: the Stamp Revenue has been known to fall off for the whole of India, and more frequently does so in particular provinces. The check to progress now experienced may merely be one of these occasional fluctuations in a direction opposite to the general tendency. But however that may be, it is probable that some revival will occur next year, and a moderate increase has been assumed for the Budget Estimate of 1898-99.

157. The revenue under this, in normal years, specially and steadily progressive head, declined in 1896-97 and again in 1897-98 under the influence of the famine and plague. A recovery is fairly certain next year, and the Budget Estimate for 1898-99 is placed slightly below the level of the Revenue of 1895-96.

The expenditure is increasing moderately from year to year for the improvement of preventive and administrative arrangements.

159. Although the total of the Customs Revenue of the Revised Estimate of 1897-98 exceeds the Budget Estimate only by Rx. 85,500, there are considerable variations in the details. In the import duties there is a decrease under Metals, a larger decrease, Rx. 80,400, under Manufactured Articles and Raw Materials, and a still larger decrease, Rx. 121,200, under Cotton Goods. The last of these was mentioned as possible in paragraph 171 of the last Financial Statement: it is almost certainly due to the famine, the distress having forced the people to forego luxuries in the matter of clothing, and the same cause probably accounts for the first two decreases also. The other heads of imports have yielded generally moderate increases, that under Oils amounting to Rx. 113,200, while a large increase of Rx. 175,000 over the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 and of Rx. 93,719 over the Actuals of 1896-97 occurs under Silver. The net imports of silver have been heavier this year than in any year since 1893-94, the figures being—

	Oz.
1893-94	54,328,973
1894-95	27,040,026
1895-96	27,018,079
1896-97	25,929,088
1897-98 (partly estimated)	39,000,000

The export duty on rice has fallen short of the Budget Estimate by Rx. 38,000. In the Budget Estimate some allowance was made for the diversion to India of the part of the Burma rice crop of the cold weather of 1896-97 which remained unexported on April 1, 1897, but not quite enough.

The prospects, as they now appear, justify us in anticipating a considerable increase in the import duty on cotton goods and in the export duty on rice in 1898-99. The import duty on silver is, as usual, estimated moderately, at about 25 lakhs of rupees.

160. The increase in this head of Revenue in 1896-97 was not much, if at all, below the average. But the increase in 1897-98 has been small. This result is probably connected with the famine, though it seems probable that the classes which pay Income Tax have been but little affected by that calamity.

164. The Revenues of the Post Office and Telegraph Departments make satisfactory progress, which entails an increase also in Expenditure. The increase in Telegraph Revenue this year being specially high, and partly due to a temporary cause, the estimate for next year is taken lower than the Revised Estimate of this year.

165. As explained in paragraph 99, the high receipts under Mint this year are due to the large coinage of the British dollar for the Straits and other eastern Settlements and to the recoinage of Bhopal and Kashmir coins. The experience of the last two years having shewn that a larger dollar coinage than was assumed in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 may be counted on annually, the estimate for next year on that account is placed higher, though not so high as the Revised Estimate of this year; and a small portion of the Bhopal and Kashmir coins remain to be dealt with in 1898-99. But this increase is almost entirely counterbalanced by a decrease in the gain on copper coinage, as the large issues of copper coin have ceased with the famine: see paragraphs 110 and 179 of the Financial Statement for 1897-98. The enormous demand for copper coin raised that receipt to Rx. 137,600 in 1896-97: in the Budget Estimate of this year we took Rx. 50,000, but have reduced it to Rx. 40,000 in the Revised Estimate: in 1898-99 we take Rx. 30,000 only, which is rather below the normal amount of years before the famine.

166. Under most of these heads the expenditure has been increased in 1896-97 and 1897-98 by the famine; and in 1897-98 and 1898-99 the plague causes a considerable increase specially under Medical.

167. On the other hand, the rise in exchange reduces the charges for Exchange Compensation Allowance.

168. The estimates under Political include provision for the political charges connected with the operations on the North-Western Frontier, and for the Burma-China Boundary Commission.

170. These charges have been fully explained in other parts of this Statement. But, as has appeared from the remarks under many heads, the charges entered under the head 33.—Famine Relief do not cover nearly the whole of the loss which the famine has caused: there have been also losses of revenue and increases of expenditure under ordinary heads. And this is a convenient place to bring these various items together. It is impossible to give exact figures: for example, though we know that Excise Revenues have been reduced by the famine, no one can say exactly how much of the actual reduction of revenue was due to famine and how much to other causes: it must therefore be remembered that the amounts named below are merely approximate estimates. The following table gives the best estimates that can be made for the two years :—

The suspensions of Land Revenue and Provincial Rates have not been included in the estimate of loss of revenue above shewn, as, though their effect was to reduce the revenue in the two years, they will not be a final loss, as it is intended to collect them in 1898-99 and subsequent years so far as they may prove to be recoverable: when collected, they will increase the revenue of future years. They amount to Rx. 1,476,600 in 1896-97 and to Rx. 641,000 in 1897-98.

171. The Revised Estimate of net receipts on State Railways exceeds the Budget Estimate for 1897-98 by Rx. 699,500. This increase is due to the large increases on the East Indian Railway and North-Western Railway, while on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway there was a considerable falling-off.

The small decrease in the Interest charges in India is due to the restriction of outlay mentioned below in paragraph 177, while that in the sterling Interest charges occurs on the capital deposited by Companies and is due to additional capital not being raised as early as was expected. The further rise in the rate of exchange causes a considerable saving in the Exchange on the sterling charges, thus making the Net Result considerably better than in the Budget Estimate.

In 1898-99 the net receipts from State Railways are estimated at only Rx. 83,500 lower than the Revised Estimate for 1897-98, the decrease is partly due to the movements of food-grains on the East Indian Railway and to military traffic in the North-Western Railway being expected to be much less next year and partly to working expenses being expected to be much higher next year owing to restricted expenditure this year on renewals of rolling-stock and other works and to the increase in prices of stores in England. The increase in Interest charges occurs chiefly under India and is due to the progress of capital outlay.

The falling-off in the net traffic receipts of Guaranteed Railways is due to the plague and famine having completely disorganised the traffic to Bombay over both the Great Indian Peninsula and Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railways.

The poorness of the net results of the Revenue Account is, as explained last year, due to the prevalence of scarcity and plague, and though some return of prosperity is to be expected next year, it is not considered safe to anticipate a full return to the more favourable results of former years.

172. The increase in the receipts from Major Works in 1897-98 is due chiefly to the large demand for canal water caused by the drought; the small increase in the receipts from Minor Works is due to the same cause. The increase in the Punjab is, however, due to some extent to the development of irrigation from the Chenab Canal, the receipts from which have now risen to Rx. 208,800, being about double the amount realised in 1895-96. The Budget Estimate for 1898-99 anticipates a return to normal conditions. A further increase of Rx. 38,200 will be realised on the Chenab Canal. The increase of irrigation in 1897-98 necessitated an increase in the charges for the collection of the revenue as well as in the charges for the maintenance and repairs of canals. The increase in the working expenses of 1898-99 is mainly due to provision having been made for the maintenance of additional lengths of canals to be opened out for irrigation.

173. The financial results obtained during 1895-96 and 1896-97 from Irrigation Works, for which Capital and Revenue Accounts are kept, are given below :—

174. The expenditure during 1897-98 against the grant placed at the disposal of the Military Department for expenditure on Military Works is expected to fall short of the Budget Estimate by Rx. 64,400.

The increase in 1897-98 over the Budget Estimate for Imperial Civil Works is due to larger outlay on the Bangalore Water-works.

The expenditure on Imperial and Provincial Civil Works in 1898-99 is higher than the Budget Estimate of 1897-98, owing to the grants having been specially restricted last March.

Under Local the expenditure in 1897-98 is below the Budget Estimate, owing partly to restriction of expenditure in Bengal (88,200) and partly to the expenditure in other Provinces being less than was anticipated when the Budget Estimate was framed.

SPECIAL DEFENCE WORKS.

176. The following table shews the expenditure on "Special Defence Works":—

	Rx.
To end of 1886-87	150,409
1886-87	325,626
1887-88	456,017
1888-89	789,595
1889-90	689,481
1890-91	491,837
1891-92	604,848
1892-93	458,060
1893-94	324,974
1894-95	217,867
1895-96	101,349
1896-97	94,610
1897-98, Budget Estimate Rx. 19,400, Revised Estimate	35,400
	4,740,073

No expenditure is provided for under this head in 1898-99; the outlay on Special Defence Works (exclusive of Armaments) will in future be provided for out of the grant for Military Works.

Section V.—Capital Expenditure on Public Works not charged against Revenue.

177. In paragraph 193 of the Financial Statement for March 1897 it was explained that the Secretary of State had agreed to a programme for the construction of Railways in India during the three years 1896-97, 1897-98, and 1898-99, which involved the expenditure of 29¾ crores of rupees, including the extensions to be carried out by the Guaranteed Railway Companies, and the manner in which the expenditure was to be provided was also stated.

It was not at that time contemplated that any expenditure would be incurred in 1897-98 on the extensions to be carried out by the Guaranteed Companies, and the whole of the provision for these lines was set down against 1898-99.

In addition to the expenditure within the programme above referred to, it was anticipated that Branch Line Companies and Companies outside the accounts of the Government of India would incur expenditure which would bring the total outlay of the year 1897-98, after including outlay on Irrigation Works, up to a figure in excess of 14 crores of rupees.

The programme for 1897-98 for all State Railways in India was fixed at Rx. 10,130,000, and it was proposed to provide this sum thus:—

	Rx.
From Imperial funds	6,500,700
Capital of Indian Railway Companies	3,629,300

and it was to be expended—

By State agency	3,324,500
By the agency of Companies	6,805,500

It was, however, found necessary during the course of the year to restrict expenditure on the construction of Railways, as the famine and war expenditure threatened to reduce the cash balances to a dangerous extent. A revised forecast was accordingly prepared and submitted to the Secretary of State, in which, while retaining the limit of 29⅜ crores as sanctioned by the Secretary of State in his Despatch No. 1 (Financial), dated 7th January 1897, for expenditure on Railways during the three years 1896-97 to 1898-99, provision to the extent of Rx. 9,130,000, or Rx. 1,000,000 less than the Budget provision, was made for expenditure on the construction of Railways during 1897-98. This sum was distributed as under:—

	Rx.
Imperial funds	5,301,800
Capital account of Indian Railway Companies	3,828,200
TOTAL	9,130,000

178. Since the preparation of this forecast a sum of Rx. 8,400 has been transferred to head 50.—Miscellaneous Public Improvements, and a sum of Rx. 20,000 has also been deducted from the total grant to provide for the proposed loan to the Cooch Behar State for expenditure on the Santrabari extension—leaving the existing grant for expenditure on construction of Railways at Rx. 9,101,600.

179. It has not, however, been found possible, owing to the disturbance of working arrangements caused by the suspension of expenditure in the middle of the year, to strikes in England and other reasons, to work up even to this reduced amount, and in the Revised Estimates for Capital Expenditure on Railways during 1897-98 the total expenditure of the year, as compared with the Rx. 9,130,000 provided in the revised forecast, amounts to—

	Rx.
Imperial funds—
48.—State Railways—Construction	3,903,400
50.—Miscellaneous Public Improvements	8,400
East Indian Railway Company's Debentures	980,700
Capital of Indian Railway Companies, including the loan for the Cooch Behar State Railway	3,505,600
Guaranteed Railway Extensions	16,300
	8,414,400

or less by Rx. 715,600 than the amount of the reduced grant available. This amount has been transferred for expenditure during the ensuing financial year as explained further on.

In addition to the above sum, the Branch Lines Companies and the Companies whose accounts are outside the Government accounts are expected to spend during the year Rx. 2,160,200, making a total of Rx. 10,574,600 for all Railways in India.

180. As regards 1898-99, it was agreed with the concurrence of the Secretary of State that the amount provided in the revised forecast for expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works should be fixed at Rx. 10,871,300 instead of at the balance of the programme of 29⅜ crores as originally proposed, and of this amount Rx. 6,646,300 is to be provided from Imperial funds, Rx. 3,475,000 against the Capital account of Indian Railway Companies, and Rx. 750,000 against Capital to be raised by the Guaranteed Railway Companies.

It was subsequently agreed that if the total final grant as passed in the final Revised Estimate was less than the reduced grant of Rx. 9,130,000 available for expenditure during 1897-98, the difference might be added to the above sum of Rx. 10,871,300 and utilised for expenditure on the construction of Railways during 1898-99. This difference as stated above amounts to Rx. 715,600, and the total amount available for expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works, for the latter of which a grant of Rx. 750,000 has been provided, thus becomes Rx. 11,586,900. Funds to meet the expenditure on the jetties at Chittagong under the head 50.—Miscellaneous Public Improvements have also been provided from this sum, which has been distributed for expenditure as under:—

	Rx.
48.—State Railways—Construction	4,951,300
49.—Irrigation	750,000
50.—Miscellaneous Public Improvements	48,000
34.—Construction of Protective Railways	668,300
Capital of Indian Railway Companies	3,475,000
Guaranteed Railway Extensions	750,000
East Indian Railway Company's Debentures	944,300
	11,586,900

In addition to the above, further capital expenditure will also be incurred in 1898-99 by Branch Line Companies and other Companies, whose accounts are outside the Government accounts, to the extent of Rx. 2,360,700 as under:—

	Rx.
Branch Line Companies—
Ahmedabad-Parantij, Brahmaputra-Sultanpur, Hardwar-Dehra, Mymensingh-Jamalpur, South Behar, and Tapti Valley Railways	1,515,700
Outside the Government Accounts—
Southern Punjab	200,400
Bengal and North-Western Railway Extensions	620,400
Segowlie-Raksaul	4,200
Nilgiri	20,000
TOTAL	2,360,700

The total of the programme for Capital Expenditure on Railways, Irrigation Works, and Miscellaneous Public Improvements in 1898-99 accordingly amounts to nearly 14 crores of rupees.

48.—STATE RAILWAYS—CONSTRUCTION.

181. The Budget grant for 1896-97 amounted to Rx. 5,980,200 as under:—

	Rx.

	TOTAL .	3,819,900

against which the actual expenditure incurred amounted to Rx. 4,243,976, thus exceeding the Revised Estimate by Rx. 424,076 and falling short of the Budget provision by Rx. 1,735,224. Of moneys placed at his disposal up to 30th November 1896 (date of despatch of indents from India), the Secretary of State was unable to spend £8,357, which sum, with exchange and charges upon it, amounted to Rx. 13,949.

183. The amounts provided for Railway Construction this year and next are, as already stated, Revised Estimate, 1897-98, Rx. 3,903,400, and Budget Estimate, 1898-99, Rx. 5,619,600, including in the latter figure provision to the extent of Rx. 668,300 under the head 34.—Construction of Protective Railways. The difference of Rx. 57,200 between the Budget and Revised Estimates is due mainly to the recovery of the cost of watercourses constructed on behalf of the landholders on the Chenab Canal and to the value of the surplus stock of the Dehri Workshop of the Sone Canal having been transferred from this head to Provincial. The Budget Estimate for 1898-99 provides Rx. 50,000 for the Jhelum Canal to be commenced next year, and Rx. 110,000 for the Mandalay Canal which will be in active progress.

187. The Budget Estimate of Sterling Ways and Means was seriously affected by the events in India which rendered necessary the temporary suspension of the sale of Council Bills and the purchase of drafts on India by the Secretary of State. In the early months of the year the Revenue in India fell below the anticipations of last March: the delay in the establishment of the monsoon and the other causes mentioned in paragraphs 91 and 108 largely increased the expenditure on famine relief; and the occurrences on the North-Western Frontier 1897-98. General Summa necessitated field operations on a considerable scale. These unforeseen demands were beyond the power of the Indian cash balances to meet without a diminution in other demands on them. The Secretary of State decided to give the necessary help by the suspension of the sales of Council Bills, and this suspension was announced on the 1st of September for not less than ten weeks from the 8th of September 1897. The Secretary of State at the same time remitted to India a crore of rupees by means of bank drafts. The suspension of Council Bills was continued for a further period of 4 weeks, and the sale was resumed on December 15, after a total intermission of 14 weeks. It is now estimated that the total drawings of the Secretary of State in 1897-98 will be £9,378,000 against £13,000,000 entered in the Budget Estimate. The purchase of the drafts on India for one crore cost £669,400, making a net deficiency in the estimate of drawings upon India of £4,291,400. This deficiency is met chiefly by temporary loans to the extent of a net sum of £4,000,000. There are other differences from estimates in the transactions of the year, but these require no special notice here.

1897-98. Sterling Loans.

188. In accordance with the intention announced in paragraph 206 of the last Financial Statement, India Stock for £3,500,000 was issued in May 1897. The new stock was issued at 2½ per cent: the state of the money market was not favourable at the time, and the loan was raised at a discount of £3 4*s*. 1*d*. per cent. The total amount tendered was £13,779,800 and the minimum rate of accepted tenders was £96 13*s*.

1897-98. Temporary Debt.

189. In March last it was the intention to raise £2,000,000 in 1897-98 by means of India Bills, of which the sum of £1,000,000 was required to replace a like amount of Bills issued in the year 1896-97; but in consequence of the aid given to the Indian cash balances, it has been necessary to incur sterling debt in excess of the Budget Estimate to the extent of £4,000,000. India Bills have consequently been issued for £6,000,000 instead of for the £2,000,000 entered in the Budget Estimate. Of these, £2,500,000 were issued for 12 months on the 18th of September 1897, £2,500,000 for 6 months on the 3rd of December 1897, and £1,000,000 for 6 months on the 23rd of January 1898. The results of the several temporary loans have been as follows:—

Month of issue.	Amount tendered.	Amount accepted.	Average rate of interest per cent per annum.
	£	£	£	s.	d.
September 1897	7,180,000	2,500,000	2	11	8

January 1898	9,770,000	1,000,000	2	4	5

Capital of Railway Companies.

190. The net issues to Railway Companies during 1897-98 were taken in the Budget Estimates at £317,700; it is now estimated that they will amount to £432,500. The following are the usual details:—

	Budget.	Revised.

Railway Companies' Remittances.

191. The large decrease in the amounts of new capital is due chiefly to the fact that Railway Companies' debentures were renewed instead of being replaced by fresh capital. Most of the Companies required for stores, establishment charges, etc., much less than was estimated at the beginning of the year, but the new funds raised were on the whole still less, and in the net result £114,800 more are likely to be paid in the year than originally estimated.

192. The following are the details of remittance transactions of Railway Companies working State lines in India to which advances of funds are made in England for the purchase of stores, etc., against recoveries in India by debit to the Revenue Account:—

Net Remittance from India	500,500	316,200

The total advances are not expected to vary materially from the Budget Estimate. The East Indian Railway Company during the year will issue a larger amount of debentures than intended.

Family and other Remittances.

193. The reduction in the net payments on account of family and other remittances of £40,100 is the result of a number of large differences. There is an increase in the receipts of £24,000 owing to the recovery from Her Majesty's Imperial Government of expenses and payments connected with the Suakin and Mombassa Expeditions, and £38,000 more are expected to be paid in England in repayment of advances made in India on account of emigration of coolies and other Imperial services. Against these larger receipts there is an increase in the payments for stores chargeable to Provincial and Local Funds and Native States in India of £129,900, while there are decreases of £108,000 in the net provision for payments in England on account of family remittances, remittances by the Administrator General, etc., and other miscellaneous remittances from India.

1898-99. Home Treasury. Ways and Means.

194. The net disbursements at the Home Treasury in 1898-99, excluding Loans and Council Bills, are estimated at £18,540,700. Under ordinary circumstances this amount should be realised by the sale of Council Bills. But owing to the heavy expenditure on Railways which is contemplated in India in 1898-99, it will not be possible for the Government of India to supply by means of Council Bills more than about £16,000,000, and this amount has accordingly been entered in the Estimates as the probable drawings of the Secretary of State. It is proposed to provide the balance of the estimated disbursements by the issue of India Stock.

Notice has been given by the Secretary of State for the discharge of £384,700, Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway 4 per cent Debentures, on the 5th of May next, and £3,000,000, India Debentures bearing interest at 3½ per cent will expire on August 16, 1898. In order to discharge this amount of debt, and to meet the portion of the net disbursements not covered by the sales of Council Bills, the Secretary of State proposes to issue £6,000,000 of India Stock in 1898-99. It is also proposed to replace £6,000,000 India Bills, falling due in 1898-99, by a like amount of Bills raised in the year.

According to the programme now announced, the net disbursements of the Home Treasury will be met, in the year 1898-99, by the sale of Bills on India of £16,000,000 and by a net addition to the permanent debt of £2,615,300.

195. It should be understood that in stating the present intentions of the Secretary of State no sort of pledge is given that he will adhere to the programme.

1897-98. General Summary.

197. In accordance with the usual practice, the Estimate of Ways and Means of the Government of India for 1897-98 placed at the disposal of the Secretary of State the whole of the estimated excess of Treasury receipts up to December 1897. In the earlier months of the financial year the Revenue fell below the anticipations of the Budget Estimate, larger expenditure on famine relief and larger loans to cultivators in famine-stricken districts became necessary; and the disturbances on the North-Western Frontier involved us in a considerable war expenditure. It was also decided in view of the state of the money market to reduce the amount of the rupee loan from Rx. 4,000,000 to Rx. 3,000,000. The steps taken to meet the deficiency in cash balances to which these causes gave rise were: first, the reduction of the expenditure on Railway Construction by Rx. 1,000,000: second, the postponement till January 1898 of all other expenditure which could be postponed: third, the stoppage of the sale of Council Bills for 14 weeks from September 8 to December 15; and, fourth, the remittance by the Secretary of State to India of one crore of rupees by means of Bank drafts.

The excess of Revenue in India over the Expenditure charged against it is expected to be less than the amount taken in the Budget Estimate by Rx. 4,124,300; the Savings Bank transactions are expected to cause a net withdrawal from the Treasury of Rx. 400,500 instead of a net receipt of Rx. 428,000 entered in the Budget Estimate, the amount of the public loan was reduced by Rx. 1,000,000, and the net amount of loans to Municipalities, etc., will exceed that estimate by Rx. 386,300. The total diminution of the cash balances under the three heads mentioned thus amounts to Rx. 6,339,100. As a set-off against this large deficiency the payments of Council Bills will be Rx. 6,945,500 less than the Budget Estimate, Rx. 1,000,000 was received by remittance from England, and the reduction in expenditure not charged to Revenue will be Rx. 1,488,000. The year is now expected to close with a cash balance of Rx. 16,722,352, being in excess of the Budget Estimate by Rx. 3,400,642.

1898-99. Main features.

198. As the Revenue Account for 1898-99 now made up closes with a surplus, it is necessary for the Government of India to provide only for the Capital Expenditure of the year not charged to Revenue by means of new loans. The total estimate of Capital Expenditure not charged to Revenue amounts to Rx. 5,749,300. In addition to this we have undertaken to advance in 1898-99 Rx. 1,380,100 to the Indian Midland and Bengal-Nagpur Railway Companies for expenditure on new extensions. The total of the Government outlay and the advances to the Companies mentioned amounts to Rx. 7,129,400. This demand we propose to meet by a new rupee loan of Rx. 3,000,000, a net addition to the permanent debt in England of £2,615,300, and a small reduction in the Indian cash balances.

Rupee Loan of 1897-98.

199. It was announced in paragraph 214 of the last Financial Statement that a new loan of Rx. 4,000,000 would be raised in India in 1898-99. But in the current year the available amount of loanable capital in the Indian market was comparatively small. It was accordingly decided to issue a loan of Rx. 3,000,000 only at 3½ per cent per annum. After the successful conversion in 1896-97 of the unguaranteed 3½ per cent loans into 3 per cents, the Government had intended to raise its future rupee loans at 3 per cent; but in view of the peculiar circumstances of the current year, it was decided to raise the loan of the year at 3½ per cent.

The loan of the current year was issued on July 19, 1897, and tenders for it were received on August 16. The unfavourable state of the money market at the time affected the result, and the loan was raised at a discount of R1-10-9 per cent.

New Rupee Loan.

200. It is the present intention of the Government of India to raise a new rupee loan in India of Rx. 3,000,000 in 1898-99, but this announcement is made with the usual reservation, and full liberty is reserved, as usual, to alter the programme, as now announced, to any extent that may be considered desirable.

Savings Banks, etc.

The following table gives the details of the transactions of Savings Banks during the last few years and the estimated transactions for 1896-97 and 1897-98 :—

YEAR.	Net additions to deposits, cash.	Interest.	Total addition.
1889-90	—362,900	272,200	—90,700
1890-91	250,700	279,700	530,400
1891-92	517,900	306,200	824,100
1892-93	548,900	339,400	888,300
1893-94	179,900	368,000	547,900
1894-95	—84,500	297,000	212,500
1895-96	247,700	338,500	586,200
1896-97	—581,100	346,600	—234,500
1897-98, Budget	78,000	350,000	428,000
1897-98, Revised	—727,800	327,300	—400,500
1898-99, Budget.	156,700	327,500	484,200

The year 1897-98 has been another year of heavy withdrawals of Savings Bank deposits. As in the year 1896-97, the withdrawals are attributable directly to the high price of food-grains and the prevalence of distress. The Budget Estimate of 1898-99 allows for a comparatively small addition to the net deposits, and with the return of normal conditions and general prosperity the result is likely to be much better than the estimate.

Loans by Government.

201. The net issues on account of loans by the Government to Municipalities, etc., in 1897-98 are now expected to be Rx. 631,700 against Rx. 245,400 entered in the Budget Estimate—an increase of Rx. 386,300. This increase is the difference between the increases in the gross advances of Rx. 691,300 and in the recoveries of Rx. 305,000. Nearly the whole of the increase in gross advances represents additional loans to agriculturists and others in districts affected by famine and scarcity. According to the Budget Estimates of 1898-99, the loan transactions of the year will result in a net receipt of Rx. 62,200 instead of a net issue as in past years. This result is not due to any extensive curtailment of the loans by the Local Governments, but to the fact that large recoveries are expected in 1898-99 of the heavy loans to cultivators and others in the current and past year. The following is a comparison of the gross recoveries and issues for several years :—

	Issues.	Recoveries.
1894-95	686,806	512,267
1895-96	744,789	506,246
1896-97	1,337,194	542,638
1897-98, Revised	1,456,000	824,300
1898-99, Budget	797,600	859,800

The estimates for next year provide for normal requirements for advances to agriculturists and others, and the Government of India, I am glad to say, have been able to pass with little change the proposals of the Local Governments for loans to Municipalities and other Local Bodies for specified works of public improvement.

Cash Balance.

202. The year 1898-99 is estimated to close with a cash balance in the Indian Treasuries of Rx. 16,208,952, which is less than the opening balance of the year by Rx. 513,490.

Memorandum on Military Expenditure.

The estimates with which the Military and Marine Department of the Government of India is concerned are—

I—Indian Military Estimates.

II—Home (India) Military Estimates.

III—Military Works Estimates.

IV—Marine Estimates.

I.—Indian Military Estimates.

Comparison—Revised for 1897-98 and Budget for 1897-98.

The revised Indian Military Estimates for 1897-98, compared with the Budget Estimates for the same year, show a net increase of Rx. 3,325,300, which is chiefly due to the large expenditure incurred on account of the field operations on the North-West Frontier.

2. These field operations are estimated to cost Rx. 3,869,800 during the current year, i.e., Rx. 400,000 for the Tochi Field Force operations; Rx. 3,455,000 for the Malakand Field Force, the forces employed in the Mohmand and Buner country, and the army known as the Tirah Expeditionary Force,—and the balance Rx. 14,800 on account of Mekran, and arrear charges of previous operations.

3. The only other noteworthy items of increased expenditure are, Rx. 65,800 on account of food supplies, due to the prevalence of high rates during a great part of the year, and Rx. 10,900 for concessions granted to British and Native troops on the occasion of the Jubilee of Her Majesty the Queen Empress.

4. The more important items of decreased expenditure are as under :—

Owing to favourable rates of exchange, there was a saving of Rx. 66,500 for exchange compensation allowance.

Under Grant 1, "Army and Garrison Staff," there was a saving of Rx. 17,400, while under Grant 3, "Regimental Pay and Allowances," there was a less expenditure of Rx. 60,000.

Next, the Indian revenues were relieved to the extent of Rx. 10,000 in consequence of the 27th Bombay Infantry having been sent to Mombassa, the charge being borne by Her Majesty's Government. The despatch of the 2nd Battalion, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, to Natal in May 1897 some months before its relief in ordinary course resulted in a further saving of Rx. 42,200.

The military estimates were further relieved of expenditure to the extent of Rx. 14,700 on account of the pay and allowances of officers whose services were placed at the disposal of the Civil Department for plague duty.

5. Under Grant 4, "Commissariat," a saving of Rx. 200,000 is anticipated, which is chiefly due to smaller consumption of malt-liquor owing to troops being on field service, to a reduction in the price of malt-liquor from 1st January 1898 under a new contract, to fewer ordinary movements of troops and stores in consequence of troops being on field service, and to the lapse of a special grant of Rx. 10,130 for the purchase of camels for mobilisation purposes.

6. Under Grant 5, "Remounts," there is a saving of Rx. 22,700 on account of Australian horses in consequence of a more favourable rate of exchange, and owing to fewer purchases than were anticipated.

7. Other minor causes bring up the total savings to Rx. 505,700; the net result is, taking into account the war expenditure, that the Revised Estimate is Rx. 3,325,300 more than the Budget Estimate for 1897-98.

Budget Estimates, 1898-99.

8. The Budget Estimates for 1898-99 in the net amount to Rx. 17,250,800 or Rx. 1,096,500 more than the Budget Estimates for 1897-98.

Comparison—
Budget for 1897-98.
" " 1898-99.

9. The most important causes of increase are—(i) increased expenditure to the extent of Rx. 1,519,100 on account of field operations and special services, of which Rx. 1,458,000 is on account of field operations and Rx. 61,100 on account of the latter; and (ii) the abolition of the grocery ration stoppage, and the grant of an additional allowance to the British soldier in India. This measure has been rendered necessary by the improvement in the position of the soldier which is to come into effect in all parts of Her Majesty's dominions. Hitherto, the soldier at home has had a deduction of 3*d*. per diem made for groceries and extra messing. An allowance of 3*d*. per diem will be made to meet this charge, but deferred pay will cease, and gratuities only will be given when the soldier leaves the colours. In India we have hitherto made a stoppage of 9 pies (¾*d*. at 1*s*. 4*d*. the rupee) daily for a grocery and vegetable ration, which costs about 1½ annas (1½*d*.). The details of the change as applicable to India are not yet settled, but for next year we have provided Rx. 200,000. With regard to the charge for field operations, it may be explained that this sum includes Rx. 1,355,000 to meet arrear charges of the current year likely to be adjusted in 1898-99, and expenditure on account of the Tirah Expeditionary Force for next year, calculated on the supposition that the existing force will be in the field till the end of June. But if the operations are speedily brought to a close, there will be a saving of expenditure amounting to about 16¼ lakhs. This comparatively small reduction is owing to the necessity for keeping a certain force on a field footing, and for extra transport. The sum named above, Rx. 1,519,100, includes Rx. 160,900 on account of the temporary increase of the Malakand and Tochi Garrisons for three months, and the retention of a force, somewhat larger than the original garrisons, on the Kohat-Samana-Kurram border.

10. The other minor increases are as follows:—Under Grant 4, Commissariat, Rx. 20,000 to provide for an increased establishment of Commissariat-Transport officers. This is only a small portion of the expenditure required, but it has been recognised that we require more officers in this department, and that it is desirable to make a beginning in the needed improvements, especially in the transport service, as soon as possible. The details of the plan for increasing the Commissariat-Transport staff are not yet all approved, but no time will be lost. The larger question of improving the transport service has also been taken in hand; Rx. 14,200 for increased number of mules to be purchased, and Rx. 6,800 for dairies; Rx. 10,800 under Grant 5, Remounts, caused by larger provision for purchase of remounts and ordnance mules; Rx. 21,800 under Grant 6, Clothing, for increased clothing supplies, and claims for compensation; Rx. 10,000 under

Grant 10 for continuing the conversion of the equipment of the batteries of the field army to that suitable for the 15-pounder projectiles. The present gun has to be supplied with a new vent to admit of cordite being fired instead of black powder, and the limbers and wagons have to be altered to carry the new ammunition. Under the non-effective grants we have an increase of Rx. 27,400 for extra pensionary allowances in consequence of wounds received in action and casualties during the North-West Frontier operations, and Rx 11,500 for war medals. Under Grant 15 an increased capitation allowance of R10 annually for each efficient member of mounted volunteer corps has been sanctioned, as service in the mounted corps involves a greater personal outlay than that in other volunteer corps, and provision has been made accordingly in the estimates of 1898-99.

11. The more important causes of decrease are as under :—

In consequence of better rates of exchange, we anticipate a saving of Rx. 98,800 for exchange compensation allowance, and Rx. 129,500 for pay of British troops. The fall in prices of food supplies for men and animals account for a decrease of Rx. 272,600, while the provision in the Indian Estimates has been reduced to the extent of Rx. 64,900 in consequence of provision existing in the home estimates for expenditure on Commissariat and Ordnance stores.

12. Among the minor causes of decrease may be mentioned a saving of Rx. 20,000 in consequence of Indian Native troops having been sent to Mombassa, the charges for which will be borne by Her Majesty's Government ; Rx. 14,800 in consequence of the withdrawal of two Native infantry regiments from Burma and some reduction of mounted infantry in that province ; Rx. 12,700 owing to there being fewer unemployed officers, and fewer Colonel's allowances to meet. Under Grant 4, "Commissariat," the expenditure on malt-liquor will be about Rx. 29,500 less in consequence of reduced price under a new contract, and smaller demands, as troops will be on field service for a portion of the year ; the expenditure on movements of troops and stores, purchase of equipment and other Commissariat miscellaneous expenditure is expected to be less by Rx. 34,500, chiefly in consequence of troops being still on field service. The use of the river routes between Benares, Silchar, and Dibrugarh will result in a saving of Rx. 3,000 per annum. Under Grant 10, "Ordnance," we expect a reduction of expenditure to the extent of Rx. 41,200 for ordnance stores and camp equipage. The closing during the winter months of convalescent depots in the hills is productive of a saving of Rx. 3,000, while the annual provision of Rx. 10,000 for camps of exercise has been reduced by Rx. 2,000.

The re-construction of Native Infantry Lines has been steadily progressing, and we allot a sum of Rx. 8,064 for this work in 1898-99.

13. The receipts during 1898-99 are expected to be Rx. 18,400 more than the amount in the Budget Estimates for 1897-98, chiefly in consequence of recoveries for issues of rations and forage, on payment, to officers and others on field service.

14. The net result is that the Budget Estimates for 1898-99 are Rx. 1,096,500 in excess of the Estimates of 1897-98. It is necessary, however, to observe that this is almost entirely due to the field operations. The increased expenditure under this head and for special services of a like nature amounts to Rx. 1,519,100, while the provision for increased advantages to the British soldier is, as already stated, Rx. 200,000. But for the expenditure under these heads there would have been a saving of Rx. 622,600.

15. A statement is appended showing the net amounts under each of the 20 Grants for effective and non-effective services.

* The bulk of subscriptions of officers to Indian Military Service Family Pensions is received in India, while most of the expenditure is incurred at home. The receipts in India, therefore, exceed the expenditure in India, and hence, as the figures in the above statement are net, there must be a minus entry.

II.—Home (India) Military Estimates.

The second of the Estimates with which the Military Department is concerned is the Home Estimate for army effective and non-effective charges. The Home Budget Estimates for 1897-98 amounted to £4,353,400, and the Revised Estimates to £4,312,000.

The saving of £41,400 in the Revised, as compared with the Budget Estimates for 1897-98, is due to reduced payments on account of the furlough allowances of the British and Indian Services, less payments for the Indian Troop Service, and reductions in the non-effective charges for pensions of retired officers of the Indian Service.

2. The charges for 1898-99 are estimated at £4,469,300, viz.:—

Effective charges	1,998,500
Non-effective charges	2,475,800

The effective charges include payments to the War Office in respect of the British forces serving in India, amounting, as estimated in the coming year, to £721,000, as against £729,000 in the Estimates for 1897-98. These charges are based on the capitation rate of £7-10 per man serving in India, with the addition of the charge for deferred pay issued to British soldiers on discharge, or transfer to the reserve. The other items included in the effective charges are furlough allowances and pay during the voyage of British forces serving in India (£108,000); furlough allowances of officers of the Indian Service (£230,000); Indian Troop Service (£267,600); miscellaneous (£20,000); passage of officers and troops, otherwise than in transports (£19,000) and stores for India (£627,900).

3. The non-effective charges are made up of the retired pay, etc., of the British forces in respect of their service in India (£517,000); the pay of non-effective Colonels of Royal Artillery (£24,800); while the pay and pensions of non-effective and retired officers of the Indian Service amount to £1,820,000; the miscellaneous pensions to £84,000; and the Indian Military Service Family Pensions to £30,000.

4. There is an increase of £115,900 in the Budget Estimates of 1898-99 as compared with the Budget Estimate of 1897-98, but since the Estimate of 1898-99 has closed, we have decided to defer the supply of certain stores to the value of £41,223, for which provision is included in the Estimate of 1898-99. The estimated home expenditure will be reduced accordingly by £41,223 next year, so that the difference between the two Estimates will be practically reduced to £74,677. There will also be a reduction on account of the cessation of deferred pay, but that cannot now be estimated.

The increased expenditure in 1898-99 includes a sum of £38,200 on account of probable expenditure on stores required to replace issues made for field operations in India; heavier payments are anticipated on account of passages of officers and troops, otherwise than in transports, owing mainly to the engagement of smaller transports than in 1897-98.

The figures of actual expenditure in 1896-97, of the Budget and Revised Estimates for 1897-98, and of the Budget Estimate for 1898-99, are given below in detail for convenience of comparison :—

III.—Military Works Estimates.

Excluding English expenditure and exchange, the Budget Estimate for 1897-98 amounted to Rx. 1,207,300; the revised estimate of expenditure amounts to Rx. 1,065,800. There has, therefore, been less expenditure in India of Rx. 141,500; of this Rx. 11,700 has been reappropriated to "Special Defences—Armaments;" Rx. 51,600 has been provided additionally for Home charges for stores.

The lapse is, therefore, Rx. 78,200, due partially to works in the Tochi and at Chitral being in abeyance.

The Revised Estimate includes Rx. 15,100 expended on repairing the damages caused by the earthquake of 12th June 1897.

The Budget Estimate for 1898-99, excluding English expenditure and exchange, amounts to Rx. 1,135,800, or Rx. 71,500 less than that for 1897-98. The difference is mainly due to the fact that in 1897-98 extra funds were provided for frontier works of defence, and that these will now be provided from the ordinary grant.

The heads of the Military Works Estimate are in round figures:—

	Rx.
For original works, including works in progress, and those to be commenced	411,000
„ repairs	353,000
„ establishment	289,000
„ barrack department establishment, supplies, and tools . .	88,000

The new works, 112 in number, including 80 in progress, and 32 not commenced, comprise 20 water-supply works on which Rx. 105,477 is to be spent, provision for works on the frontier of Rx. 30,650, Rx. 19,500 for coast and inland fortifications, the balance being made up of drainage works, hospitals, barracks, and Ordnance, Commissariat, and Marine requirements.

IV.—Marine Estimates.

The net figures of the Budget Estimate of the Royal Indian Marine for 1897-98 were Rx 139,100, the Revised Estimate stands at Rx. 120,400, showing a decrease of Rx. 18,700. This decrease in the net expenditure is caused by excess receipts amounting to Rx. 38,300, partly counterbalanced by increased expenditure to the extent of Rx. 19,600.

2. The excess under receipts is chiefly due to large recoveries from the Home Government in connection with the employment of vessels on Imperial Service.

3. The increases in expenditure (aggregating Rx. 33,700) are chiefly due to smaller recoveries for work on account of other departments, and to recent local purchases of coal for the Bushire and Muscat Depots.

4. The decreases in expenditure (aggregating Rx. 14,100) are principally due to savings in exchange compensation allowance, temporary vacancies, and other items.

5. Taking the decrease against the increase, there is a net increase of Rx. 19,600, and deducting these figures from the increased receipts, Rx. 38,300, the result is a decrease of Rx. 18,700 in the Revised as compared with the Budget Estimate.

6. The net figures of the Marine Budget Estimate for 1898-99 are Rx. 142,500 against Rx. 139,100, the figures of the Budget Estimate for 1897-98, showing an increase of Rx. 3,400 only.

Before allusion is made to the work of the Army Departments under the administrative control of the Military Department, it may be well to show, in a concise form, the strength of the forces put into the field in the North-Western Frontier. If these are totalled up, the number of troops would amount to nearly 70,000. But this would be misleading as, for example, the Tirah Force absorbed a considerable portion of the Mohmand Force, and the Buner Field Force was practically the largest portion of the Malakand Field Force. The highest strength (about 55,000) of troops actually in the field was reached in October. Those who understand what the organisation, equipment, transport, and supply of such forces mean for operations in countries where, in the main, only pack transport can be used, will appreciate the work which had to be done :—

	British officers.	European ranks.	Native ranks.
Tochi Force in the field, from 19th June 1897 to 18th February 1898	190	1,648	5,468
Malakand Field Force in the field, from 30th July 1897 to 4th February 1898	248	2,738	7,435
Mohmand Field Force in the field, from 2nd September 1897 to 6th October 1897 . . .	272	2,658	7,694
Tirah Expeditionary Force in the field, from 3rd September 1897 to date	983	10,880	24,074
Buner Field Force in the field, from 1st January 1898 to 4th February 1898	161	2,156	5,159

The past year has been one of great activity for the departments of the Army in consequence of the demands on their resources resulting from the extensive operations on the North-West Frontier. The Commissariat-Transport Department has been subjected to a specially severe strain, which has been all the more trying in consequence of the paucity of officers. I have already alluded to the provision in the Budget of 1898-99 for an increase in this department, a step of which the necessity has been shown by the events of the last nine months, and the details of which are now being considered.

Commissariat-Transport Department.

The work done by the department has been mainly in connection with the field operations, and the extent to which its resources have been taxed, will perhaps be more easily understood, if it be borne in mind that over 80,000 transport animals were required as compared with about 14,000 animals available from the permanent Government transport maintained, and that during the period of their employment men and animals consumed about 200,000 tons of food supplies (exclusive of firewood), the greater part of which had to be collected and despatched from India.

The ordinary work of the department has also progressed satisfactorily during the year. The bakery classes, which were alluded to last year, have been extended, and this, together with other measures under consideration, will tend to further improve the comfort of British soldiers in India.

Various measures are in train in Burma for the reduction of Commissariat expenditure. The purchase of mules locally instead of importing them from India has resulted in considerable economy, and we now propose to purchase locally bred bullocks for work in Burma.

Army Clothing Department

In the Clothing Department considerable improvements have been effected in the standard of locally manufactured cloths and serges,—a result which is principally due to the expert advice tendered by the department to manufacturers.

In addition to meeting the usual annual demands for clothing, the Army Clothing Factories at Alipore and Madras have during the past year manufactured over 300,000 garments for the army in the field.

Ordnance Department.

I expressed a hope last year in my speech on the financial statement that the experimental manufacture of cordite would shortly commence. The results of the experiment were most satisfactory. In October a reel of Kirkee-made cordite was sent to England to be tested, and the report of the trial, which was received last month from the War Office, encourages us to hope that this important manufacture may be largely developed, and will result both in economy and increased efficiency.

In order to provide a central authority for the expeditious and economical supply of stores to the arsenals and depots in India, the whole of the Ordnance factories have recently been placed under the direct control of the Director-General of Ordnance.

As has been the case with all the Army Departments, the Ordnance Department has been severely taxed during the last nine months to meet the demands of the troops in the field. The troops have been supplied with ammunition and stores without a hitch; the equipment of the batteries of artillery on field service has been simplified and improved, and the British Infantry have been supplied with a cartridge firing a bullet manufactured in India.

Army Remount Department.

In the Remount Department changes have been made with a view to the more convenient location of the reserve of horses, while at the same time all country-bred young stock in Northern India has been collected at one depot. As I noticed last year the purchases of country-bred horses have been somewhat curtailed, in order to ensure a more satisfactory percentage being found fit for mounting British cavalry.

The department has been very successful in meeting all demands resulting from the field operations, with the important exception of Ordnance mules. In this respect the requirement of batteries have indeed been met, but only by issuing animals hardly mature enough for work, and by using a few country-bred horses as a temporary measure. I mentioned last year that the difficulty of obtaining mature mules of the required standards in India would necessitate some purchases of Italian animals. An officer was sent to Italy for this purpose and succeeded in buying 250 mules within the price estimated; but this course is expensive, besides being opposed to our consistent policy of developing Indian resources wherever possible in preference to going abroad. It is therefore proposed to increase our purchases of young mules in India, and by keeping the stock a year or two at the depots, to provide a constant supply of suitable animals fit for immediate work. We hope to be able to obtain some Ordnance mules in Burma for work in that country. The subject of developing mule-breeding in India is receiving earnest consideration.

Medical Department (Medical Store Depots).

In the medical store depots satisfactory progress has been made towards improved mobilisation arrangements; while at the same time the increased requirements of the depots have been met to a greater extent than ever by local manufactures.

The department met the severe strain occasioned by the frontier expeditions with satisfactory promptitude. The Bengal depot alone provided all the stores to complete the equipment of nineteen field hospitals, and on receipt of orders for mobilisation the first hospital, fully equipped, was put on board the train within 24 hours, and eight more hospitals in eight days, besides the despatch of large supplies of drugs, etc., etc. Altogether 36½ field hospitals and two medical store depots were equipped for service from the several depots, together with general hospitals, aggregating 1,400 beds for British and 1,900 beds for Native troops.

Sanitary.

The continued prevalence of enteric fever amongst the British troops has continued to occupy our very serious attention, and in this connection sanction has been given to the appointment of three specially qualified medical officers, whose sole duty shall be to investigate the causes of disease and give advice on sanitary matters.

The Military Works Department has provided 20 Royal Engineer officers for famine duties and 38 for field service, and for the armies in the field has supplied stores, tools, and furniture amounting to 1¾ lakhs in value, and has expended 1½ lakhs on construction of roads.

The Marine Department shows satisfactory work during the year, although the outturn of the Bombay Dockyard has been below the average in consequence of the paralysing effects of plague. The trooping service has been effectually performed and troops have on two occasions been despatched with great expedition to Mombassa. It has been decided to make to each of the officers of the Warren Hastings a special allowance of Rs. 480—a sum corresponding to that which was granted in England to the military officers on board the vessel when she was wrecked. The financial year closes with the departure of Rear-Admiral Sir John Hext, who for fifteen years has administered the Royal Indian Marine with conspicuous success.

EDWIN H. H. COLLEN,

Major-General.

Memorandum on the conclusions of the Conference of 1897 on Railway Extensions in India.

[Supplement to the Financial Statement.]

PRESIDENT:
His Excellency the Viceroy.

MEMBERS:
The Honourable Sir James Westland, K.C.S.I.
The Honourable Mr. A. C. Trevor, C.S.I.
Colonel Sir W. S. S. Bisset, R.E., K.C.I.E., Secy. to the Govt. of India, P. W. Dept.
Colonel T. Gracey, R.E., C.S.I., Director General of Railways.
Lieut.-Col. F. J. Aylmer, R.E., V.C., Offg. Assistant Q.M.G. in India.
Mr. T. W. Holderness, I.C.S., Depy. Secy. to the Govt. of India, R. & A. Dept.
Mr. A. R. Beeber, Offg. Accountant General, P. W. Dept.

SECRETARY:
Mr. G. A. Anderson, Under Secy. to the Govt. of India, P. W. Dept. (Railway Branch).

The Railway Conference of 1897 met at Viceregal Lodge, Simla, on the 20th and 25th of August and the 8th of September 1897, and was constituted as noted in the margin. An additional member—a representative of the Revenue and Agricultural Department—was this year included, in order that the proposals for famine protective railways might be fully and specially considered with reference to the valuable experience afforded by the failure of the monsoon of 1896.

2. About 33 new projects were considered, of which 16 were set aside, 3 were recommended for construction by Branch Line Companies, and 5 for construction by Native States or private promoters without financial assistance. The remaining nine were held over as not yet ripe for a decision.

Those recommended for construction were the following:—

No.	Name.	Length.	Approximate cost omitting 000.	Locality.
		Miles.	Rs.
	I.—BY BRANCH LINE COMPANIES.
1	Nadiad-Kapadvanj . . .	28	8,74	Branch of Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, Bombay.

	TOTAL	283	1,69,96

4. Of the nine lines recommended for construction by, or on the responsibility of, Government, No. 3, the Cooch Behar-Buxa line, has been accepted as urgent, for the reason that it opens up stone supplies, access to which will greatly lessen the cost of the Teesta and Dhurlla bridges and other works in the neighbourhood. Provision has been made for its commencement within the programme, and the work will be pushed on simultaneously with the completion of the line within the limits of Cooch Behar, which is being carried out at the cost of the Durbar, with the assistance of a loan from Government. No. 4 has been estimated for and sanctioned, and should its construction be finally determined on, a place will be found for it, if possible, within the current programme. The remainder are under consideration or negotiation.

5. As was explained last year, the extent to which effect can be given to the recommendations of the Conference in regard to Capital expenditure on railways other than such as are made by Branch Line Companies under the terms of Government of India Resolution No. 514 R.C., dated 17th April 1896, or by Native States or private promoters without financial assistance, is governed by the limitations of a programme covering the three years 1896-97 to 1898-99, and providing, as originally settled, for a total expenditure of Rs. 29,66,00,000 during that period. Of this sum Rs. 8,65,87,000 were expended up to the end of the first year 1896-97, leaving Rs. 21,00,13,000 for expenditure in 1897-98 and 1898-99, out of which Rs. 10,13,00,000 were provided in the Budget for the year 1897-98. It was recognized, however, that with every wish to work up to the original programme the possibility of doing so must, under the special circumstances of the time, be a question of ways and means, and in consequence of the depletion of the cash balances and the heavy war expenditure, superadded to other demands, it was found necessary to cut down the grants for the current year by a crore leaving the grant at Rs. 9,13,00,000, and to recommend to the Secretary of State a reduction of 1¾ crores in the total contemplated expenditure up to the end of 1898-99. The operations of the Department and of the Railway Companies have been further affected by the disturbance caused by the restrictions on expenditure which it was found necessary as above explained to impose in the course of the year, by the non-delivery of material owing to the Engineering Strikes in England and by other causes, with the result that this year's expenditure is now estimated at Rs. 8,41,44,000 only, leaving a balance of Rs. 10,83,69,000 out of the reduced programme of Rs. 27,91,00,000 for which provision has been made in the Budget for 1898-99.

The reduction in the total amount of the programme, it will be observed, has already been approximately covered by the short expenditure as compared with the original forecast in the year now ending, which has occurred chiefly on the Bengal-Nagpur, the Assam Bengal, the Burma Railways, and in open line expenditure on State Railways.

6. Statement A appended to this memorandum gives the programme as modified up to date and shows also the progress made with such of the lines accepted by Government on the recommendation of the Conference for early construction as have been brought within the programme. The distribution of the amount it shows as available for expenditure in 1898-99, will, of course, be liable to modification according to circumstances.

7. Statements B and C show how matters stand in regard to lines recommended for early construction at the cost of Branch Line Companies, Native States, etc., outside the programme, and either actually taken in hand or under consideration and negotiation with a view to construction: and Statement D summarises the actual and anticipated progress of Railway construction generally for the two years 1897-98 and 1898-99.
